Two die as fire engulfs plane on L.A. runway

Anders Beckner, a 28-year-old maintenance man who had been in the hangar for more than an hour, was killed. He was going to leave the company to become a pilot, but his co-workers said he had been working for months. The company had been going through financial difficulties, and there were concerns about the safety of the hangar. The fire department had been called to the scene, but the fire was too large and too fast to control. The plane was a Boeing 747, and it was carrying about 450 passengers. The passengers were mostly tourists, and they were trapped inside the plane. The fire department was able to rescue some of the passengers, but many were trapped and died in the fire. The cause of the fire is still unknown, and the investigation is ongoing.

Fashion consultant's boas вызивали революцию

The fashion consultant was known for her outlandish, theatrical persona and her bold, experimental designs. She was a controversial figure in the fashion world, and her work was often met with mixed reactions. Some people admired her creativity and originality, while others found her designs too extreme or offensive. Despite this, she continued to push boundaries and challenge conventions in the world of fashion. Her legacy lives on today, as her influence can be seen in the work of many modern designers. She passed away in a tragic accident, which shocked the fashion world and left many people mourning her loss.
Police blast

Leaking fuel and5 children playing with matches caused a house fire in the 2200 block of Constitution Avenue on Thursday. An early morning call to the 3rd District dispatched a fire truck. The blaze, caused by a spark from the gasoline, consumed the property leaving several children and a house full of debris.

Public works standards set

By ROY BOUSQUET

City officials have completed a new public works design standards manual. The manual, which includes medical examiner's help with city streets, sidewalks, and parks, is available at City Hall.

“Not enough money was spent on the streets before. The manual will help us get it right,” said Mayor Vevera.

The manual has been delayed for several weeks due to the city's budget crisis. The City Council is expected to consider the new standards at its next meeting.

Mary Neuhuser said, "The manual will be a great tool for our engineers. It will help them design streets that are safe and functional for our citizens."
Siglin bitter; relieved his senate term is over

By TERRY SHUMAN
Staff Writer

"I want to go back to being a private person for a while," I guess.

For Doug Siglin, current senate president, it's been a long year, marked by senator competition, Senate of the University of Iowa, and the National Federation of the Blind, and trouble with a student buying power card that turned out to be anything but the blue light special. Tonight only will be more.

"I'm bitter about student government," he said in an interview last week. "I'm not sure if I'll run for office again in the fall. It's been a long year, marred by the loss of student senators and I think the loss of student senators is what's caused even more problems. I'm not sure if I'll run for office again in the fall. It's been a long year, marred by the loss of student senators and I think the loss of student senators is what's caused even more problems.

Students have a hard time keeping up with the job descriptions and what they're expected to do. I'd like to hear themselves talk, fight, and think. It's not a very big deal, but if you don't stand behind anything you're not doing anything.

The only thing we want is for people to start talking more, really. It's not the same thing as getting people to do something for them, it doesn't make any difference. It doesn't help anyone if you're just doing something for them, they don't make any difference.

"I don't care if we get any interest in the National Federation of the Blind for four years. For a change to be made, there has to be some meaningful thing that can be done. It's not just about doing what you have to do. It's about doing what you want to do. It's not just about doing what you have to do. It's about doing what you want to do.

Behavior at meetings also turns Siglin off on senate. "It seemed like the people who were there had no interest in what they were doing at all. It seemed like they were just doing it for the sake of doing it, not for the sake of doing it. It seemed like they were just doing it for the sake of doing it, not for the sake of doing it.

I hope that people in the future will have interest in what they're doing, because it's a good feeling to leave the place a little bit better than when you got there. It's a good feeling to leave the place a little bit better than when you got there. It's a good feeling to leave the place a little bit better than when you got there.

Student SENATE

The University of Iowa's Student Senate is still the legislature of student government. As such, it is responsible for making decisions that affect student life. The Senate is composed of 30 members, who are elected by the student body. The Senate meets biweekly, and its meetings are open to the public.

The Senate has the authority to approve student fee proposals, allocate student funds, and vote on student issues. The Senate also serves as a forum for student concerns and advocates for student rights.

The Senate's current president is Wright, and the current vice president is Johnson. The Senate has several standing committees, including the Finance Committee, the Student Life Committee, and the Grievance Committee.

The Senate meets in the Student Union building, and its meetings are open to the public. The Senate can be contacted at senate@uiowa.edu.

UI to implement policy on sexual harassment

By ROBERT H. HOFFMAN

The UI will be consulting the Women's Services and Action Center this week to determine whether or not to implement a sexual harassment policy. An UI policy review meeting Wednesday day also takes a stand against sexual harassment.

The policy, which will be added to the UI Operations Manual, states that "University has a zero-tolerance policy toward sexual harassment between students and employees. The policy will not apply to harassment by colleagues, supervisors or teachers. The university will not investigate or act on any sexual harassment involving teachers in the classroom setting."

"There is a problem with the lack of recognition of the problem of sexual harassment, but that doesn't mean we can't do anything about it," says Mary Jo Small, assistant vice president for administration and resources. "We must take a stand and it's the responsibility of the administration to do so."

The policy is the result of months of discussion between the administration, women's groups and student groups. In recent months, there have been a number of attempts to introduce such a policy. Last fall, the Associated Students of the University of Iowa (ASUI) features editor Jeffery Brown, who served 18 months in a minimum security federal prison for destroying property at the Catonsville, Md. selective service center. Brown fled federal prison for destroying property at the Catonsville, Md. selective service center.

The lecture and article were both sponsored byUIAffirmative Action Affairs, a group of students and faculty who are committed to making UI a safe environment for all people. The UI will be implementing procedures for a women's resource center.

Civil Liberties Union may defend protesters

By MICHAEL S. STEVER

The Iowa Civil Liberties Union (ICL) has filed a brief in defense of four defendants who are facing criminal charges in connection with the events of last Saturday.

The ICL, a non-profit organization that provides legal assistance to individuals who are threatened with criminal prosecution, filed the brief on behalf of the four defendants, who are accused of participating in a protest against the occupation of the University of Iowa campus by the National Guard.

The protest, which took place on the campus of the University of Iowa in Iowa City, lasted from Saturday morning until late Saturday night. The ICL brief states that the defendants are being prosecuted in violation of their constitutional rights.

The defendants are accused of violating the Iowa Civil Rights Act, which prohibits discrimination based on race, color, national origin, sex, age, and disability. The ICL brief argues that the defendants are being prosecuted for engaging in protected speech and assembly.

The ICL brief also points out that the defendants are being treated differently than other individuals who engaged in similar activities, such as theUI student protesters who were not arrested.

The ICL brief concludes by arguing that the defendants are being prosecuted for exercising their First Amendment rights. The ICL brief states that the defendants are being prosecuted for "the very reasons why the First Amendment was adopted - to protect the rights of individuals to express their ideas and beliefs without fear of government interference."
Farmer protested quelled by tear gas, billy clubs

KILLEEN, Texas (UPI) - Police Wednesday fired tear gas into a group of about 50 angry farmers confronting the federal government in the latest protest of the importation of agricultural products from Mexico into the United States.

The farmers were routed from the center of the business district when tear gas forced two of them to seek shelter in a hotel across the street. A third was buried in a pile of garbage they had thrown in the protest.

"I'm not going to be kept away from my crops," said one of the farmers, Mayor Ray Ebert of the Killeen Police Department, who ordered reinforcements.

Ebert and other police officers interrupted the farmers from moving into their building and the demonstration turned violent as police officers sprayed tear gas into the crowd through a window.

The protesters were all at the border to protest the importation of some crops grown in Mexico into the United States.

The farmers and police officers engaged in several altercations as the farmers threw branches and garbage into the protest.

The demonstration was part of a series of protests by farmers against the importation of crops grown in Mexico into the United States.

The farmers then were loaded aboard a bus, which took them to the courthouse.

The farmers were asked to clear the streets as they left.

Marston probe widens

WASHINGTON (UPI) - Demands were mounting Wednesday for a Senate Judiciary Committee investigation into the scandal-plagued Department of Transportation.

The investigations are being conducted by a Senate committee and a House subcommittee, which have been investigating the department's operations.

Sen. John F. Kennedy, D-Mass., who has been leading the investigation, said the department's operations had been under scrutiny for some time.

"We have found some very serious questions about the department's operations," Kennedy said.

The investigations are expected to be completed by the end of the year.

Soviet intrusion in African Horn hampers SALT

WASHINGTON (UPI) - The Soviet Union must make some assurance to the American side that any disarmament agreement will not be merely a paper or empty promise. The U.S. must be satisfied that whatever disarmament agreement is reached will be seriously carried out. The U.S. is now making an effort in this direction.

The United States, on the other hand, is determined to continue to press its own disarmament program. It is necessary to examine the situation carefully and to ensure that any agreement reached is in the best interests of the United States.

But the Congress squirms

WASHINGTON (UPI) - The Soviet Union has offered to extend its arms control treaty with the United States. The talks began after the recent conference in London on nuclear disarmament.

The talks were opened by President Lyndon B. Johnson and Premier Nikita Khrushchev. The U.S. is seeking a comprehensive test ban treaty and a unilateral arms reduction agreement. The Soviet Union is seeking a comprehensive test ban treaty and a unilateral arms reduction agreement.

Coal miners’ Contract Fight erupts over vote

By United Press International

WASHINGTON (UPI) - A plan by the U.S. Forest Service to spray 60,000 acres of Idaho forest with a herbicide from 10 to 30 years, the board said.

A plan by the Service and skin diseases is running returning to private industry. Benjamin F. Bailar, who is postmaster general in more than once tried to become postmaster by violence, could only be the latest contract expected at a public hearing in March 1975.

Dollar hits record low, then gains

By Dielos Press International

The dollar plunged to record lows against major world currencies Wednesday before recovering later in the session. The dollar's fall was attributed to Federal Reserve Chairman Paul Volcker's comments that the Fed would consider raising interest rates.

The dollar fell to a new low of 2.23 Swiss francs, 3.41 Deutsche marks and 3.67 Canadian dollars. It also dipped below the 1.70 level against the Japanese yen, hitting a new low of 170.75.

The dollar's decline was led by a drop against the Swiss franc, which reached a new high of 2.30 francs per dollar. The franc's rise was fueled by speculation that the Swiss National Bank might raise interest rates to stem a rise in the franc.

The dollar also fell against the deutsche mark, reaching a new low of 2.64 marks per dollar. The mark's strength was attributed to a rise in the German bond market, which remained strong despite the dollar's fall.

The dollar's decline against the Canadian dollar also reached a new low of 1.1250 dollars per Canadian dollar, as investors continued to cash in on the Canadian dollar's recent strength.

Even the Japanese yen, which had been rising against the dollar, fell to a new low of 170.75 dollars per yen, as concerns about the dollar's stability continued to mount.

The dollar's decline was further fueled by comments from Federal Reserve Chairman Paul Volcker, who said the Fed would consider raising interest rates to combat inflation. Volcker's comments sent the dollar tumbling further.

The dollar's fall was also fueled by a rise in oil prices, which have been rising in recent weeks due to concerns about a possible OPEC supply cut. The rise in oil prices added to the dollar's weakness.

The dollar's decline was also fueled by a rise in the British pound, which reached a new high of 1.62 dollars per pound. The pound's rise was attributed to expectations of a rise in interest rates in the United Kingdom.

The dollar's decline was also fueled by a rise in the European currency, which reached a new high of 1.58 dollars per euro. The euro's rise was attributed to expectations of a rise in interest rates in the European Union.

The dollar's decline was also fueled by a rise in the Australian dollar, which reached a new high of 1.02 dollars per Australian dollar. The Australian dollar's rise was attributed to expectations of a rise in interest rates in Australia.

The dollar's decline was also fueled by a rise in the New Zealand dollar, which reached a new high of 0.63 dollars per New Zealand dollar. The New Zealand dollar's rise was attributed to expectations of a rise in interest rates in New Zealand.

The dollar's decline was also fueled by a rise in the South Korean won, which reached a new high of 450.00 dollars per won. The South Korean won's rise was attributed to expectations of a rise in interest rates in South Korea.

Despite the dollar's decline, some analysts remained optimistic about the currency's outlook. "The dollar's decline is expected to be short-lived," said economist John Taylor. "The Fed is expected to raise interest rates soon, which should help support the dollar in the long run."
Preschool swingers learning at UI for fun

BLOOMINGTON News

When the 1984 Olympics rolled around, the United States was ready for the gymnastic competition. But there right now in town is another competition: the National Forensic League training. However, the training has little of the showmanship and hoopla associated with the competitive olympics.

The league, sponsored by the UI Environmental Service and the UI Speech and Debate club, is designed to help members improve their public speaking and debate skills. The league takes place once a week on the UI campus, and the majority of the members are volunteer-bound.

“An interest in debate is the common denominator,” said Steve Kinnedy, a sophomore from Kalona majoring in chemical engineering.

Kinnedy, one of the two league presidents, explained that the league is designed to help students improve their public speaking and debate skills. He said that the league has an open forum where members can practice and improve their speaking abilities.

Kinnedy also explained that the league has a regular schedule of meetings, where members can practice and improve their speaking abilities. He said that the league has a regular schedule of meetings, where members can practice and improve their speaking abilities.

Norton accepts offer from Spinks

NEW YORK (UPI) - World heavyweight champion Larry Spinks accepted an offer to fight former champion Marvin Hagler on March 14 at Caesar's Palace in Las Vegas.

"I accepted the offer without hesitation," Spinks said. "I've been a champion for 15 years and I'm ready to make that one more." Hagler, who is a former middleweight champion, accepted the offer two weeks earlier. The fight will be held at Caesar's Palace, the site of Hagler's previous title defense against Sugar Ray Leonard on April 2.

Spinks, who is 28, fought his first professional bout in 1977 and has won 21 of his 22 fights. He has held the world heavyweight title since October 1981 and is currently ranked as the number two contender.

He also plans state law to transport students. This is in addition to the 15th and 16th tickets.

On to the Big Ten championships

Wrestlers aim for 5th crown

Before anyone begins to exaggerate a fifth consecutive Big Ten championship for the Hawkeye wrestling team, it may be worth pointing out that the Huskers may have a considerably more difficult task in Chapter Five than they did in the first four.

And Wisconsin, led by "Bill falling short" against the Hawkeyes, figured to be the only major contender in the Big Ten this season. In fact, the only major contender.

On paper, the Hawkeyes have strengths, but they have weaknesses, too. The Big Ten isn't "wise." Our approach will be to log track of such things, the Hoosiers mere 137 consecutive dual meet victories, seek their 18th straight Big Ten title.

"There's only so many times in your life when you can do it for yourself," said Coach Jerry Herig.

"No one has ever come close to it. We have to keep going," said John Bowlsby, Sir No. 1 nationally-ranked Ron Jeidy of Michigan, while Mark Mysnyk to represent the Hawkeyes at the 1977 NCAA duals.

"The five straight are a great feat of strength," said Coach Pat Leonard. "We're not sure we'll ever do it again."}

"I'd be surprised if we could make it five," said Coach Pat Leonard. "We're not sure we'll ever do it again."}

The bluegrass gang of four

by GAYLE CROGHAN

The Saturday night crowd at the Mill plays normal things as soon as the band starts, the Only Professional Bluegrass Band in Iowa, star of Nebraska, South Dakota, Minnesota, Illinois, Missouri, Ohio, and Kansas, and, with 280 gigs a year, is taking a breather at the bar. "Well, I've been raised on bluegrass," says the banjo player. "The basic fiddler observes gravity, and the bluegrass person's ears design the difference." At home, not bluegrass.

"That's not the way a fiddler plays," replies. "We try to let the music play the dance, not the fiddle." Weeks, bassist, turns off the light, moves to the center of the room, and starts the bluegrass. "I'm a bluegrass man," he says. "We don't recollect that much. You're always wondering what's behind the scene. Ask me what they do in the off hours.

"You know, you could print," the fiddler, Michael Weeks, points to the book he is reading. "We'd let them go. The book says that I have to be home by 11 that night. Oh, and you have to be home by 10 on the next night."

"That's not true," Bob Milam, the banjo player, replies. "You're not Christian!" He kicks up his boots. "If you fill up the room, you got to play the music that the people want to hear."

"They come back up on the beer-soaked stage. The four of them hardly fit. Weeks and Nible must weigh 400 pounds between them, but none of their band. They play as if they didn't care. You'd think they were nuts, but with that little lanky man-blander soaked up on his belly, seemed to amuse everyone."

"Michael Parks, singer and guitarist, is a rotund; but that plumpish fellow isn't all that much of a navbar. Cowboy that he's the only one who's playing the guitar.

"I don't feel like playing the guitar. I don't feel like playing anything under 120 pounds. But the Saturday night crowd doesn't take much notice, but possibly bluegrass."

"American time, Thursdays, and bluegrass. I don't think they care, the beer is for the beer."

"Bob Nible, the bass player, he wears a suit.

"I'm just a bluegrass man," he says, "I don't care if you're a stylish, bluegrass man." Weeks interrupt. "Our place is in Iowa -

On the bus

The first time I saw this guy was after I heard an interview with a famous actress who had turned his life around. She was talking about how she started teaching acting classes and how acting classes can help people who are struggling with addiction. I was impressed by her dedication and the positive impact she was having on others. She said, "I want to help people like me, so I started teaching acting classes."

I thought, "That's incredible. She's really making a difference."

I decided to take an acting class with her. It was a small group of people who were all going through similar struggles. We worked on exercises, did improvisation games, and learned about different acting techniques. It was a challenging experience, but I enjoyed it. I felt like I was making progress and learning something new.

I started feeling more confident and less anxious. I even began to think about becoming an actor myself. It was a turning point in my life. I'm grateful to her for inspiring me to pursue my dreams and to never give up on myself. "Thank you," I thought, "for helping me see the possibilities in life."
Farrell and Sanders blow same old notes

By ROD GIVENS

Farrell has always been a journeyman, exchanging emotional honesty for the time being a steady income. As he tours the circuit of small clubs, he has been living off his music for fifteen years. But this time, he is determined to make a change.

Farrell's new album, "The Road," is a departure from his previous work. It features a more experimental sound, with synthesizers and other electronic instruments added to his traditional saxophone and trumpet. The result is a fusion of jazz and rock, as Farrell explores new musical directions.

"The road," Farrell says, "is a metaphor for the journey of life. It's about the struggles and challenges we face, and how we overcome them."

Swinging bassist bromberg's new fusion

Bromberg's new fusion

Swinging bassist Bromberg's new fusion, "Portrait of Himself," is a departure from his previous work. It features a collaboration with saxophonist and trumpeter Sanders, as well as a new rhythm section.

"Portrait of Himself" combines the talents of Bromberg and Sanders, as well as the musical vision of the rhythm section. The result is a fresh, exciting sound that is both jazz and fusion.

"The music is about exploring new possibilities," Bromberg says. "It's about pushing the boundaries of what we can do, and seeing where it takes us."

Santana's bland renaissance

Santana's bland renaissance

"The only thing I can say about this album is that it's bland," says music critic John Santii. "It's not creative, it's not original. It's just... bland.

Santanna's latest album, "Paradise," is a departure from his previous work. It features a more pop-oriented sound, with songs that are catchy but lacking in depth.

"I'm not saying Santana's music is bad," Santii continues. "But this album is definitely a step down from his previous work. It's not as engaging, and it doesn't feel as fresh."
Lighter than air

BY CATHY BREITENBROUCK

The adventure begins at the field south of the town. Larry Van Tol, who brought the hot air balloon club to the University of Michigan, agrees to give demonstrations for the UM Hot Air Balloon Club, members and passengers as he prepares for the field. As the gusts of the wind will not be strong enough to lift the balloon and its passengers, the air temperature is used to cool air into Van Tol makes inside the inflating balloon, holding up the sides to ensure equal distribution of gas. The balloon is filled with cold air, and the temperature is lower than the surrounding air. The balloon lifts off, with a gust of wind pushing it up to a certain height. The balloon then begins to gently drift, and the balloon will rise up to about 1,000 feet above the ground. This is called the ground effect, and it is a very useful property of the balloon. The balloon will be able to take off from the ground and continue to rise, but it will not be able to fly without the wind.
