The (un)welcome sign; Corvalle plans action

By DAVID CLAYTON

The city of Coralville is preparing to open a new sign that the Iowa Department of Transportation (DOT) has ordered to be removed from its location near the Coralville water tower on Institute St.

The sign is located on the city's border with eastern Linn County. It promotes a new development, the "Corvalle," which is under construction. Although it is a business promotion, it is unusual to have such a sign on a public road.

The sign has been a source of controversy for some time. Some residents have expressed concern about its location, while others have praised it as a positive local development.

Despite efforts to remove the sign, it continues to remain on the property. The city has requested that the sign be moved, but the DOT has not yet acted on the request.

The city of Coralville is seeking legal advice on how to proceed with the removal of the sign. In the meantime, the sign remains in place.

KATHLEEN DEPROSE, City Council member, says the addition to the Library is "a hopeful step." She says the council will ask for a building permit for the construction of the addition. The permit will only allow for 40,000 square feet of building.

The city council is expected to vote on the permit at its next meeting on Nov. 14.

DeProsse says the permit would allow for the construction of a new building on the property next to the library.

The city council is also expected to vote on the permit for the construction of an addition to the library.

Letters

To the Editor:

Killer whales (and other cetaceans) will be at the heart of our energy problems. They have our place on the棋子 board. They are the ones who are going to reap the benefits and the harm. They have the potential to be used as a weapon of mass destruction. The problem is that the oceans are not our resource. They are not under our control. We can't just assume that they will be the ones who get killed in this war. The oceans are a living system and we need to respect them. We need to work towards a system where we can coexist peacefully with the oceans and other marine life.

Help clean up the town

To the Editor:

Where all the fantastical Iowa energy ga is that you've heard about everywhere because you're in a state that doesn't have any energy problems? Iowa? Iowa has a wide array of energy options, from coal to solar to wind. However, there is one particular interest group that has been doing its best to keep Iowa's unique energy landscape out of the public eye. The town of Eldora is the latest to join the growing list of cities that have been grappling with energy issues. With a population of just under 3,000 people, Eldora is a small town with a big problem:

To the Editor:

This is an open letter to David Decker and anyone in the Duquesne Light Company, supporting the selection of the Colorado Mayor, Mr. George Gessling, to serve as our next mayor. We, as a group, have long been concerned about the lack of political representation in our community. We believe that Mr. Gessling is the right choice for our next mayor, and we are excited about the positive changes that we hope he will bring to our town.

American's first war was in 1945, when the United States dropped atomic bombs on Hiroshima and Nagasaki. This was the first time in history that an atomic bomb was ever used in warfare. The bombs were dropped on two Japanese cities, killing about 140,000 people. The United States government wanted to show that it had the power to end a war quickly.

Area farmers laud bill's defeat

By TOM DEBY, Solon

The U.S. House defeat of the Dole-Talmadge farm bill was an appalling blow to agriculture, especially to farmers in the Iowa countryside, where the bill was widely supported.

In the debate last week on the farm bill, Rep. Dan Lacina of lowd-Iowa, introduced a more flexible modest proposal to raise corn loan rates, which would have given farmers and consumers more parity. "They would have given farmers and consumers more room to get knocked in the head, but it reached his desk, and many farmers and consumers more room to get knocked in the head," Lacina said. "People..."

The bill was a political ploy, and many farmers and consumers more room to get knocked in the head. Critics of the Dole bill, and Sen. Dick Clark, D-Iowa, introduced a more sensible in the foreign grain market and have farmers pay restrictively high prices for feed grain. The "bill would have been better if farmers and consumers more room to get knocked in the head."

Idi Amin got illegal gift from airline, SEC says

WASHINGTON (UPI) - The Securities and Exchange Commission Thursday charged Amin with an illegal transaction that directly benefited him, although he was barred from trading in U.S. securities.

The SEC said Amin received an item from Pan American World Airways, Inc., a no-fly list company, which is based in New York City. The SEC also alleged that Amin concealed his receipt of the item from Pan American, which is a no-fly list company, in Washington, D.C.

The SEC said Amin also made improper payments to government officials in connection with the sale to the United States of a no-fly list company, which is based in New York City. The SEC said Amin's improper payments continued in 1976 when he paid a bribe to Pan American officials in order to have him designated as a no-fly list company. The SEC also alleged that Amin concealed his receipt of the item from Pan American, which is a no-fly list company, in Washington, D.C.

BERLIN, West Germany (UPI) - Following subject committee recommendations, President Frank-Walter Steinmeier of the Social Democratic Party, the government's largest opposition party, said Thursday that he will not back out of a decision to approve the construction of additional warheads in the German nuclear arsenal, despite growing opposition to the decision among the German public.

Travel v. Perme

WASHINGTON (UPI) - A federal judge today tossed aside an attempted suit by a Washington woman seeking to have her husband's Virginia marriage annulled.

The judge ruled that the woman lacked standing to bring the suit because she was not a party to the marriage and had no legal interest in the outcome.

The case, filed by a woman who had married her husband in Virginia, had been heard by the federal court in Washington, D.C.

It was the latest in a series of similar cases in which courts have rejected attempts to annul marriages contracted in other states.

The woman, who had moved to the District of Columbia to work, had claimed that her marriage was invalid because her husband had misrepresented his age at the time of their marriage.

The judge ruled that the woman lacked standing to bring the suit because she was not a party to the marriage and had no legal interest in the outcome.
Travel woes

Penny wise, dollar foolish

BY MARK GORANSON

The story of the U.S. dollar in Europe is one of décadence, to use a French word, and it seems many Americans planning to travel abroad to Paris know this before leaving. But how often do they act on it?

Less than 300 people had just booked an all-day trip to the Statue of Liberty on a Wednesday morning when they encountered the first of many staff shortages. The day after they arrived, they were offered the same trip for $20 off, but for a swanky restaurant near the hotel instead. They declined. The next day, the same trip for $20 off, but in New York, they said no. The next day, the same trip for $20 off, but the French, they said yes. It was always the French.

According to Deycke, there's been an increase in the number of people coming to travel abroad due to the declining value of the U.S. dollar. Americans are also spending more on travel expenses before leaving on a trip.

Deycke explained that the number of travelers leaving for Europe has increased in the past few years. "I think that the dollar's depreciation is not the only reason for people to travel abroad. It's also because of the weaker dollar, which benefits travelers." Deycke said.

"The decline in the value of the dollar has led to an increase in the number of travelers going abroad to Europe," she explained. "And the French are always a popular destination for Americans." Deycke said.

On Thursday, breakfast at Festival Seating started at 8:30 a.m. But by Thursday, breakfast at Festival Seating started at 9 a.m. and the French were no longer a popular destination for Americans. Deycke said.

"It seems that the French are becoming less popular as a travel destination," Deycke said.

By ROY ODAY

Furt, fiction and legal issues will dominate a Court of Inquiry called by the National Commission to investigate the fall from grace of Robert Paul Reems, who is a featured performer in the pornographic film "Deep Throat," an incident which made him a household word.

The investigation will be conducted by an 11-person panel, which will be headed by Leon Jaworski, U.S. Attorney for the Southern District of Texas.

The inquiry, which will begin next month, is expected to last until the fall of this year, and will focus on a number of legal, moral and technical issues surrounding the film, which has been the subject of much controversy in recent months.

The inquiry will examine the legal status of the film, the question of whether it is obscene and the extent to which it should be regulated by the government.

The inquiry will also consider the role of government in regulating the film industry, including the impact of government regulations on the freedom of expression.

The inquiry will be conducted in a confidential manner, with all testimony taken under oath and all documents treated as confidential.

The panel will be composed of law enforcement officials, legal experts and representatives of various organizations concerned with the film industry.

The inquiry will be expected to issue its findings and recommendations by the end of the year.
