Korea faces aid cutoff

WASHINGTON (UPI) - South Korea said Wednesday it will endorse an embargo on American goods to retaliate against the United States' aid cutoff measures.

The decision was made at a meeting of the national council for trade affairs that President Park Chung Hee's government established to respond to the U.S. embargo.

Park, who announced the embargo plan Tuesday, said the council's decision that the government will endorse the embargo is final and that there would be no further discussion.

The council's decision to endorse the embargo follows Park's promise to the people Tuesday that he would not bow to the U.S. embargo.

The embargo, introduced by the U.S. government last week, is aimed at forcing the South Korean government to allow Washington to station military troops in South Korea.

The council's endorsement of the embargo means that South Korea will stop imports from the United States and begin producing its own goods, according to officials.

The officials said the council's decision was reached after it was decided that South Korea should not proceed based on the U.S. administration's view that the aid cutoff would lead to an improvement in the South Korean economy.

The council's decision is based on the view that South Korea should not allow the aid cutoff to affect its own economy and that the embargo is necessary to maintain the country's independence.

The council's decision is also based on the view that South Korea should not allow the aid cutoff to affect its own economy and that the embargo is necessary to maintain the country's independence.
Greenland votes to ration alcohol, submit to VD test

Greenland, a Nordic country with a small population, has decided to submit to a voluntary VD test and control alcohol consumption by rationing. The move is in line with the country's efforts to improve public health and combat alcoholism.

The referendum, which was held to gauge the public's support for alcohol rationing, resulted in a significant majority in favor of the proposal. Greenland's neighbors, particularly Denmark, have already implemented similar policies to control alcohol consumption and improve public health outcomes.

The new alcohol rationing system is expected to be implemented within the next few months, with detailed regulations to be announced shortly. The government has also assured the public that the measures will be monitored closely to ensure their effectiveness.

The move has been welcomed by health experts and local politicians, who hope it will lead to a reduction in alcohol-related health problems and improve overall public health outcomes.

carry the stiff sentence of two years in prison and a $10,000 fine.

"That's what I've been trying to do." Grant said. "I've been looking for the chance to speak the truth to those who are the victims of this system.

It is interesting to note that Joe Grant's political philosophy and that of many other workers throughout the United States share the underlying assumption that the political system is a self-serving tool that serves the wealthy few. Joe Grant was one of the leaders in the early days of the Teamsters Union, which was founded in 1933. The union was formed to protect the rights of workers and ensure fair wages and working conditions.

As for the next generation, Joe Grant's daughter is now leading the charge. She is a strong advocate for workers' rights and has been involved in numerous protests and demonstrations. Her work has been recognized by fellow activists, who have praised her for her courage and dedication.

The Teamsters Union, under the leadership of Joe Grant, has a storied history of fighting for workers' rights. From the 1930s to the present day, the union has been at the forefront of organizing workers in the transportation industry, among other sectors. Joe Grant was a true leader in the fight for workers' rights, and his legacy continues to inspire activists today.

Elected president of the union in 1981, Fitzsimmons is facing challenges from another reform group to end the Fitzsimmons era working in the publishing business and attending Boston University. The Mississippi-Baton Rouge University Student Union was the first group on the left to challenge the political activities of the Administration. That was in the early 1960s. A group of students led by a young man named Joe Grant was protesting against the Vietnam War. Joe Grant was involved in a protest that ended with the arrest of several students, including Joe Grant himself. This was a pivotal moment for Joe Grant and for the Mississippi-Baton Rouge University Student Union. It marked the beginning of Joe Grant's political career and his commitment to fighting for workers' rights.

After the Navy hitch, Grant moved to Cedar Rapids, Iowa, to work in radio and television until 1960, when he was drafted into the Army and sent to the Pacific. Joe Grant was also involved in the anti-war movement during this time. He was one of the founders of the anti-war group, the Committee to Stop the War in Vietnam. This group organized protests and demonstrations against the war, and Joe Grant was a key figure in these efforts.

Joe Grant was also involved in the civil rights movement. In 1964, he worked as a reporter for the Cedar Rapids, Iowa, newspaper. He covered the Freedom Summer campaign, which was an effort to register African American voters in Mississippi. Joe Grant was one of several reporters who covered the campaign, and his coverage of the event was widely praised.

Joe Grant was also involved in the prison reform movement. In 1970, he was charged with burning down a prison in Cedar Rapids, Iowa. Joe Grant was a strong supporter of prison reform and was committed to improving the conditions of prisoners. He worked with the Iowa Prison Reform Project, which was organized to fight for better conditions in state prisons.

Joe Grant was also involved in the peace movement. In the 1960s and 1970s, he was a key figure in the peace movement, which was dedicated to ending the war in Vietnam and promoting peace. Joe Grant was a strong advocate for nuclear disarmament and was involved in numerous protests and demonstrations against nuclear weapons.

Joe Grant was also involved in the worker's rights movement. He was a strong advocate for fair wages and working conditions and was involved in numerous protests and demonstrations against employers who were not treating their workers fairly.

Joe Grant was a true leader of the working class and a champion of workers' rights. His legacy continues to inspire activists today, and he is remembered as one of the most important figures in the fight for workers' rights.

FNII destroyed evidence, charges indicted ex-agent

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A former top FBI official indicted on espionage, wire-tapping and conspiracy charges has been ordered to pay $2.9 million in restitution to the Justice Department to cover the investigative costs of the case.

The former official, John Doe, had been charged with stealing classified information from the FBI and passing it to a foreign power. He was also charged with wire-tapping and conspiracy.

The court ruled that Doe should pay $2.9 million in restitution to cover the investigative costs of the case.

In addition, the court ordered Doe to serve 25 years in prison.

The case involves a plot to steal classified information from the FBI and pass it to a foreign power. The plot was discovered when an FBI agent noticed that Doe had been accessing classified information on a regular basis.

The FBI agent then began to monitor Doe's movements and communications, and eventually discovered the plot.

Doe was arrested and charged with stealing classified information from the FBI and passing it to a foreign power. He was also charged with wire-tapping and conspiracy.

The court ruled that Doe should pay $2.9 million in restitution to cover the investigative costs of the case.

In addition, the court ordered Doe to serve 25 years in prison.
Jurisdiction snap strips widower of widow

WASHINGTON—1 P.M. At least one woman, who was electrocuted on the job at a Radio Shack store, died Wednesday at the age of 50.

For years, she was involved in a number of different cases, but had not worked on anything since she had retired from the Justice Department. She was the youngest of the two sisters, both of whom died in the line of duty.

She was a longtime employee of the Justice Department and had been working at the same time. She had been a member of the staff since 1976, serving in several different capacities.

She was the younger sister of a former Justice Department official who had been killed in the line of duty. She had been a dedicated employee for many years and had been honored by the department for her service.

She leaves behind a husband, two children, and a sister. Services will be held at 2 p.m. next Saturday at the Justice Department.

Bell okay steel merger

WASHINGTON—(Special to The Record)—Attorney General Walter Brown, Jr., today recommended that the Steelworkers' merger with the National Association of Manufacturers be approved.

Brown said the $6 billion merger, which was announced last week, would be a good move for the steel industry.

"This merger is a positive step for the steel industry," Brown said in a statement. "It will create a stronger, more competitive company that will be better able to compete in the global market.

The merger will also create job opportunities and improve working conditions for steelworkers throughout the country.

"I urge the Antitrust Division of the Justice Department to review this merger carefully and to reach a decision that is in the best interest of the steel industry and its workers.

"In the meantime, the Steelworkers' merger with the National Association of Manufacturers is approved.

"I am confident that this merger will be approved by the Justice Department and will be a positive step for the steel industry."

Physician's assistants may fill doctor gap

by ROY L. JOHNSON

In an effort to alleviate doctor shortage problems and possibly reduce medical costs, physician's assistants (PAs) have become an important part of the medical scene in recent years. Those entering the field represent a younger group of people comparing favorably to older physicians, according to the University of Iowa's Medical Assistant Program.

The program is a two-year course of instruction designed to prepare individuals for careers as physicians' assistants. The program is being offered in the Department of Medicine, Oliver said, and when completed, PAs are eligible to sit for a national examination for certification as a physician's assistant.

Oliver said a third to recent graduates are increasing the popularity among doctors resulting in a demand for the program.

A remunerative career is possible if all Iowans are employed in rural communities.

Nesbitt tells AMA: Heal thyself

ST. LOUIS (7/12) — The new president of the American Medical Association, Dr. Tom H. Nesbitt, said Wednesday doctors should do more to heal the illness that bedevils their own profession — the cost of medical care.

"If we are to lead the nation to affordable health care, we must first bring health care costs under control," Nesbitt said.

The AMA has tried to do so in the past, but "it is time for the profession to be more aggressive in this area," Nesbitt said.

"A healthy physician is a responsible physician," he added. "And physicians should not see their work as a limited service to others. They have a responsibility to themselves, their practices, and their patients."

Argentina, Holland in Cup final

Argentina qualified for the final by beating Uruguay 2-1 in the semi-final. The match was highlight by a stunning goal from Mario Kempes in the second half, which sealed Argentina's place in the final.

Holland on the other hand, qualified by beating West Germany 3-2. The match was a thriller, with both teams playing some of their best football. Holland's forward line was particularly impressive, with the likes of Ruud Gullit and Marco van Basten scoring goals to secure their place in the final.

Saturday matches:

- Argentina vs. Brazil, 3 pm
- Netherlands vs. Holland, 7 pm

The matches will be played at the city of Buenos Aires, with Argentina and Brazil facing off in the semi-final and the Netherlands and Holland in the other. The final will be held on Sunday, with the winner going on to represent Latin America in the World Cup.
