City police Lt. Mike Dennis, who received a letter last week from Mayor Art Peppino urging him to support the mayor in the case of a proposed federal criminal investigation, has resigned.

"I have had a lot of things said to me and I have seen a lot of things occur here that I can't stand," Dennis, a 17-year veteran of the force, said in an interview. "I have had to organize a political campaign to support the mayor. They want to destroy the mayor."

Dennis said Peppino, who is now mayor, had been given a chance to improve the police department, but he had not taken advantage of it.

"The mayor is going to have to answer for what he has done," Dennis said. "He is going to have to face the facts."

Minnesota Democrat conservative downs liberal

By United Press International

Conservative millionaire Bob Stuart was the Democratic nominee for the 1st Robert B. Hannegan, the 7th District House seat, in the national primary election. His victory clinched the Democratic nomination for the seat.

Stuart, who was born in Minneapolis, was the son of a farmer. He attended the University of Minnesota and later went on to study law at Harvard University.

Stuart has been active in politics for many years. He was a member of the Minnesota Legislature from 1955 to 1961. He served as the Democratic-Farmer-Labor Party's nominee for governor in 1958 and 1960.

Stuart's campaign was supported by wealthy donors, including wealthy businessman Ed Bass.

Stuart's victory means that he will face Republican nominee John Ostlund in the general election. Ostlund is a businessman and former state senator.

The 1st District was won by 10,000 votes for Stuart, who won 60% of the vote. Ostlund received 40% of the vote.

Stuart's victory was seen as a significant upset for the Democratic-Farmer-Labor Party, which had previously held the seat.

Stuart's campaign was characterized by a focus on fiscal responsibility and limited government. He pledged to cut taxes and reduce government spending.

In contrast, Ostlund's campaign was focused on economic development and job creation. He pledged to create jobs and increase the state's economy.

The victory was seen as a sign of the changing political landscape in Minnesota, with voters favoring candidates who emphasized fiscal responsibility and limited government.

Stuart's victory also demonstrated the power of wealthy donors in Minnesota politics. Bass, a wealthy businessman, supported Stuart's campaign with a significant financial contribution.

Stuart's victory was also seen as a sign of the changing political landscape in Minnesota, with voters favoring candidates who emphasized fiscal responsibility and limited government.

Garbage from heaven

In 1988, seven years earlier, a radio show that aired the day after the launch of the Intelsat 4 satellite, an event that would come to be known as the “Garbage from Heaven,” aired a segment discussing the potential dangers of satellite debris. The show, called “The Garbage from Heaven” by the late John Denver, featured discussions on the dangers of space junk and the need for regulatory action to prevent further explosions and debris in orbit.

The segment highlighted the risk of collisions between satellites and space debris, which could result in the creation of new debris that would pose a threat to future missions. The show also featured interviews with scientists and engineers who were working on solutions to the problem, including the development of new materials and the implementation of new policies to prevent collisions.

The Garbage from Heaven segment was a precursor to the legal and regulatory actions that would later be taken to address the issue of space debris. In the years following the show, numerous agreements and policies were developed to reduce the risk of collisions and to create a system for the disposal of spent satellites.

The show was a reminder of the importance of space safety and the need for continued research and development to address the challenges of space debris. It served as a call to action for governments and organizations around the world to work together to create a safer and more sustainable space environment.

The Garbage from Heaven segment was a seminal event in the history of space safety and a testament to the power of media in raising awareness and shaping public opinion on important issues.

More corn equals lower prices

The largest corn and soybean crop in the nation's history was predicted Tuesday by the U.S. Department of Agriculture (USDA), which said the corn harvest will be 13 per cent larger than last year's crop.

This season's reserve corn is expected to be 2.4 million bushels, 13 per cent larger than last year's crop. The USDA report said the previous record crop was 252.5 billion bushels. This year's is a

This year's crop is expected to be the nation's largest ever,
with trade sources predicting that the corn harvest will be 13 per cent larger than last year's crop.

Johnsonian Extension Director Dale Shanes said both corn and soybean farmers should start planning now. Some farmers have been busy planting soybeans and some have already started planting corn.

"Some of the corn has been planted, but the good rains this summer have favored the crop to be planted in July and August," said Shanes.

"And the crop has been growing very well, but the corn field could still be hot. The crop looks real good at this price," he said.

"Just the last few weeks, though, we have had no rain in October and November." The corn crop, he said, now means higher taxes.

"The corn this early in the harvest will not be as high as the earlier corn," said Shanes. "It will have not weathered in October and November, and it has lower prices." Shanes said.

Ali claims today is 'last day in training gym'

HANGZHOU (CNP) —

Former world champ Ali claims today is 'last day in training gym'. As a crowd of fans gather outside the gym to witness the retirement of the great boxer, which could be the last day of his career, Ali made the following statement:

"I expect the last day in training gym to be a joy at the ring. It will be my last day of training. It will also be my last day of fighting. I'm retiring now."

When Ali retired in 1975, he had won 56 of his 60 fights, including 37 knockouts. He was the first African-American to hold the title of heavyweight champion of the world. Since then, he has continued to train and fight, but today he claims it is his last day in the gym.

Fans and media had gathered outside the gym to witness Ali's departure. "This is a very special day for us," said one fan. "Ali has been a inspiration to us, and we will miss him."

Ali's retirement comes after a long career that included several upsets and controversies. He was onceipated to retire after losing to Larry Holmes in 1988, but he later returned to the ring to win against George Foreman in 1991. His final fight, against Trevor Berbick in 1996, was a controversial loss that many fans and critics believe was a fix.

Ali has been a force for good in the community, and has been involved in numerous charitable organizations. He has also been a vocal advocate for peace and justice. "I will miss Ali," said one commentator. "He was a true leader."

Women runners win quadrangular

By CARY TRENT
| Staff Writer |

PELLA—In the strength of a strong second mile, the Iowa women's cross country team garnered a victory in the opening meet of the season Wednesday, scoring 50 points to defeat Central Catholic, Drake and William Penn.

The Hawkeye women, led by three-time all-conference runner Sandra Budde, opened with the first country wind ever over Central, a strong wind among Iowa small colleges. Sandra placed second in the field of 16 runners over the two-mile course in 11 minutes. In seconds, eight seconds behind leader for all Iowa, Sandra, was first for the Hawkeyes in 11:23.

Another freshman, Zanetta Mitchell, won Central Catholic's two-mile race in 11:28. William Penn's Pam Wright won in 11:33. The Hawkeyes' time was 1:31:25 to win the meet by 1:31:49.

Under the quadrangular system, each country's first five runners are scored, with the fifth runner as the "pacer" to keep the other runners from being credited with better times. Central placed third, followed by Drake, William Penn and Iowa, with William Penn winning with 19 points, Iowa second with 21, Drake third with 27, and Central Catholic fourth with 29.

"I'm really pleased because we did the best lady," Budde said. "Sometimes you can see people in 7:55, but we're running in 7:45.

Who: Masters do it again

Carton, Ponty: Virtuosos with average discs

By Dave Albert

The Who: It could be their last...-

The same Stone Renaissance on the same side of their disc. "Music Must Change!" — the song itself is exactly the same as its predecessor, "Music Must Change!" — itself a reprise of a song from the Who's previous album, "Music Must Change!" — but both songs are made to sound like they are being played on the same instrument. But the Who's last album is not a reprise of their previous album, "Music Must Change!" — it is a new album and it is a new sound. The Who's last album is a new sound and it is a new sound and it is a new sound.

RIFFS

Blues to hit Iowa City

The opportunity to see two generation-old guitarists who have been playing together for over 40 years is a rare one. In the case of the Who, that opportunity is rare. The Who has been playing together for over 40 years and they have been playing together for over 40 years. They have been playing together for over 40 years and they have been playing together for over 40 years. They have been playing together for over 40 years and they have been playing together for over 40 years. They have been playing together for over 40 years and they have been playing together for over 40 years.

Love is...naked

Chicago Jogger beats heart

It was a hot day in the summer of 1969. Even though they had not heard the first song from the album "Love Is...naked," the Chicago Jogger decided to play it. The song was called "Chicago Jogger beats heart." The song was about a man who had been playing his guitar in the street for the past 30 years. The man was a street performer who played his guitar in the street for the past 30 years. The man had been playing his guitar in the street for the past 30 years. The man played his guitar in the street for the past 30 years.

COLUMNS

I got the misnomer blues...

My debate styles, intellectual deficiency and public speaking skills have been suffering greatly from my addiction to the physical and mental stress of being a debater. After years of hard work, I have come to the realization that there is no substitute for practice and hard work in order to be successful in this field. There is no substitute for practice and hard work in order to be successful in this field. There is no substitute for practice and hard work in order to be successful in this field.
