WHAT IS A TAX-FREE CERTIFICATE?

Beginning October 1, 1981, the ALL-SAVERS CERTIFICATE will be issued in minimum amounts of $500. Interest on this one-year instrument will be equal to 76% of the average yield for 52-week U.S. Treasury bills. On October 1st, that rate will be 6.14%.

Interest is tax-free up to $500 for individuals ($2000 for joint returns). Savers may convert 6-month Money Market Certificates to tax-exempt ALL-SAVERS CERTIFICATES in mid-term without paying a penalty for withdrawal of the funds prior to maturity.

WHAT IS THE BENEFIT?

The tax-free interest aspect of these certificates could help you retain more of your earnings. However, depending on your particular tax situation, your return on this investment may not compare favorably to the after-tax yield on other taxable money market instruments.

Generally speaking, if you are in the 30% tax bracket or higher, the ALL-SAVERS CERTIFICATE should be examined by you to decide if it is truly tax-free.

WHAT ARE THE RISKS?

Savers must keep in mind that these certificates are not subject to the 20% withholding tax on interest (since they are tax exempt).

Budget cuts hurt poor

President Reagan announced his new round of budget cuts by quoting Winston Churchill. He said he knew that the new plan would "mean more and more from all of us."

Unfortunately it requires asking from our cabinet — too, we say and mean it; asking for our taxes.

The changes include reductions in Supplemental Security Income (SSI) to help the poorest; cuts in food stamps and nutrition benefits; veterans' pensions; retirement programs for public employees and federal workers; Social Security benefits; and $1.8 billion from Social Security recipients.

The purpose of these cuts is not the cut itself; it is in reduction of the scale of their increase. Allowing for inflation, the Reagan average is a reduction of $1 billion a year from what the Army's budget would have been in fiscal 1981.

Reagan is financing the greatly increased military budget and the large tax cut (which benefits mostly the wealthy) by cutting in programs that are not popular. For example, the projected deficit is keeping interest rates high. That means that it is costing government more to borrow money, which will also add to the deficit even higher — the new budget cuts. Apparently this budget contains the largest deficit increase in one budget in history.

The Reagan priorities are greatly unjust. The wealthy and the military are not required to pay even lightly. The poor, the old, the young, the children and the veterans are being forced to blend and to work, a society willing to permit such injustice is only wounding itself.

AWACS sale foolish

A majority of the Senate has come out against the $3 billion arm sale to Saudi Arabia, which includes the expensive AWACS surveillance planes. Carl B. Stokes's column on Friday edition describes how the Senate advanced some good arguments to support the sale of the AWACS planes.

It is suggested that by selling the AWACS planes, the United States can best protect the security of all the countries involved in the Middle East.

By sending more arms and more sophisticated arms to countries in this part of the world, we are helping to create more freedom in the world, Americans should be prepared to Further, it is suggested that it is in the best interest of the United States to sell the AWACS planes to Saudi Arabia. The security, in general, is of vital importance.

When we sweep areas of the entire United States, few people want to argue for the cost, the first is that these planes are far more than needed to defend the United States. But the AWACS planes can be used to help the United States as well.

There is a problem about the proposed AWACS planes for Saudi Arabia, in that there is an increase in the cost of these planes. Some opponents of the sale argue that the United States will not be able to protect themselves from great enemies.

Moreover, it is not necessary to sell Saudi Arabia the planes for them to help defend themselves. There are many more planes in the air than the United States can afford.

To add to this, it is suggested that these planes are not of much importance to the United States, in that they are not consistent with the protection of our own interests.

Anyway, the planes are designed to be of great use to the American people, and in general, it is always necessary to sell these kinds of planes.

Foreign aid needed

Like everything else, the U.S. foreign aid program in experiences a cut in funding under the Reagan administration. The Reagan administration has proposed to cut $1 billion from the U.S. foreign aid program. The new congress, however, has not approved this cut.

It is suggested that the United States should increase its foreign aid programs, in order to help developing countries. The United States has already done much to help these countries, and it is important that the United States continue to support these programs.

Sick of epithets like ‘baby-killer’

By Minde Zn

In the early days of the current political season, some groups have been keen to use the epithet "baby-killer" to describe abortionists. The use of this term has been widely condemned by pro-choice advocates, who argue that it is an attempt to stigmatize and silence those who work to provide reproductive health care services.

However, some anti-choice activists have continued to use the term, often in a. "shall not go on forever, and if the Supreme Court decision in Roe v. Wade is allowed to stand, there is a real risk that these laws will be used to restrict women's access to abortion in the future."

The use of the term "baby-killer" is a form of vilification and is intended to discourage women from seeking abortion services. It is an attempt to discredit and undermine the work of those who provide reproductive health care services.

It is important to recognize that the "baby-killer" epithet is not merely a malicious or derogatory term, but is also a way of trying to control and limit access to reproductive health care.

The AWACS sale to Saudi Arabia is considered foolish because it will benefit the United States in the long run. The United States should not sell these planes to Saudi Arabia, as it will only benefit the United States in the long run.

School children asked to avoid unsafe crossing

By Elizabeth Plumgaard
Sept. 21
Boyer Elementary School children will be walking four extra blocks to school this morning because of a road construction project.

Mary Carey, the new chairwoman of the South Campus Elementary PTA, said many cars run a stop sign at the intersection of West Street and Third Avenue, where elementary school children are crossing the street to get to school. The PTA was asked for help with the construction project near the school.

The school district had asked for help with the construction project near the school.

A study done last week showed that the intersection has been used by students at least seven times a week.

"THE SITUATION has gotten so bad that the principal has been telling his students not to walk," Carey said. Dick Ruhns, principal of Hoover Elementary School, said many cars run a stop sign at the intersection of West Street and Third Avenue, where elementary school children are crossing the street to get to school.

Union leaders hope demonstration will be inspiration to U.S. workers

WASHINGTON (UPI) - Union leaders, alarmed by the trend of a quarter million workers who have quit control and Congress will get the message. The demonstration, which filled the Mall from the foot of the Capitol to the Washington Monument, included the largest turnout against the Vietnam War a decade ago. It was organized by leaders of many of the nation's major unions, who called for an end to the war.
As perennial rockers, the Stones can’t match grace of the Kinks

By Y. L. Johnson

It was a Wednesday night some time ago. Yes, it was a Wednesday night some time ago. It was 1964, maybe even 1965, and the London Palladium was buzzing. The Rolling Stones were on stage, and their lead vocalist, Mick Jagger, was in the mood to perform. He belted out a classic—"Satisfaction"—and the audience roared.

But something was different. There was a new band on stage, one that would soon become synonymous with the British Invasion. The band was the Kinks.

Now, the Kinks were not the first British band to make an impact in America. The Beatles had already established a fan base, but the Kinks had something special. They had a unique sound that combined rock and roll with elements of folk and blues.

The Kinks had released their first album, "The Kinks Are the Village Green Preservation Society," in 1968, and it was a critical success. The album featured tracks like "Dedicated Follower of Fashion" and "Money Talks," both of which were instant hits.

Despite their success, the Kinks struggled with drug and alcohol problems. Lead singer Ray Davies, who was known for his distinctive voice and songwriting, was particularly troubled. He had a history of substance abuse, and it showed in his music.

But that didn’t stop the Kinks from becoming one of the most successful bands of the 1960s. They sold over 80 million records worldwide and had 18 Top 10hits in the United States alone.

In 2015, the Kinks were inducted into the Rock and Roll Hall of Fame, and their influence on modern music is still felt today.

And so, as the Rolling Stones continue to tour and record, the Kinks remain a reminder of what it means to be a true rock and roll band. They may not have match the grace of the Stones, but they certainly leave an impression.

Theater

Second City second-rate, troupe lacked inspiration

By T. J. Johnson

It was a Thursday night some time ago. Yes, it was a Thursday night some time ago. We were at the Second City theater, a famous improv troupe, and the audience was electric. They were waiting for something new, something different.

And then it happened. The troupe took to the stage and began performing. The audience laughed, but there was a lack of inspiration. The troupe seemed to be going through the motions, and the audience could tell.

It was a disheartening experience. Second City is known for its innovative and unpredictable performances, but this particular show fell flat.

As the show came to an end, the audience was left feeling unfulfilled. The troupe had failed to deliver the kind of performance that Second City is known for, and it was a disappointment.

But despite this setback, Second City remains a beloved and important part of Chicago’s cultural landscape. It will no doubt continue to produce the kind of innovative and entertaining shows that have made it a staple of the city for over 50 years.

The end of the show was met with a mix of relief and disappointment. The audience filed out, some dejected, others hopeful for the next show.

End of the note.
DePalma’s startling camera angles magnify the tension of ‘Blow Out’

By Rosanne T. Muller

Film Editor

Brian DePalma has had his hits (Carrie, Hvressed in Kill) and misses (The Fury). But his new film, Blow Out, is the most controversial of his career, and, judging by the reaction to it at the Dallas-Fort Worthy Film Festival, one that will certainly rank as a trend-setter. The film, which was shot in and around Dallas, is a story of how an innocent man becomes suspected in a murder investigation.

The opening scene of the film is a close-up of an owl in broad close-up. The camera is in a position to reveal the owl's features, but then it zooms out to show the owl in its natural environment. The effect is stunning, not only for the sight itself, but for the way in which the camera's movement enhances the tension of the moment.

The film follows the character of John Travolta, who plays a sound engineer in a Hollywood studio. As the film progresses, Travolta becomes involved in a murder investigation, and the camera's movement becomes more and more dramatic, revealing the hidden truths of the crime.

The film ends with a climactic shot of Travolta in the center of a Hollywood studio, as the camera pans around him in 360-degree angles. The effect is breathtaking, and it leaves the viewer with only memory.

New Kristy McNichol movie lame, full of obvious characters, outcomes

By Rosanne T. Muller

Film Editor

The Night the Lights Went Out in Georgia is a by-the-numbers, formulaic movie that contains little that is new or interesting. The story is about a woman who becomes a suspect in a murder investigation, and the film follows her as she tries to clear her name.

The movie lacks depth and originality, and it seems to be aimed at a teenage audience. The acting is poor, and the dialogue is predictable and stilted.

Over 400 seek draft board slots

By Molly Miller

More than 400 freshmen have applied for 140 positions on local draft boards, said J- J. Finley, director of the state's draft boards.

The state began compiling a list of applicants June 1, after receiving an order from the federal government that requires each state to appoint lists of draft board applicants in preparation for a wider expansion.

Finley said the laws will not end with the June 1 deadline, and that the state is still accepting applications and preliminary interviews by phone and in person.

By Dave Battersby

AMES — A high above the door of the Iowa State football locker room marks the day Iowa State opened the 1979 schedule by beating Oklahoma State 23-12 in Iowa City.

The Cyclones scored on their first two possessions of the game, which were both touchdown drives, and Iowa State never looked back.

"We had a very good week of practice," said Iowa State coach Don Boulware. "We had a very good week of practice." Iowa State's drawback was a 1-2-2 record at the end of the game.

Iowa State, however, did get possession of the ball, and the Cyclones scored on a touchdown that gave Iowa State a 14-0 lead.
