Vetoed spending bill a case of ‘guns vs. butter’

President Reagan vetoed a $31.6 billion omnibus spending bill on Friday, the first of several such vetoes he has promised, but one he is not expected to override. The bill, which includes $19 billion for defense, $4 billion for domestic programs and $8 billion for the elderly and poor, would have been the largest in history.

Analysis

The President had said he would veto the $31.6 billion omnibus spending bill because it was too close to the $31.4 billion that he had sent to Congress earlier this month. He said he would continue to support the bill as long as it does not include any program sufficient to keep the country in a state of war.

Doderer seeks solutions to rising health care costs

By Paul Brown

The cost of health care and related insurance rates will be a major issue for the Iowa Policy Director, Paul Doderer, who was recently appointed to the Department of Health and Human Services. Doderer said he hopes to look into the way insurance and health care are handled in the state.

"The Iowa health care system is one of the most important issue facing the Iowa legislature," Doderer said. "We need to find a way to bring down the cost of health care and related insurance rates."

DODERER said that before he started his job, he had several meetings with insurance companies and hospitals to discuss ways to reduce the cost of health care.

"We need to find a way to reduce the cost of health care and related insurance rates," Doderer said. "We need to find a way to bring down the cost of health care and related insurance rates."
Funding cuts pose threat to project

By Mark Larr

Iowa City's proposed $57 million sewage treatment plant will have an additional setback Monday when the city's councilman was forced to reprimand city leaders for their walking back of funding proposals.

"Iowa City's funding cuts pose a problem," said John Kimm, Iowa City's public works director. "We don't have any federal funding involved, but it's an additional threat to our project."

"I've been working on this project for years, and it's been a struggle," Kimm continued. "We've had funding cuts before, but this is the worst of them all."

"I've been working with the city's staff and leaders on this project for several years," Kimm added. "I've been pushing for funding, and I've been getting it."

"But now, the city's councilman is putting the brakes on everything," Kimm said. "He's said that he's not interested in funding this project any more, and he's not interested in funding anything else."

"I'm really disappointed," Kimm said. "I've been working on this project for years, and I've been getting it. But now, the city's councilman is putting the brakes on everything."
A new deal for phone customers

By Joe Reardon

Some Iowa residents faced severe headaches and delays when they discovered some of the new communications services and prices had not yet been put into effect.

CONSUMERS soon will be offered a choice of services and prices in telephone service. And likely will be along a 90-day trial period for the new service.

But the state officials are concerned that consumers will be able to choose among too many alternatives.

"The consumer loves to have a choice of services, but the consumer will not be confused by too many choices," said state Ceo. "But the consumer will not be confused by too many choices."".

Outreach Program benefits both givers and receivers

The Johnson County Elderly Services Agency’s Outreach Program has about 200 volun- teers and 2,000 clients.

The program is driven by volunteers, who help clients with grocery shopping, running errands, and providing various services while respecting their autonomy.

My husband died five years ago, and I decided I needed to live my life. I joined the Outreach Program last year, and I’ve learned so much from my clients and my fellow volunteers.

Liturgy laudable in ‘People’s Court’

By Jeffrey Miller

Arts & Entertainment

‘The People’s Court’ like most reality TV productions likes this: Vail, a TV show or commercial with a punch line and a game with the prise of millions and the promise of hauntingly and infuriatingly silly and irresponsible.

People’s Court gets a “no, wait, no lawyer’s fees, and do them in sequences.” incredibly silly and irresistible.

A set of circumstances medical commercials, sneers, growls and design repairs to a car dented by a trash can, a man who now makes Miller Lite as we know and love it.

Wisin’ and Wapner’s stylized “JIHrey Mrll” even before his earlier hits that sounded like Motown singles, and Eclectic, it’s difficult to come to a conclusion from the film community in the film.

It was four years between that and her last film, Ball, where she played the role of Bergman’s Ilse as Bell Tolls, Gaslight, The Bells of St. Mary, or “T hin­ g­e­s” “ Book of the Old Capitol.

Though I don’t think she was more visible in the film, the sound will.

Players have no deadline for walkout

CHICAGO (UPI) - The NFL Players Association Monday said it would strike within weeks but would not declare a walkout deadline to break into overtime negotiations.

The NFLPA met for more than eight hours, but remained tight-lipped about the bargaining process. The NFL has called a meeting for Tuesday.

UPFRONT筹码 for representatives for all 26 teams agreed to attend the next bargaining session this week.

"We're still exploring our options," said Phil Baskin, assistant to the NFL's Executive Vice President.

"The next meeting will be held in an effort to find a solution to the current impasse."

The NFLPA has not yet discussed any potential deadlines to break the impasse. The upcoming talks take place last Monday and will be held in hopes of finding a solution directly.

Baskin added, "We're not ready to discuss a strike, but we are prepared to strike if the negotiations don't progress as expected."

The NFLPA has called for a strike multiple times, but the league has rejected the idea thus far.

"We're not ready to call a strike yet," said Baskin. "We're still exploring our options."

The NFLPA's announcement comes after a meeting with the league earlier this week. The two sides have not made any significant progress towards a deal.
