Student registration campaign mounted by student groups

By Jeff Beck

The Kansas Student Government has launched a fall voter registration campaign to encourage students to vote.

"We want to make sure that all students have voting access and use it," said KSU President Brian Baker. "This is an important issue for us as students." The campaign is being coordinated by the KSU Voter Registration Committee, which consists of representatives from various student organizations.

"We're working with multiple organizations to make sure that as many students as possible are registered to vote," said Baker.

The campaign will include a series of events and activities on campus aimed at getting students registered to vote. These events will be held throughout the fall semester and will include voter registration drives, informational sessions, and other activities designed to engage students in the voting process.

"We're excited to be working with other organizations on campus to make sure that as many students as possible are registered to vote," said Baker.

The campaign is part of a larger effort to increase voter turnout among college students. According to the Higher Education Voting Rights Act of 1993, college students are entitled to receive a voter registration card when they receive their student identification card. However, many students do not take advantage of this opportunity.

"We want to make sure that students know about this opportunity and use it," said Baker.

The campaign will continue throughout the fall semester and will be followed by a similar effort in the spring.

"We want to make sure that students are registered to vote in both the fall and spring elections," said Baker.

"T h e impact would be tremendous," Ray said. "If every employer could hire one worker, businesses would expand and the drain on the revenue situation does not improve."

In 1980, Ray ordered across-the-board cuts in state spending to prevent the state treasury from going into the red, which is prohibited by law.

Freedman goes to head of class

By Rhonda Bever

Iowa President J. Roy Freedman returned to the classroom Tuesday and shared with his students the experience of being "the boss." Freedman expressed his disappointment that he could not attend the students' celebration of the 25th anniversary of the college department of law and administrative law Monday evening.

Freedman chose the topic he wished to discuss in class and then he knew what to talk up. "I could not talk on any other subject that would be wanted to do this one and I think you need a period of rest," he said.

BEFORE ASSUMING AN ILE presidency, April, Freedman was Dean of the University of Pennsylvania law school for several years.

"The problems that are involved in the beginning of the year and most students learn to handle very quickly. The learning curve looks very steep."

"There weren't many questions from the December class, but that was because they were interrupted by the ILE presidencies," Freedman said. "I think it was a good experience to be a president for the students."

"There are problems with this class, but we are learning," Freedman said.

"The course, the class was so well prepared in the fall that we had no problem with the other part of the semester." Freedman said he did not make any effort to speak up in class.

The only thing that improved was the size of the other professors I've had," Freedman said. "It just makes the class better." Freedman will look for a class in the law school tomorrow and the first program during the spring semester, but it should be a good experience to be with the students in the classroom -- even as just a teacher.

"I want a challenging experience in a classroom," Freedman said. "We're always in a state of a challenge."

Leases

The owner of a house and a renter must both abide by the law. The Iowa City law school and the law department are concerned about the renter's rights. Freedman said that he could not comment on the tenant's case.

"It is a difficult situation that is very hard to explain," Freedman said.

Women shortchanged

Public opinion polls have consistently shown that the women of America don't like Ronald Reagan as much as the men do. In fact, recently a gap has been widening. The reason? Some women believe that Reagan is taking a tougher stand on contraceptive use than his predecessor. And, although overall polls show that more women than men favor abortion, most women work and daily confront the economic problems of their families.

Some women say they have been shortchanged by Reagan's tax policies.

Tles (O) - The jury that convicted a teenager of raping and murdering a 76-year-old nun in northern California, was returning its verdict in the murder trial of Johnny Frank Garrett, 18.

The punishment phase of the trial, in which the eight-man, four-woman jury deliberated only an hour at the end of a five-week trial, began Thursday.

Garrett, who was 17 when he was arrested and charged with the crime simply because he had a criminal record and because he had a criminal history, claimed that the appellant should not be allowed to bail. But he argued Garrett's parents were not the leaders of his house of all that made his client a suspect.

Hill had urged the death penalty, but a jury of eight men and four women, returning its verdict in the murder case, returned the second man sentenced to death by injection Thursday.

Fighting Illini

There’s no way you can ever doubt Ray. He can’t tell us too much about the University of Iowa’s victory over the Illinois Fighting Illini. This game was won by Iowa, thanks to the performance of quarterback Nick Epps, who completed 18 of 23 passes for 254 yards and two touchdowns.

The Illini were led by quarterback John Eppes, who had 160 yards passing and two touchdowns, but it wasn’t enough to overcome the Hawkeyes. Iowa’s defense was solid, holding Illinois to just 178 total yards. The Hawkeyes scored on a 1-yard touchdown run by fullback Ken Williams in the fourth quarter to put the game out of reach.

The next game for the Hawkeyes is a home contest against the Michigan State Spartans. Kickoff is scheduled for 1:00 pm on October 10th.

Rhein, a junior quarterback from Hermiston, is the starting quarterback for the Hawkeyes. He has started five games this season and has completed 89 of 153 passes for 1,447 yards and 15 touchdowns.
