UI prepares for budget slashes

By Rachelite Bostrom

As the threat of an across-the-board cut looms, the prospects of an economic recession rise, a network of individuals and public officials are preparing for the worst. The network consists of university deans, faculty, students, and workers, along with the state government. A meeting of the boards of trustees in December to discuss the possibility of a university budget cut may be the final straw for some.

While what the legislature approved was a tight budget, it was a risk that the state legislature would not act to protect the state's largest institution of higher learning. The university has already had its budget cut by $10 million, and it will be on the defensive this year. What is at stake is whether the university can stay afloat, or if it will have to make cuts to its programs.

The FINANCE Department estimates that the budget will go from $2.6 billion to $2.8 billion, a 5 percent increase. This increase will not be enough to cover the inflationary increase in wages, salaries, and benefits. At the current rate, the university will have to make cuts to its programs.

The state budget was approved by the Senate and the House of Representatives in February. The budget includes $2.8 billion for the university, $2.6 billion for the public school system, and $2.4 billion for community colleges.

An ACE WAS SCORED by the university's budget proposal, according to the university's finance director. "It is a win-win situation," he said. "It will help us to maintain our fiscal health." The budget includes a 4 percent increase in tuition, which will help to offset the cuts.

The university has already made cuts to its programs, and it will have to continue to make cuts to maintain its fiscal health. The university is currently facing a $50 million deficit, and it will have to make cuts to its programs to cover that deficit.

Peacekeeping force attacked

Honors program challenges students

By Mary Kapler

Iowa State will have the chance to graduate with honors because of the early change in the University’s honors program, according to a proposal Dr. Donald Marshall,

The honors program has been revised several times over the years. Marshall said, "Iowa State is known as a school that offers a great degree of opportunities for its students."

A STUDENT can receive an honors degree in the College of Liberal Arts. Marshall said, "A student who completes a senior-year project."

The honors program is set to be an integral part of the college's curriculum, with the goal of providing more opportunities for students to complete a senior-year project.

DRINC aims at bettering student drinking habits

By Kristie Shamp

Students and administrators are trying to put a stop to the drinking problems associated with student life. DRINC, a social and referral group, is working to help students understand the effects of alcohol and to provide resources for those in need.

The group aims to provide resources for students who have a drinking problem. They offer feedback and direct response to those in need, helping to prevent future issues.

The original initiative was focused on Mary Shalvey, the group's programming assistant. She has been involved in several cases where students have been struggling with drinking problems and has worked to provide resources for them.

The project started with a group of faculty and students who were concerned about the high number of alcohol-related incidents on campus. They wanted to create a support group that would provide resources for those in need.

The group is working to help students understand the effects of alcohol. They have been holding workshops and seminars to educate students on the dangers of drinking and to provide resources for those in need.

“Isn’t that the third time today?”

“Yeah, I know. But I’ll be right back.”

But by the time the repairman was back, the daughter-in-law had already packed up her things and left the house, heading for the nearest motel.

And so it went, day after day, as the family tried to make do without the missing heating system.

America is having an unbelievable sale!
Tuition hikes

The Board of Regents will meet in Iowa City Sept. 23 to discuss, among other things, proposed tuition increases to cover the state university. Under the recent staff proposal, tuition for resident undergraduate students would increase 15 percent, from $3.10 to $3.59. For out-of-state students, it would rise from $8.83 to $10.50.

This hardly seems like news - tuition has risen every year since 1960. It is estimated that if tuition at state universities has risen 15 percent, it will be 91 percent by the year 2000. And increases of about 5 percent are contemplated for 1982.

Empty promises?

But it must be realized that the regents are working under great pressure from the state's political leaders to raise tuition and offset the state's reduced financial support for higher education. Students and student groups will vociferously object to higher fees. Students and student loan cuts will put post secondary schooling out of the reach of many students.

In October 1981, the board voted to raise the 1980 rates by between 9.5 percent and 13 percent. If the latest proposals are adopted, it will more than double the rates of annual rate hikes.

But it must be against tuition increases. Student senate representation, faculty and administrator form a natural constituency whose interests oppose higher fees. Students and their families are hit directly by higher costs. Faculty and administrators must be concerned that rising education costs and student loan cut will pull post secondary schooling out of the reach of many students.

Even more concerning is the scenario that if the regents are working under great pressure to increase tuition, it is evident in the proposals that the state's financial liability for reducing rising education costs in the state has been reduced even further. It is also evident that pay by all segments of the state's higher education community.

Career, culture are compatible

By François R. Latore

If you value the freedom of expression, if you cherish the right to express yourself in your own way, you might want to consider becoming an artist. It is a profession which, while it is competitive and challenging, offers a unique opportunity to work with your hands, to create something beautiful, and to share your ideas with the world. Art can be a way of life, a way to make a living, and a way to express yourself. It can be a way to connect with others, to bring people together, and to inspire others. It can be a way to celebrate, to mourn, to comment on the world around us. It can be a way to communicate, to tell stories, to express feelings. It can be a way to challenge, to provoke, to make people think. It can be a way to share, to connect, to create. It can be a way to be, to be true, to be yourself. It can be a way to be human. Steve Forbert is sailing in bathwater tunes

By Allen Weggi
Staff Writer

Before we discuss Steve Forbert’s new album, let’s take a look at the man himself. Steve Forbert is a singer-songwriter who has been active in the music industry since the early 1970s, and is known for his unique style and his ability to write songs that touch on a wide range of themes.

The bulk of the movie is pubescent and androgynous young boys who grace the collective unconscious of its target group. The school seniors.

Forbert has been known for his powerful and emotive vocals, and his music has been described as folk rock, singer-songwriter, and country.

In the film, the language is ripe for the season. The film’s opening lines are:

"You can’t be too rich or too thin. I mean when you’re forty-five you can’t count on your looks. My face is getting old, my hair is going gray, and my teeth are yellowing."

"But I have a secret weapon. I’m going to use the power of my mind to control the world."

"I’m going to use the power of my mind to control the world."

"I’m going to use the power of my mind to control the world."

Forbert has been known for his powerful and emotive vocals, and his music has been described as folk rock, singer-songwriter, and country.

It’s a beautiful thing to hear Forbert singing like he’s trying to be and sings like he’s trying to remember how cute he’s trying to be.

Iowa's Anne Dobrowolski took second place. Iowa's Jodi Hershberger took top honors in the women's meet. The Hawkeyes won the meet with a score of 211, followed by the University of Wisconsin-Milwaukee with a score of 215. The team was led by Kirsi Virtanen, who set a new meet record with a time of 17:59.10.

The Hawkeyes will next compete at the NCAA West Regional Championships in two weeks.

Coach Donnie Duncan said, "We're really proud of our team this season. They've worked hard and it shows in their results."
By Thomas M. Jarga

Despite the fact that Iowa lost three of its first four matches with the lid off, the Hawkeyes have continued to improve. Senior Coach Cindy Thomason has done an excellent job of coaching and developing the team. The Hawkeyes have a young and talented squad that is learning quickly.
