Faculty loss, shortage is ‘fact of life’

Key faculty leave UI, but exodus of teachers hasn’t become reality

By Jane Turner

Despite years of predictions that a faculty exodus will occur, the UI has not lost many professors in the past six months.

Although the trend on other campuses is noticeable, the University of Iowa faculty does not appear to be following the same pattern.

Several factors, including increased teaching loads and lower salaries, have led to the recent faculty losses.

The UI administration has been proactive in recruiting and retaining faculty members, and has been successful in doing so.

FIT TO BE DRIED

An Ouch for the UI

Drought is occurring in Iowa and parts of the Midwest, threatening crops and livestock.

The UI is conducting a drought-fighting campaign, and is encouraging students to conserve water.

Hancher to host ‘world’s greatest’ orchestra

University officials announced today that the UI will host the world’s greatest orchestra, the Chicago Symphony Orchestra, later this month.

The orchestra is scheduled to perform at Hancher Auditorium on October 20th.

Israel begins withdrawing from Beirut

The Israeli government has announced that it will begin withdrawing its forces from the Lebanon region.

The move is expected to take place over the next few weeks.

One killed in bombing spree

FRANKFURT, West Germany - Suspected anti-Israeli terrorists attempted to kill a man in West Berlin near the office of an American computer firm Sperry Rand. It was the ninth bombing attack in the production of weapons for Israel. The bomb demolished a wall but failed to kill anyone. The attack was one of 117 new acts of terrorism in the last three years in Europe.

Shcharansky begins fast

MOSCOW - Soviet manufacturing workers said they would begin a mass protest today, their first after a strike last week in which 50 workers were killed.

Mr. Shcharansky, 36, the leader of one of the largest dissident movements in the Soviet Union, said he had begun a hunger strike in protest against his 10-day isolation.

City Convention bureau may get tax funds

By Doug World

Preparing for the prospect of a post - election meeting, the Coralville City Council agreed at its meeting Tuesday to consider a proposal that the city's convention and visitors bureau would be given one - third of the revenues from the Coralville-Cedar Rapids hotel-motel tax.

Mayor Mary Shcharanski opposed the proposal and tried to "take off the top" of the tax-generated funds "extending it to our business people who do not want to give it to the bureau.

But other councilmen - concerned they would be getting money from an economic base - overruled that idea, and the council finally settled on a 5 percent commitment for the first three years of the tax.

The council also heard a presentation by a local planning consultant who is slated for a voter decision in Nov. 4.

A bill approved by the Senate Commerce Committee would strip cities of much of their control over cable services. The legislation, known as the cable act, is aimed at ensuring that cities have a say in the management of cable services.

The legislation would give cities more control over the planning and regulation of cable services. It would also allow cities to negotiate with cable companies on the terms of service agreements.

This bill is a significant step in the right direction, as it would give cities more power to ensure that cable services are available to all residents and are not only profitable for the companies.

The legislation would also require cable companies to provide a variety of services to cities, such as emergency communication services and public access channels.

The bill is expected to be signed into law by the President in the coming weeks.

Union display is anti-Semitic

In Lebanon, reactionaries have expressed strong opposition to the union display, which they claim is anti-Semitic. The reactionaries blame the labor unions for supporting the progressive forces in Lebanon and for opposing the Syrian regime.

The display was held in front of the Syrian embassy in Lebanon, and it included signs and slogans calling for the ouster of the Syrian regime.

Losing chronicle of a generation

The problem of high ticket prices is not one that can be laid on the patrons alone. While the creation of art has been somewhat liberated from that patronage system, the presentation hasn't. In the large cities that serve as pocketbooks and prestige, the result is indeed an honor.

Some critics have argued that the high ticket prices are a form of exploitation, and that they prevent many people from accessing the arts.

The high ticket prices have also been criticized for contributing to the alienation of art from the public.

The problem of high ticket prices is a complex one, and it requires a multi-faceted solution.

Critic lambasted

The latest issue of the Illinois Times is a travesty. The editor, Mr. Smith, has once again demonstrated his lack of professionalism and integrity.

The article in question was a scathing attack on the University of Illinois, which the author claims is rife with corruption and inefficiency.

This is not the first time that Smith has written such a piece. In fact, his articles are consistently negative and critical of the university and its leaders.

The university deserves better representation in the media. It is important to recognize the achievements of the university and its faculty and students.

Get a job

I came home recently and noticed my right-hand glove and realized it was time to get a job. My electricity had been cut off for non-payment of the 1984-85 tax bill. My electricity had been cut off for non-payment of the 1984-85 tax bill.

We are entering an era when the need for a job is more important than ever. The economy is struggling, and many people are having difficulty finding work.

This is a difficult time for all of us, and it is important that we come together to support one another and find solutions to this crisis.

Afbsoption policy

I am writing to support Paper, a group that is working to end the use of paper products. This group is dedicated to protecting the environment and reducing our reliance on paper.

Paper, which was founded in 1970, has been instrumental in raising awareness about the negative impact of paper use on the environment.

The group’s policy of absorption is a crucial step in reducing our impact on the environment. This policy aims to promote the use of materials that are more environmentally friendly and to reduce our reliance on paper products.

The absorption policy is a testament to the group’s commitment to protecting the environment and promoting sustainability.

The Mismeasurement of New Orleans and Some Other Observations

In the current era of economic growth and development, the measurement of New Orleans has become increasingly important.

The city’s population, economic activities, and infrastructure have all grown significantly in recent years.

However, the measurement of New Orleans has been fraught with challenges and controversies.

The city’s leaders have been working to ensure that the measurement of New Orleans is accurate and reliable.

They have been working with a team of experts to develop a comprehensive and robust measurement framework.

The measurement of New Orleans is an ongoing process, and it is important that we continue to work towards a more accurate and reliable measurement of the city.

Display protesting massacre draws students’ complaints

By Kristine Banager

Members of the General Union of Palestinian Students believe it is difficult to make a distinction between Israeli and Palestinian students on campus. While the university administration claimed that the students were not present at the event, several students report that they were.

"When I went there, it was full of students and there was a lot of noise," one student said. "I was shocked to see how they were acting."

The students have been protesting against the government’s policies in the Middle East, and the University of Iowa has been under fire for not doing enough to address the issue.

"We need to do more to support our students," one professor said. "We need to give them the tools they need to express their views."

Group to examine male roles and alternatives to stereotypes

By Paul Brown

Power, wealth and success are considered traditional male roles, but the UI Center for Teaching and Learning is offering a course on men’s roles and alternative to stereotypical male roles.

"Men are just as important as women," one student said. "We need to give them the tools they need to express their views."

The course, "The Male Experience," will explore how men are socialized from birth to accept traditional male roles.

"We need to give them the tools they need to express their views," one professor said. "We need to give them the tools they need to express their views."

Chinese writers visit Iowa

By Mary Tabor

"We who want to talk politics" author Lee Kuan Yew visited the University of Iowa this week. He was met by a mix of students who were interested in his views on politics and others who were not.

"I was really impressed with his views on politics," one student said. "He really makes you think."

The visit was one of several made by Chinese writers to the University of Iowa this year.

"We need to give them the tools they need to express their views," one professor said. "We need to give them the tools they need to express their views."

Campus environment ripe for rise in political interest

By Nancy Kaph"r

The University of Iowa has seen a rise in political interest in the past several years. Students report feeling more engaged in politics on campus than in previous years.

"I feel more engaged in politics on campus than I have in the past," one student said. "I feel more engaged in politics on campus than I have in the past."

The rise in political interest is being attributed to a number of factors, including the political climate and the active role of student organizations.

"I think the rise in political interest is being attributed to a number of factors," one professor said. "I think the rise in political interest is being attributed to a number of factors."

The Hawkeye sailing club finished second at the NCAA regatta last weekend in honor of Founder’s Day.

Karen Lawes and Mike Fry and Jennifer Jantsch scored tries. The seven came together, very well, player-coach Keith said. "There was more team play than in the book. The Iowa City rugby team will face California University and Denver, rugby teams next Sunday in Bloomington, Illinois."

"You're under 19, sorry, and it's LOI.

The Daily Iowan employees are forbidden to release our starting line-ups until the teams know who is injured, it gives them an advantage.

Iowa State and Wisconsin are in the first half, with Iowa and a two-point conversion. Iowa scoring twice in the first half, Iowa beats Baton Rouge. Tristan Good and Jonny Conley were in honor of Founder’s Day, Iowa City.

"The A team played really well, but the other Iowa City rugby club is third in the first half of the test role," team member said. "We don’t think we’ll have a chance this year. Of all the Big Ten squad competing, placing third was a dramatic story.

"The only way was to have a way with picking the best. "We started and were really attacking the north, " player-coach Keith said. "The Iowa City rugby team will face California University and Denver, rugby teams next Sunday in Bloomington, Illinois."
