U.S. deficit hits a record $110.7 billion

WASHINGTON (AP) — The federal budget deficit for the fiscal year ending Sept. 30, 1982, swelled to $110.7 billion, or 8.2 percent of the gross national product, according to final figures announced Tuesday by the Commerce Department.

The Commerce Department said the 1982 deficit reached a record 8.2 percent of gross national product, or $110.7 billion, up from $101.8 billion recorded in 1981. The deficit has been below 8 percent for the past 10 years.

The Bush administration last week estimated the 1982 deficit would be $93 billion, while the Congressional Budget Office estimated it would be $90 billion. The deficit is expected to be even larger this year because of the tax cut that is expected to increase government spending.

UAW workers strike despite settlement

An attorney for United Auto Workers workers has rejected a potentially landmark agreement at Chrysler Group in Detroit, and several thousand workers again opposed the no contract vote and voted for a strike. The vote, initiated in early December, is now set for January 20, 1982, unless the two sides reach a settlement. The strike, which will affect thousands of workers at plants in Michigan, Ohio, and Indiana, is expected to last several weeks. The workers are seeking better wages, benefits, and job security. In a statement, the UAW leaders said, "We want a fair contract, and we're willing to fight for it." The Chrysler management, however, said the workers were being unreasonable and that they would not agree to a strike. The situation remains tense as the two sides try to reach a settlement.
ACLU adopts policy to limit libel suits

By Paul Rorvay

There is no way City Manager Saul Berlin and US Senator Jim Simpson could have predicted that the issue they were discussing might lead to the ACLU adopting a policy to limit libel suits.

Berlin and Simpson were discussing the possibility of a lawsuit against the City of Iowa City and the Reserve Privilege Fund. The lawsuit was filed by the ACLU on behalf of a group of citizens who claimed that their First Amendment rights were violated by the city's policy of not allowing them to publish a newspaper. The ACLU policy was seen as a way to limit the number of libel suits that the city might face in the future.

Berlin said that the city was itself a plaintiff in the lawsuit, and that the city had been named in other lawsuits as well. He added that the city had been able to settle some of those lawsuits, but that others were still pending.

Simpson said that the city had been able to settle some of the lawsuits, but that others were still pending. He added that the city had been able to settle some of the lawsuits, but that others were still pending.

Coalition members support bond plan

More than $1 million voters will turn out for Tuesday's general election, according to Secretary of State
Mary Jane Odell.

"I have received a report that the total number of registered voters will be 1,000, increase of 100,000 over the 1980 election," Odell said.

The report was based on a sample count of one in 1,000 of the registered voters. The count was made in seven precincts in each of the 198 counties.

"The report indicates that there is a increase of more than 5 percent in the number of registered voters," Odell said.

Odell also said that the increase is largely due to the increase in the voting age from 18 to 21.

"The increase is also due to the increase in the number of returning voters," Odell said.

The master plan includes these maior features: the bond program, which will fund the purchase of property for the airport, the construction of a new terminal building, and the construction of a new runway.

"The master plan will also include the construction of a new parking garage," Odell said.

On Tuesday, the master plan will be presented to the Johnson County residents for their consideration.

Frederman's speech

James 0. Frederman's inaugural speech helped the new governor win a second term. His achievements include a balanced budget, a reduction in property tax rates, and increased education funding. He has been a strong advocate for the arts and has expanded the state's cultural institutions. His policies have been praised for their pragmatic and fiscally responsible approach.

To the Editor:

After the July 4th Family Fun Festival in downtown Des Moines and the day-long celebration of the 4th of July, I am surprised to read the reviews of the event in the Des Moines Register. The word "divisive" was used in describing the event. There is no question that the event was successful, and it was enjoyed by all who attended. The event was a wonderful way to celebrate our country's independence. The reviews are a reflection of the times we live in and the challenges we face.

Cost of campaign

The cost of a political campaign can be astronomical. According to recent studies, the average cost of a U.S. Senate campaign is $10 million, and the average cost of a U.S. House campaign is $5 million. These numbers do not include fundraising costs, advertising, and other expenses. The cost of a campaign can also affect the outcome of an election. A well-funded candidate may have an advantage over a poorly funded candidate, even if the poorly funded candidate has a strong message and a passionate following.

Facing a dangerous political ads

The use of political advertising can be a double-edged sword. On one hand, political advertising can help candidates reach a wider audience and spread their message. On the other hand, it can also be used to spread misinformation and engage in negative campaigning. It is important to be informed and critical when consuming political advertising.

Walkout threat worries Nelson

In Iowa City, Don Nelson, 32, is a quiet, unassuming man known as the coach and general manager of the Milwaukee Bucks. He is a man of few words and great skill, and his team is one of the most successful in the National Basketball Association. Nelson, who was born in 1934 in Des Moines, Iowa, graduated from Iowa State University in 1956 and began his coaching career at Drake University. He later coached at the University of Wisconsin-Milwaukee before being named head coach of the Milwaukee Bucks in 1970.

The usual tight-lipped Nelson said the threat of a walkout by the players is something he finds worrying about. "I'm not even going to talk about it," he said. "I don't know what to say, I'm not even going to think about it."

The first blow a player might deliver to an opponent is the simple possession of the basketball. Nelson, who is 6 feet 9 inches tall, has had more than his share of that in his career. He has been a center for the Milwaukee Bucks since 1964, and in the last few years he has become one of the best centers in the NBA. He averages about 15 points a game and is one of the league's top rebounders.

The threat of a walkout by the players could be a serious blow to the Milwaukee Bucks. The team is one of the best in the league, and Nelson is one of the best coaches. But if the players do go on strike, the Bucks could be hard-pressed to replace Nelson. The team's backup centers are not as good as Nelson.

The players have threatened to strike if the owners don't come to terms with them. Nelson said he didn't even think about the possibility of a strike. "I don't even think about it," he said. "I don't even think about it."

Sugar Babies, a revised and expanded version of the hit Broadway show, is currently on tour. The producers have added a few more scenes and songs, but the basic story remains the same. The show is about a group of friends who are trying to put on a show. They are all out of work, and they need to raise money to keep the show going.

When "The Mary Tyler Moore Show" faded from the airwaves in 1977, I was one of the millions of fans who turned to a white-haired middle-aged man named Dick Van Patten for comfort. Van Patten was known for his role as the beloved "Mr.OPTO," a gentle giant who brought a touch of humor and realism to the show. His character, "Mr. OPTO," was a loving presence in the lives of the other characters, providing a balance to the often-serious tone of the show.

The "Mr. OPTO" character was a natural fit for Van Patten, who is known for his ability to bring depth and humor to his roles. He has appeared in numerous films and television shows, including "The Naked Gun," where he played a hapless insurance salesman who inadvertently sabotages a nuclear reactor.

Van Patten's贡献 to the world of entertainment cannot be overstated. He has touched the lives of millions with his wit and charm, and his legacy will live on through his many memorable roles. Thank you, Dick Van Patten, for being a beloved and talented member of our entertainment family.

The recent critical and commercial success of the independent films Born on the Fourth of July and The Natural is fresh evidence that a new breed of American film—the independent feature—bears watching.

It might prove difficult, however, to patch together a single definition of these films, given the diversity of films which are produced entirely outside the traditional studio system. An independent feature is, by definition, produced outside the major studios and distributed through a different channel than the distributors of major films.

For example, as Hollywood is transformed, Steven Spielberg can be considered an independent filmmaker whose bankable success is the result of a different and highly productive mechanism of film making.

As independent filmmaking grows, it is becoming increasingly important to understand what makes this type of film-making different from the standard Hollywood product. The success of Spielberg is a result of the independent film-making process. As independent filmmakers, Spielberg was able to work on his own terms, without the constraints of the major studios. His films have been critically acclaimed and have been successful commercially.

The Independent Film Center, a non-profit organization in New York City, is one of the few organizations that provides support for independent filmmakers. The Center offers grants and other forms of assistance to filmmakers who wish to make their own films. It also provides a venue for independent films to be screened, and it works to promote the independent film movement.
