Blaze guts downtown Iowa City stores

investigators to determine cause of fire

Terry Talbot

Friday morning, a fire broke out in the basement of a downtown restaurant, sending heat and smoke into the area. The fire, which started in the basement of The Bicycle Shop, spread quickly to nearby businesses, causing extensive damage. The fire marshal's office is investigating the cause of the fire.

Hundreds observe blaze unfolding at fire location

By Paul Drake and Mary Tabor

A daring rescue did occur at the fire location. Shawn Smith, a pedestrian in downtown Iowa City, noticed smoke rising from behind ropes, and called for assistance. He was later joined by others, who together managed to rescue a man trapped in the building.

Rent control policy is in the making

By John Beck

Tight market spawns idea

Supply and demand have been blamed for the tight market in housing, leading to increased rent. However, a new idea has emerged to address the problem, with the hope of stabilizing rents.

Rent control options sought

By Dan Leonard

Although they admired the housing market's extremely tight supply, many agreed that something must be done to ease the pressure. Several options are being considered, including rent control policies.

Fire

Battle chief Roy Wunbrecher was one of the first on the scene when the fire had been burning for about 3 hours. It had to be his last day on the job. The Iowa City Fire Department was called upon to fight a fire that broke out in the nearly 30-year-old building.

"It's hard to put it into words," Wunbrecher said.

The fire department shared their contacts with fire departments in the area, and they were the first to arrive at the scene. The fire was reported to have started on the third floor of the building.

"We were able to get the fire under control," Wunbrecher said.

The fire department worked closely with the Iowa City Police Department to determine the cause of the fire.

Rescue

A firefighter described an apartment at 114 S. Main St. as "a mess." The building was destroyed, and the fire department had to work quickly to get the fire under control.

"We're working on getting the fire out and making sure it doesn't spread," the firefighter said.

The building was home to several residents, and the fire department had to work quickly to get them out safely. The fire department had to use a water cannon to get the fire under control, and the building was declared a total loss.

The fire department also had to work quickly to get the water out of the building and the trucks out of the area.

"We're working on getting the water out of the building," the firefighter said.

Temperatures expected to drop, snow possible

Iowa City is expected to experience a drop in temperatures and the possibility of snow this week. According to the National Weather Service, the temperatures are expected to drop to the 20s on Monday, with a chance of snow.

"The temperatures are expected to drop to the 20s on Monday," a meteorologist said.

The snow is expected to fall on Tuesday, with a chance of snow on Wednesday.

Dr. Kevin Callanan, president of Johnson County Community College, said he was pleased with the success of the college's wellness program. "We've been able to show that our efforts to improve the health of our students and employees are paying off." The program, which was launched last year, has already resulted in savings of several thousand dollars.

"The program has been very successful," Callanan said. "We've seen a significant reduction in health care costs and an increase in employee productivity. We've also been able to attract new students to the college." The college has plans to expand the program in the future.

Callanan praised the efforts of the college's wellness committee, which includes faculty, staff, and students. "They have worked hard to develop a program that is both effective and enjoyable," he said. "I'm proud of the work they have done."
City may revoke Wilke’s license

By Karen Hargis

City officials will not comment until Tuesday on the evidence gathered by Sunday’s raid and operation will not be presented before

By Sunday since the spring survey and city or revoke Christopher Wilke’s liquor

Iowa City, cases. There are pretty strong in dark about the case at the present time, according to Iowa City Mayor

Wilke’s Lounge on Nov. 6 that alleges

Monday. Town Councilman John James, who attended the Sunday raid, said: "The town council has not made its decision about placing a liquor license in the area."

"I don’t think we should comment until we have evidence to support our decision," James said. "But if we have evidence that shows Wilke has violated the law, we will revoke his license.

City Attorney Robert James will present evidence at Tuesday’s formal meeting to support his decision."

Grady, said: "The town council will make a decision on whether to revoke Wilke’s license after hearing evidence presented by the town attorney."

"I think it’s important that we make a decision that is based on the evidence presented by the town attorney," Grady said. "But we will make a decision that is fair and just to all parties involved."

Rent

But rents have gone up in almost all towns that have rent controls, attorney determined that

"I’d pass a rent control ordinance before the summer," said Grady. "It’s important that we take action to prevent rent control for Iowa City."

"The town council will consider a rent control ordinance before the end of next year," Grady said. "It’s important that we take action to prevent rent control for Iowa City."

Recreation

In Davenport, with city officials from towns that have rent controls, Nauert said it was not surprising that

"I don’t believe that rent control has had a significant impact on the quality of life in Iowa City," Nauert said. "The quality of life in Iowa City is not affected by rent control.

"I believe that rent control has had a negative impact on the economy in Iowa City," Nauert said. "The economy in Iowa City is negatively affected by rent control."

Celebrating tragedy

Iowa City was a bachelor's Friday night. An empty herd of several hundred spectators gathered on a midnight downtown block that got a downtown building and fire engines to sweep through several businesses.

Most of the unruly were UI students. It was festive to watch them enjoy the tragedy as it was a festival. They laughed as buildings crumbled and fell, and they hooted as people who were treated were driven from the rubble.

Certainly behavior stands out. When a model walked around the ruin, he braved the rubble of all; he blackened his face, sang, and the audience roared.

The assertion that suicide is due to a lack of rational thought is not valid. The reason why I am interested in suicide and the consideration of sui- cide victims is that what I thought happened sometimes happens all the time. The memory of others, I think, is not as vivid as the memory of others who are interested in suicide.

Perhaps, if they serve any purpose at all, it's to remind us how good most people are.

Teen suicide

To the editor:

In your article on Teenage Suicide, I was very disturbed and shocked by the title and content, which implied that the rising suicide rate in young adults could be blamed on "weak minds." I am a parent of three children.

It is very distressing to learn that our children may be subjected to such derogatory terms.

The rates for the 100 presidential nominations are in. Is anybody interested? Ted Kennedy announced his call to run. Is anybody listening? Probably not.

Bauman pushes Bulldogs past Iowa

Hawkeyes fall to No. 14 Penn State

By Brad Luers

Sports Editor

Iowa athletics/high school

Larry Bauman may have been a little out of shape. His legs looked a little tired. But that didn't stop him from scoring a game-high 18 points as the Bulldogs overcame the Hawkeyes 40-39 in the zone defense.

Bauman's performance was a major factor in the Bulldogs' victory over Iowa. He hit 7-of-12 shots from the field and 2-of-3 free throws. He also had five rebounds.

"I was really pleased with Larry's performance," Head Coach Fran McCaffery said. "He played a great game and really made a difference tonight."

Gaye's debut album on Motown, "M-Power," is available now. The album includes the hit single "Sexual Healing." Gaye's multi-tracked vocals and rhythmic sense are said to be even more powerful than those of the earlier Motown releases. Gaye's manager, Berry Gordy, Jr., said that the album is a more successful combination of his contract with Motown and his expressed desire for artistic control of both his music and image.

Gaye, a versatile performer, has managed to break the hit-single mold with his new album. In addition to "Sexual Healing," Gaye also recorded two gospel songs, "Til Tomorrow," and "Let's Get It On." Gaye has managed to combine his passion for music with his desire to express himself.

Truly balanced performance needed in faculty concert

By John Vardal

Throughout the history of chamber music, the concept of "balance" has undergone some change. From the Muscularian ideal of Bach's Trio Sonata to the more modern emphasis of the piano in Beethoven's Violin Sonata No. 10 ("For pensive and lively") and then on to the musical admiration of Beethoven's Violin Sonata, the composer's emphasis on one instrument or another, or both, or neither," tells something about his time, his thinking and his music. The performance of Bach's Chaconne for violin solo, as performed in the University of Iowa's music department, was a true reflection of its "spirituality," "artistic" quality that made the improvisation memorable. The way the music was written and played, with great spirit, was nothing to compare to the partner's and original spirit from the Bach's own talent which, though well interpreted, even against Bach's strictures.

The performers seemed to disagree about the merits of the interpretations, but, in a way that worked to the student's advantage. One could hear the deep cultural understanding conveyed in the score, that was raised purely higher tension than usual.

LaFosse is always pleased with his orchestra's playing, which is no surprise, considering the history of the University's music program. The performers seemed to be getting off a sheet that had been shown up to the music, and the way that this one of the Bristol Street violin solo was very pretty in the hear.

Music was the masterpiece of a brilliant composer."

Chaconne for violin solo is a fine piece of that. LaFosse seemed to be remembering the importance of Bach's violin music.

"I was suggested," Briskin told The Mirror, "I could have been a great Philip Poon," and ended up looking a little red. I would be happy to tell if the program hadn't gone ahead.

Zsa Zsa's donation pierced

LONDON (UPI) — The Zsa Zsa Gabor donation dispute clogged the courts in Prince Philip's wildlife charity, but six months later the action and a British legal aid were still ongoing as the much-travelled Gabor was again an international figure.

The Sunday Mirror and Zsa Zsa bought the Zebra to Britain for the World Wildlife Fund but the donation to the Fund's mother, Princess Grace of Monaco, was called off at the last minute. Zsa Zsa is Prince Philip's cousin.

"The public interest in this matter is to raise money for the Fund headed by the husband of Queen Elizabeth."

Briskin requested that the London Weekend, Pall Mall Express, and the Evening Standard be made to pay the legal fees for the Fund. Zsa Zsa said they were very poor, the newspaper said.

"I was suggested," Briskin told The Mirror, "I could have been a great Philip Poon," and ended up looking a little red. I would be happy to tell if the program hadn't gone ahead.

Zsa Zsa, who was back in the United States where the presentation was expected and astronomers to demand that the Mirror's Philip and Claire Cooper Zsa Zsa be named, was a master of that. "They are not made of diamonds," the performance went, and when the people thought about that, one of the most popular in England.

"The whole situation is embarrassing," said Briskin.

Zsa Zsa was in England for a week's charity work, but the diamond business, filled with problems. Briskin had personally returned the earnings to Zsa Zsa after the fund.
