Projected state budget gloomy

Debates SUSP - "The Iowa Legislature's chief budget analyst said a gloomy revenue report Thursday and said the state budget may have to be cut in the next session, though the House and Senate may not do it.

"The projections have been revised downward," said State Economist Bryant B. Morrill. "We have a lot of work to do before the legislature meets again." Jack Brown, the state economist, confirmed the report and said it was based on a gloomy revenue outlook.

"The projections are based on the assumption that the economy will continue to grow at a moderate rate," Morrill said. "The state budget will have to be cut in the next session." Brown said the state budget will have to be cut in the next session.

Added block grant monies may fund Creekside project

By Mark Leonard

A project in the Creekside neighborhood which is hoped will central funding there may possibly be funded through Community Development Block Funds was released Saturday to the Cedar Rapids City Council at their Tuesday meeting. A project that was previously shelved due to lack of funding today is not only ready for funding but is also a worthy project.

The city is hopeful that the project will be approved by the council because it is expected to bring much needed improvements to the neighborhood. The project involves the construction of a new park, a community center, and a senior center. The project is estimated to cost $15 million and is expected to take two years to complete.

The council will hold a special meeting on January 15th to discuss the project and vote on whether to approve funding. The meeting will be held at 7:00 pm at the City Hall. The public is welcome to attend and voice their support or concerns about the project.

WATT said Thursday some of his most bitter opponents differed from his own, but added, "Yesterday I asked on ABC's Weekend World if the President could serve the administration better if he had done what I did. And he said 'yes.'"

The lawmakers recommend adoption of a traditional registration system that would be used only in time of a national military emergency.

"Our preferred system is, in fact, a superior system to guaranteed draft registration and would meet with greater acceptability in time of peace," Coates told a news conference. "Replacement of this system for another will be necessary because an estimated 40 percent of the male population now on selective service lists are delinquent.

Under the plan backed by the lawmakers, the Selective Service would retain staff and computer equipment and set up offices that would go into effect if President declared a national emergency.

Following such a declaration, the Selective Service staff would register on a single day at local post offices throughout the country, and those 18 through 26 eligible men would be drafted into the service."

Washington, D.C.—A bipartisan group of congressional leaders introduced legislation Thursday to abolish the peace-time draft registration system that is the target of a legal challenge and that some senators said is a "stain" on the nation's image at a time when the country is fighting a war.

"We have an obligation to the American people to change the registration system and the draft law to provide for the most effective and most acceptable way to maintain our military readiness," said Senator Frank R. Church, Oregon Democrat, sponsor of the legislation introduced by Representatives Martin Sabo, Minnesota Democrat, and Bill Green, New York Democrat.

"The most frequent reaction was, 'Gee, that's totally out of character,'" said Senator Sam Nunn, Georgia Democrat, who was a signer of the legislation that passed the Senate by a 93-7 vote last week. "Then we explained to them what we are doing."

In all, 580,000 people—men over age 18—signed up for an eight-week period when the 3218th Missile Maintenance Group stationed at Grand Forks AFB was opened to registration last month. Of these, 84,545 were indicated as eligible for military service and 80,000 of these were notified of their eligibility.

"Most people who have been drafted and called for induction have been required to register under the current system and were not even notified of their induction status because there was no official notification," said Senator John F. Kennedy, Massachusetts Democrat, a sponsor of the legislation.

"This weekend is the first time registration is being voluntary. We have an obligation to the American people to change the registration system and the draft law to provide for the most effective and most acceptable way to maintain our military readiness," said Senator Frank R. Church, Oregon Democrat, sponsor of the legislation introduced by Representatives Martin Sabo, Minnesota Democrat, and Bill Green, New York Democrat.

FBI: War on organized crime successful

WASHINGTON (UPI) - The country's war on organized crime is nearing a successful conclusion, government officials say, as defections and convictions have led to the war against organized crime and related criminal activities and the successful prosecution of the bosses and hierarchy of a number of major criminal organizations.

"The FBI is now in the process of dismantling organized crime," said FBI Director William Webster. "We are making significant headway against organized crime, which they said is a crisis of the '70s."

"We have never seen a more determinate moment," Webster said. "The fact-finder will have two weeks to decide what that means."

"We have never seen this moment," Webster said. "This is the turning point."

"We have never seen this moment," Webster said. "This is the moment when the bosses and hierarchy of organized crime are being brought down."

Reagan rues tax comment; aides try to dampen issue

WASHINGTON (UPI) - President Reagan said Thursday he has given himself a swift kick for suggesting in a recent speech that the country's economic recovery is being threatened by forces that would abort a recovery or help recovery, but they are only one factor and the recovery is far from over.

"I said yesterday I would kick myself for having said that," Reagan said at a news conference Thursday after flagging the suggestion before a group of business leaders at the Godfrey Hotel in New York.

After making the comments Wednesday, Reagan had to defend himself in other legislation battles. He later admitted his remarks regarding the recovery or threat of a recovery had been ill-advised and that Congress would support him with a tax cut in order to lower interest rates.

"We're in the horse race," the speaker said.

"I've been on the front line. It is not the back," said Saturday, adding "I've never been through something like this before."

Late last week, with intensive television exposure and a massive pay television audience under the north basket, the Hoosiers were getting the best team in the state. It was a big game, a banner day for Indiana basketball, a chance to make the fans believe in the regional champion.

THE HUSTLERS, in the Big Ten, are the big boys, and right now they're looking at the 12-30-4 M-F pace, which looks like a good time for the Hoosiers. Coach Tom McGuire is a veteran coach, and his team is looking forward to the challenge of playing a tough team.

High jumper rises above high obstables to set record

Trevor Rice

Iowa Hawkeyes

Trevor Rice, a 6-foot-4 junior from Perry, Iowa, set a high jump record indoors when he jumped 7 feet, 7 1/2 inches at the Big Ten indoor track and field meet in Columbus, Ohio, last weekend. Rice broke the record set by former Illinois standout Tim Needham in 1984.

Rice, who was second at the Big Ten meet with a mark of 7-0 1/2, set the new mark as a member of the Illini. Needham, who now coaches at Illinois, held the record for 18 years.

The previous Big Ten record of 7-0 1/2 was set by Nebraska's Mike McMullen at the conference meet in 1983.

Rice said he was pleased with his performance, but he was even more impressed with the atmosphere at the meet.

"It's always exciting to jump when the competition is tough," Rice said. "You can't help but get fired up in front of a crowd like that."

Spotlight on the Super Bowl - A look at the Super Bowl. This year's edition featured the New England Patriots against the Los Angeles Rams. The Patriots dominated the game, scoring 31-20 to win their fourth Super Bowl in six years. The game was a tale of two teams: the Patriots were the superior team in every aspect of the game, while the Rams were a team that was simply outmatched. The Patriots' defense was the key to victory, holding the Rams to just 20 points.

Moseley and the Bears have secured their spots in the Super Bowl. The Bears are the only team to have a perfect record, winning all 16 games this season. The Bears' defense has been the key to their success, allowing just 178 points all season. The Patriots' offense, led by Tom Brady, has been equally dominant, scoring 413 points. The game is sure to be a showdown of two of the best teams in the league.
