Fiscal aid assured for DRINC

By Dan Hunter

In the next 10 days, Sen. Alan Cranston of California, head of the Senate Select Committee on Improper Payments, will arrive in Des Moines. He will visit with state officials and state legislators.

Sen. Cranston is investigating improper payments to members of the Iowa legislature, a matter that is being handled by the state's Director of Budgets, James L. Ashby.

Sen. Cranston has said he will not accept the Iowa legislature's explanation of the payments. He will conduct a thorough investigation to determine whether the payments were in violation of federal laws.

Sen. Cranston has also threatened to withhold federal funds from Iowa unless the state takes steps to prevent similar payments from occurring in the future.

Sen. Cranston's visit is expected to be brief, as he will be in Washington for other matters. However, his arrival is likely to cause a stir in Des Moines, where state officials are on high alert.

Sen. Cranston is a member of the Senate Finance Committee, which has jurisdiction over federal budget matters. He is known for his aggressive approach to investigating improper payments, and his probe of Iowa's payments is likely to receive extensive coverage in the media.

Sen. Cranston's visit is likely to put pressure on Iowa's elected officials to take action to prevent similar payments from occurring in the future. It is unclear what actions the state will take, but it is likely that Sen. Cranston's visit will prompt a flurry of activity in Des Moines.

Sen. Cranston's visit is expected to be a major event in Des Moines, and state officials are preparing for his arrival. They are likely to receive a warm reception from the public, as Sen. Cranston is a popular member of Congress.

Sen. Cranston's visit is also likely to be a turning point in Iowa's political landscape, as it is expected to lead to significant changes in the state's budget and financial policies.

Cronin up for job

Joe Ui Community School District Superintendent David Cronin said he will enter as a candidate for the superintendent job there.

Cronin said he had not decided whether he would run if he lost his job there last week when the school board decided against his recommendation.

"It's been a good experience and I will apply for other schools," Cronin said. "I have a lot of experience and there's still a lot of other places that I can continue my experience and I still want to be in education." The board said that he was not a good candidate for a school superintendent.

Adult Student Association to meet

To attract new members, the newly organized UI Adult Student Association will hold its first membership meeting Monday in the CRSS Room in the CRSS. According to member Carole Allender, there are currently 25 members of the association.

The group will meet on the first Thursday of the month and is open to anyone who wants to continue their education in a school setting.

Student study finds 5 UI buildings are not accessible to handicapped

By John Timmes

Nicaragua claims U.S. responsible for oil explosion after rebel attack

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (UPI) - Nicaraguan President Anastasio Somoza reported Saturday that U.S. military personnel had participated in an attempted explosion, at least 100 hands and an embarrassing national capital, of a fuel tank near Managua, in the heart of the city.

The explosion, which occurred late Friday night, destroyed a large portion of the city's fuel supply and left the capital without electricity or water for hours. Somoza said the attack was the latest in a series of similar incidents that have been increasing in frequency in recent weeks.

Somoza accused the United States of being behind the attack, alleging that U.S. military forces had been involved in the planning and execution of the operation. He said that the attack was part of a broader campaign by the United States to destabilize and undermine the government of Nicaragua.

The attack comes amid growing tensions between Nicaragua and the United States, with both countries accusing each other of interference in their internal affairs. Somoza has repeatedly called for an end to U.S. support for the Contras, a rebel group fighting against his government.

Somoza said that the government was working to determine the extent of the damage and to assess the impact on the country's economy. He also called for increased security measures to prevent similar attacks in the future.

China Communists
begin purging party

China's Communist Party launched a massive, three-year campaign Wednesday to purge millions of party members, including radical leaders who opposed the party's policies.

A resolution from the Communist Party's Central Committee, released at the conclusion of a two-day meeting, said the "national revolutionary campaign" would begin the winter and last three years, purging millions of "counter-revolutionary elements" within the party.

The resolution was seen as a major crackdown on political dissidents and others who opposed the party's policies.

The resolution sets the stage for a purge of the party's top ranks, and raises questions about the future of the party and its leader, Xi Jinping.

The resolution comes as the party faces growing challenges from both domestic and international sources.

The party has faced criticism for suppressing dissent and压制言论 freedom, as well as for its handling of the coronavirus pandemic.

The resolution also sets the stage for a purge of the party's top ranks, and raises questions about the future of the party and its leader, Xi Jinping.

Christopher Matthews, an Iowa City resident, has been receiving letters from family and friends about the current events that have taken place in the Middle East. He said, "It's been a tough time for many of us, especially those who are deployed overseas.

The President's plan is to withdraw American forces from the region by the end of the year. Many believe this is a positive move towards peace and stability.

The situation continues to evolve, with challenges and uncertainties. But, as a nation, we must remain committed to working towards a better future for everyone.

A private future?

Is the University of Iowa in danger of becoming a private enterprise?

The struggles in the UI's most burning dilemma now seem to be the pattern in Iowa. The UI has been without a president for three years, and the University Board of Regents has not been able to agree on a suitable candidate to fill the position. It seems that the UI is in turmoil and struggling to find a solution.

With the University Board of Regents at odds and the UI without a leader, the future of the university seems uncertain. The UI needs a strong leader to guide it through these difficult times and ensure its continued success.

However, the UI's problems may not be limited to its leadership. The University Board of Regents has been criticized for its lack of transparency and for making decisions without adequate consultation with the UI community. This has contributed to theUI's current challenges.

In conclusion, the University of Iowa is facing a critical moment in its history. It is essential that the UI find a strong leader to guide it through these difficult times and ensure its continued success.

Politics impedes benefice public

IT'S A PECULIARLY AMERICAN paradox that political correctness works best in the private sector. At least more successfully, it seems to reduce a landscape great public interest. But this, if anything, is on its way to disappearing, with its "prophets" gone quietly. The political correctness that once ruled the academic and business worlds is now largely a thing of the past.

The corporate world is a different matter. Companies are now more careful about what they say and how they say it, and their leaders are increasingly aware of the importance of maintaining a positive public image. This has led to a greater emphasis on corporate social responsibility and a focus on building trust with stakeholders.

This is not to say that there are no issues in the corporate world. Indeed, there are a number of challenges, including the ongoing issue of diversity and inclusion. However, the corporate world has made significant progress in recent years and is working to address these issues.

In conclusion, while political correctness may have run its course in the public sphere, it continues to play a role in the corporate world. Companies are taking steps to ensure that their messages are clear and that they are being genuine about their commitments to social and environmental issues.

The academic value of a presidential library

THE ACADEMIC VALUE of a presidential library, which would be open to Stanford students and faculty as well as visiting scholars, is in question. The library would be a repository of materials related to the presidency and would be a center for research and academic study. However, the cost and feasibility of such a library are still under debate.

In conclusion, while the academic value of a presidential library is in question, the potential benefits are significant. By providing access to materials related to the presidency, the library could contribute to the study of American history and government. It would also serve as a center for research and academic study.
In the United States, the Reagan administration had not seen an end to the arms negotiations since the talks began two years ago.

The two-hour, 55-minute meeting in Geneva between Nitze and Kvitsinsky was scheduled to be deployed in Western Europe by the end of the year.

Kvitsinsky would say.

"What we need to do," said Peter Boenisch, told these diplomats that the Soviet Union, which the West German government confirmed, would not change its strategy even if the talks extended to Strategic Arms Talks meeting under a Kremlin threat to break off the talks.

Soviets must extend the talks, and Western diplomats would have no comment on Zamyatin's remarks.

Baldwin said that he would be prepared to present new proposals through before leaving Washington, D.C.

"If we can't get these things done by the end of the week, we'll have to break off the talks.

So, we need to keep pushing these proposals through before leaving Washington, D.C.

Sooner's Dupree found; will return to the squad

BY DEAN ANDERSON

It was tense for a while, but the Sooners' one significant injury this season has been healed. As the Sooners continued to practice Wednesday afternoon, a scared player with a black eye and a mask was presented to an adoring fan. The player was soon identified as one of the Sooners' most important players, defense end Reggie Dupree.

Dupree, who had been out since August 26th due to a broken cheekbone, returned to practice and was immediately put into the starting lineup. The Sooners' defense, which had been struggling without Dupree, received a much-needed boost with his return.

The Sooners' offense also benefited from Dupree's return, as he was able to help stop the Philadelphia offense. Dupree's ability to rush the quarterback and disrupt plays was missed during his absence, and his return will be a welcome addition to the Sooners' defense.

The Sooners' coach, C. L. Switzer, said of Dupree, "We haven't seen him since the spring, and we're really excited to have him back. He's a key player for us, and we're looking forward to seeing what he can do for us."

Injuries have been a problem for the Hawkeyes' injuries, except for the Hufford's knee problems, seem to be rather small after last week's game really gives people a chance to meet a lot of new people that they may have been hesitant to write to, "It's a thankless one," Dennis Napel, a resident assistant at the Residence Services, said. "I enjoy playing some of the referees and officials do is that of a volunteer."

Numerous nagging injuries cripple cross country team

By D.J. Gunas

The Iowa State cross country team has faced a new challenge this season—one that has plagued the Hawkeye football squad in recent years. Because the times are read d with injuries, Coach Ted Wheeler has had to reshuffle his lineup at least once each week.

Wheeler said the Hawkeyes were lucky that there are various minor injuries to the Hawkeyes. Among the "walking wounded" are Captain Evan Johnson, who managed the Mets' Tidewater squad in 1980, and Dave Johnson as their manager. Johnson, who set the major league record of 7,000 consecutive games played with an injury-free streak, is currently the manager of the Mets. He had his record home run season with the Mets in 1980 and was a regular starter on their 1980 and 1981 World Series teams. He was with the club in 1978 and 1980, spent most of 1979 and 1981 in the majors and had a career .265 batting average with the Phillies and in his last 16 years.
Iowa 'Comedy' lacks wit, flair

By Richard Perez

ROMANTIC COMEDY doesn't equal romantic comedy. The genre isn't a sanction, a way of doing things. It's a case of how many times between Broadway and Hollywood, for it's in an impressionable state. Only in a generous sort of the imagination do we find a case of it. Basically, it's a mess.

The problem for romantic comedy is that it's at odds with the world. The world is not a romantic comedy. The world is not romantic comedy. The world is not a romantic comedy.

But it's not, original, or there wouldn't be a movie — and, before this, a Broadway at the center of it. The two plays, however, further a romantic comedy for each other; it's a sort of state of the world through romantic comedy. It is a sort of position of a romantic comedy.

Along the Way, they engage in the only behavior beholden to actresses on Broadway. This story concerns itself with set-up and pay-off and other habits in characterizations. Logic in the time when the pack has become style.

After Jones suffers a solid heart attack, he is, of course, in love with Phoebe and she, in love with Jason. But the trip to New York is going to be a thriller, and not, of course, the sort of story that will work.

Logic is likewise a victim to author Bertrand Blist's unions of "perky" to play for the screen. The screen shows, the screen's mystery, because much ought to be

LATEST ALBUM BY FLEETWOOD IS PLEASANT, IF UNSUBSTANTIAL

By Al Hayes

O T THE EDITOR, Mick Fleetwood's latest album project away from Fleetwood Mac is an impressive attempt to explore a new sound. The album is a departure from his previous work, focusing on a more experimental and introspective approach.

Despite the name-change from Buckingham Nicks to Simply Nicks, the core elements of the band's sound remain intact. The album features a blend of rock and folk influences, with Fleetwood providing a solid foundation of drums and percussion.

The album's most notable feature is the use of unconventional recording techniques, such as the incorporation of ambient sounds and the manipulation of tape. These techniques add a unique, almost otherworldly quality to the music, making it stand out from Fleetwood's previous work.

While the overall sound of the album is intriguing, the lyrics and songwriting are not as strong as one might expect from a artist of Fleetwood's caliber. The album contains a few standout tracks, but overall it lacks the depth and emotion that are typically associated with Fleetwood's earlier work.

Despite these limitations, the album is definitely worth a listen for fans of Fleetwood and for anyone interested in experimental music. It represents a bold step forward for the artist, and shows that he is not afraid to take risks and try new things.

In summary, Mick Fleetwood's latest album is a mixed bag. While it may not be as strong as his previous work, it is definitely a unique and interesting effort that deserves some attention. It is a testament to Fleetwood's artistic integrity and willingness to push the boundaries of his craft.
It was not difficult to imagine the Metropolitan Opera being the cyberpunk protagonist of a computer-generated motion picture, its expansive sets made available to the producer in cyberspace, or the climactic set-piece of broadside special effects, projected with the aid of high-speed video screens and sophisticated animation software, presenting the illusion of stage movement by the flickering images of the deafening crowd. Because it's always developing. But it was the overall effect of the set-dress and decoration—on which the audience could not only see the plot, but also hear the orchestral accompaniment—from the stands, that impressed me most. The lighting was perfect, the sound clear, the acting superb, the sets breathtaking, the costumes dazzling. The audience was held captive by the vividly interwoven threads of the story and the visual spectacle of the opera. The effect was both thrilling and beautiful, creating a truly state-of-the-art production.
