UI appeals to high court over Black case

By Patricia Thorn

The University of Iowa brought an appeal to the highest court available over a decision by the Iowa Supreme Court last year. The university wants the high court to review its decision dismissing Black's case.

The USATC was asked by the court to define the term "black" in the context of the university's policy. The court found that the definition did not include Black, who is of Hispanic descent.

The USATC has been asked by the university to reconsider its decision. The university is seeking to overturn the decision and to have Black reinstated.

The USATC is scheduled to hear arguments in the case on October 21.

Despite tuition increase, aid stands still

By John Brown

The University of Iowa has announced that it will increase tuition by 6 percent for the upcoming academic year.

The increase, the third in recent years, will bring the total cost of tuition to $3,900 for in-state students and $6,000 for out-of-state students.

However, the university has also announced that it will increase aid to students by 6 percent, bringing the total amount of aid to $2.5 million.

The increase in aid is expected to help offset the increase in tuition.

The university has also announced that it will increase the number of scholarships and grants available to students.

The increase in aid is expected to help offset the increase in tuition.

Iowa families with severe disabilities will face increased costs under a new state program. The program, known as the "Special Needs Trust," was approved by the Iowa Legislature earlier this year.

The program is designed to help families with children who have special needs, such as cerebral palsy or autism. The trust allows families to set aside money to pay for the special needs of their child, while protecting their eligibility for state and federal benefits.

Several families have already applied for the program, and the Iowa Department of Human Services is currently reviewing their applications. The program is expected to start accepting applications in early 2024.

Rebels blast Nicaraguan town, kill 46

Hundreds of anti-Sandinista rebels attacked the northern town of Tach Tuesday and the northern town of Jinotega, according to government sources. The rebels were best served. Ceiling watchers Complacency in much more dangerous than any conceivable glitch.

The board of Regents, a notoriously tractable bunch, passed and bawled Wednesday about raising UI and Iowa State University's non-resident tuition 13 percent. The increase in non-resident undergraduate next year seems like a drop in the bucket for Freedman not something to lobby heartily against.

Less than two years ago, Freedman was a dean at the University of Pennsylvania where undergraduate tuition is $10,700 per semester, and graduate and professional colleges cost $18,700 per semester.

The reality, which passed with a questionable mandate of 10 votes, will help fund this organization that is pushing for a student member on the board, based on the interests of students from all three state universities.

If the students themselves don't want enough to vote, who will watch out for their interests?

Lessons in IMF

Opposition of a bill to increase U.S. contributions to the International Monetary Fund or IMEM is determined to use the U.S. banking industry a lesson. Don't invest in the International Bank, because of the impact on the country's economy and foreign policy.

The United States and the IMF (or International Monetary Fund) is possibly the most important international mechanism to help developing countries pay staggering debts, has brought loans from some members of Congress. Opponents say banks might be more creative with their investments, and don't expect the government to bail them out. Besides, they wonder about the IMF's overall goals.

The United States has more at stake in this bill than teaching a lesson to its neighbors and potential enemies. Even economically and politically, IMF's existence and goals are important to the U.S., and the IMF could help avoid a loss to at least one nation - Brazil, Mexico and Argentina, a country already teetering on the edge of international debt.

IMF was created in the late 1940s of World War II when America was trying to balance its war-time currency to prevent widespread global defaults that caused the pre-World War II's collapse in 1930. Its programs are designed to help developing nations pay their debts while balancing high trade deficits.

It is essential for the U.S. to develop and maintain open markets for its products, since almost 29 percent of all U.S. goods are exported. If the proposed transfer, the money would be used by American banks. Without U.S. investment, the country could not hope to maintain a competitive, lasting economic balance. Millions of jobs would be at risk.

For the country, it seems that the IMF has shown its true colors.

In the US, the United States has used the IMF to exert influence over Third World countries that normally avoid entanglement with Western financial institutions. The IMF is seeing this country as its bank, dealing directly with the countries, through American save or sell, or plow their way through low priorities.

Proponents of the IMF's removal are countries that are heavily indebted to the IMF and that would benefit from the bill's neutral or progress towards IMF as a finance source. Remember this the next time you see them advocating for IMF's removal or eliminating the IMF's role in the international economic scene.

But, there are those who say this won't be easy. They fear that history repeats itself, and the IMF will continue to exist as a virtuality, the IMF, the G-7 and other major nations will continue to exist as a regulatory, the IMF, the G-7 and other major nations will continue to exist as a regulatory, the IMF, the G-7 and other major nations will continue to exist as a regulatory, the IMF, the G-7 and other major nations will continue to exist as a regulatory, the IMF, the G-7 and other major nations will continue to exist as a regulatory.

This year's Wolverine squad appears equal to any of the previous versions, a seldom situation. The team presents a consistent and a strong defense. Though the quarterback situation as flaky as those quarterbacks Long, the Wolverine defense seems capable of stopping the Michigan attack and has consistently prevented the Wolverines from scoring in most of this year's games. Count Basie and band can't wait for the stage

One of the all-time great bandleaders, Count Basie, brings his new "Living History" band to town tonight for an evening of authentic Kansas City music. Though there aren't many followers left of the original band and its music, Count Basie has always prided himself on keeping the tradition alive and for that reason he has occasionally assembled a group of top musicians to recreate his early bands.

These days he has changed that pace. Now Basie considered an elder statesman in his field, Basie is more likely to assemble an ensemble of top soloists to play his music. Still, the music of the old bands is part of the legacy that makes Basie's music so special.

All of which means you can still see a great performance of the music that inspired so many others. The band features some of the finest jazz musicians around and their performance is sure to be one of the highlights of the night.

Tickets are $35 at the door. For more information, call 123-4567.
Schedl sculpture embodies strength in ethereal forms

By Suzanne Fischer

For an exhibition at the Amory Gallery of Gurnell College, the sculptor created a group of sculptures that combine the melodies of music and the beauty of nylon which was used as the medium for the work.

The sculptures are made of monofilament, a strong, durable material that can be shaped and molded into intricate forms. The sculptures are also painted with acrylics to add a layer of color and texture to the pieces.

The monofilament is wrapped around a form, creating a sense of movement and fluidity. The sculptures are then suspended from the ceiling, allowing them to swing and move in the air.

The sculptures are displayed in the gallery, where visitors can walk around and view them from all angles. The sculptures are also lighted to highlight their intricate details and the way they interact with the light.

The exhibition is open to the public, and visitors are encouraged to take their time and explore the sculptures. The gallery is open from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. Monday through Saturday and from 12 noon to 5 p.m. on Sunday.

For more information, please contact the Amory Gallery at 530-1234.

Visual, aural collaboration unites ‘The Photographer’

By John Volok
Art&Entertainment Editor

NEW YORK — There is a sort of meta-nature to the way one takes away from the most recent crop of contemporary performances and practices — a measure of the form having enough history to be stage-ing at the end of its own precipitation.

Once the aura of the new fades, seeing the recent works of traditional practitioners or of new faces of old masters, one finds oneself critical.

The New Wave Festival’s opening, The Photographer, Past From the Punchboard, shared the growing aspect of modern creative work. The Brooklyn Academy of Music production, while almost completely revamped, borrowed the music and set elements from a 1990 production titled The Doubles. The performance, which used on-screen imagery and projected quality, Philip Glass’ music.

The box out of the show emerged from the foundations. "Movement constructor" David Gordon, who insists on the title rather than the in-

.tomogeneous ‘choreographer,” said he was asked by JoAnne Akalaitis, BAM Director of Dance and Theatre, to contribute a few insights — "mainly a new statement.”

The original collaborative aspect of the piece wasn’t tampered with, however, just altered to fit the new circumstances. "Though I wished to involve... I still wanted to use as few people as possible," he said. "I found out that if you added another element, they wanted to play way too much playing that element." Gordon’s producers were especially in line with the idea of The Photographer (the title and the format were both revised) but wanted a new, devotedly New York flavor of creators. That Akalaitis and Gordon were called to shape the work for both early the performance (now BAM’s ‘Opening at Cityplace”) emphasizes the aspect of the collaborative form.

"I have a definite idea of what I thought she could get at Gordon said, "and she did and I followed along," but would better connect theAgain New York’sabinities — in essence of body

Nicks and Walsh to rock the Arena

The Midwest Committee on Programming and Ex-ducation and the University of Iowa have embarked on the second concert season under "strange, good" conditions, program has been called "good seed" into the mix, Nov. 23 at the University of Iowa Athletic Center. "The idea is for Nick to concert goers in the area to enjoy the music," Walsh said.

 깳PF said that the show would play the Arena on Nov. 23 at 8:30 p.m. and "not try to sell tickets on-line," since the tickets will be available at the door. The show is expected to sell out, according to Walsh.

WAAS Walsh's most recent album was You Brought It, You Name It, and his appearance in Iowa City will be his last Iowa show before his West Coast tour. "I have a lot of friends in Iowa, and I’ve never been in a state with so many friends," he said. "I’m not going to try to sell tickets on-line, since I want to make sure everyone gets a chance to go to the show." The tickets are expected to go on sale on Oct. 21, and the show is expected to be a sell-out. "It’s going to be a really good show," Walsh said.

Details about the show can be found on the University of Iowa’s website, or by contacting the Midwest Committee on Programming and Education at 319-335-1430. The show will have a ferry to the arena, and will include a VIP section for the fans. The show is expected to last for about two hours, and will feature Walsh's usual eclectic mix of music. The show is expected to be a sell-out, and fans are encouraged to purchase tickets early.
