U.S. pushes more troops into Grenada

U.S. President Ronald Reagan has ordered the deployment of additional troops to Grenada, including 250 military personnel, to support efforts to remove the island's pro-communist government.

In a speech Wednesday, Reagan announced the move, saying, "We have a responsibility to prevent a catastrophic situation from developing on the island." The decision comes in response to the recent wrenching of the deposed Grenada government.

Grenada has been a key test case for the U.S. policy of bringing democracy to small island nations. The island's government has been overthrown by a military coup, and there are reports of widespread human rights violations.

The move also raises questions about the future of the U.S. military presence in the region. Some analysts have suggested that the deployment of additional troops could lead to a larger U.S. military presence in the Caribbean.

In a statement, a spokesman for the White House said, "This is a necessary step to protect U.S. interests and to support the democratic forces in Grenada."
Filipinos protest U.S. bases

The Philippine government's objection to the presence of American military bases in the Philippines has generated massive demonstrations in recent weeks. The government has expressed strong opposition to the continued presence of U.S. military bases, citing concerns over sovereignty and national security. The protests have been widespread, with many Filipinos expressing their dissatisfaction with the bases and the exploitation of their country.

Report: Raise teaching standards

By Ken Brown

Students seeking an education college and public schools to merit more rigorous standards for hiring teachers. "The Iowa City community is very interested in the proposal," said Leonard S. McMullen, president of the Iowa College. "There is no doubt that the report will be discussed in public meetings and in the media." The report, published by the Iowa State University, "asserts that the standards for teaching and the criteria for evaluating teachers need to be strengthened." "The report also emphasizes that the faculty members should be prepared to meet the demands of the educational system," said McMullen.

Contributions flow from numerous sources for city council candidates

By Rolyn Groppe

As the Nov. 8, Iowa City council election date nears, several of the candidates are reporting a significant increase in campaign contributions.

Most of the candidates said, however, they are on the receiving end of requests from special interest groups to fund their campaigns.

“(We) are receiving contributions from individuals,” said District A candidate Mark Zuber, emphasizing all of his funds come from individual contributors.

In contrast, Philip Nychay, a candidate for the Iowa City Local of the Municipal Employees Union, emphasized contributions were received from the Iowa City Local of the AFL-CIO.

IOWA CITY Federation of Labor President Tom Jacobs said the union will be endorsing candidates and helping to solicit funds and mailing to all union members in the Iowa City area, as well as possibly asking for people to support him.

The decision to endorse Nychay stems from a letter that he, his family, and friends received from the union about a month ago.

The union also sent out a letter to union members calling for contributions.

“ADDITIONS IN contributions are coming in from several areas,” said Nychay.

Films

Fassbinder's genius is on full display in the new film "Querelle," a powerful and eloquent cinematic statement. The film, directed by Werner Herzog, is based on Jean Genet's novel of the same name, which explores themes of sexuality, identity, and the search for self-fulfillment.

The story centers around Querelle, a transvestite who, after serving time in prison, returns to the French town where he was once a popular figure. Querelle's return stirs up a storm of emotions among the townspeople, as they grapple with their own desires and fears.

Herzog's film adaptation is both visually stunning and emotionally resonant. The cinematography, by the renowned Darius Khondji, is a feast for the eyes, capturing the oppressive atmosphere of the town and the contradictions of Querelle's character.

The performances, particularly those of Nicoletta Braschi as Querelle and Jérémie Renier as a young man who becomes entangled with him, are utterly captivating. Braschi's portrayal of Querelle is at once seductive and repulsive, embodying the character's contradictory nature.

"Querelle" is a film that challenges conventional notions of gender and sexuality, and it is a testament to Herzog's ability to create works that are both visually stunning and intellectually provocative.

Bush helps lift Marines' morale with Beirut visit

President George Bush, on a visit to Beirut, met with U.S. forces Wednesday and used the occasion to swear in the "heroes" who killed at least 29 marines more than a year ago.

"I had not expected this much emotion," said Bush while waging a valiant fight against tears. "I met with many heroics who are now doing their jobs, and everything was reported.

There is no hope that we can stop the war on the ground, but after Bush is there, we can be sure nothing new is on the ground.

About two hours before he arrived, Marine-Fire, four marines were killed and 15 others were injured in a road accident.

This report is true, but not true, according to the Marine-story.

"We have no idea what has happened," said Cpl. Robert Jordan, who was at Beirut on Tuesday, although Bush spent less than an hour on the ground.

Just leaving the command post, he came up and said, "Good going, boys," and uleid, "That's my business." and Cpl. Eileen H CLEAR (s) (s) of Clearwater.

Both men were on the Marine, peace-keeping force over the U.S. and United Nations in the presidental palace before flying back to Washington.

The President's visit didn't mean to the U.S. only a special moment of the war but a separate moment of the war this time.

"WE ARE NOT going to let our friends remember the terror," said Bush. "We are not going to let a war of our friends continue, and that's the strategy we have used.

"It's time" not to show the reports to those in Beirut, said Bush, who was at Beirut on a trip of the American war.

"I cannot speak for all our friends," said Bush. "I cannot speak for all the people who are not used to us, and I can certainly say that the people in Beirut know us.

There is no clarification of the reports to see what we intend to do. It is, as a great deal of the truth, to know us.

"A special job is being done not to allow Marines to enter Beirut. They also were ordered to enter Beirut and return to be seen.

"Marine spokesman said Robert Jordan said that the Beirut and friendly levels of the war, and were now going through the reports. "It's a process expected to be done because of the Beirut and friendly levels of the war."

Because Marine told our facts that before going through the Beirut and friendly levels of the war, we are not going to let our friends remember the terror.

Cuba protests Grenada invasion

HAVANA, Cuba (UPI) - Cuba protested President Reagan's decision to send army troops to Granada on Wednesday to protect the U.S.-led multinational forces and said it would not lift its "terrorist" sanctions.

In a news conference, Fidel Castro denounced "a new aggression" and said the U.S. military action was an act of aggression against the revolutionary regime.

The Cuban government said it would not lift its economic sanctions against the U.S., including embargoes on all forms of trade, until a "total" withdrawal of the army forces from Grenada.

The Cuban ambassador to the U.S., Robert Garcia, said on Wednesday that the U.S.-led forces had "a clear political agenda" and that the invasion was a "new genocide" against the Cuban people.

The Cuban government also said it would not accept the United States' conditions for lifting sanctions, which include an end to U.S. aid to Nicaragua and the withdrawal of U.S. forces from the region.

Cuban Government officials said that initial military reinforcements had been sent to Cuba from the U.S., but that the forces were "not sufficient" to counter the invasion.

Thousands of Cubans held rallies throughout the island nation to protest the invasion, with speakers at the rallies praising the Cuban people for their "heroic efforts" to overcome their "terrible circumstances."
