Lawmakers approve additional funds for regents

By Steven Griggs

The Iowa Senate on Thursday passed an $18 million bill to fund Education Appropriations for public universities. The bill will also provide additional funding to the University of Northern Iowa, Drake University, and Iowa State University.

The bill provides $18 million in additional funding for the education system, bringing the total budget for education to $1.2 billion. The funding will go towards increased salaries for faculty and staff, improvements to facilities, and increased academic programs.

The bill was supported by both Republicans and Democrats, with a vote of 35-14. The bill now goes to the House of Representatives for consideration.

Nader blasts Madison Avenue, advocates economic shakeup

By Emily Kirby

"The people of this country have lost their voice. They have lost their power. They have lost their democracy."

Nader said that the current economic system is broken and needs to be replaced. He called for a "greener" economy that is focused on the needs of people, rather than corporations.

"We need a new economic system that is based on the needs of people, not corporations. We need a system that is fair and just, not a system that rewards the rich at the expense of the poor."

The Senate adopts comparable pay plan

The Iowa Senate on Thursday passed a bill that provides comparable pay for employees at public universities. The bill establishes a new formula for setting pay levels, based on the market for similar positions.

"We need a pay system that is fair and just, and that reflects the value of the work being done," said Senator Jane Jones, who chairs the Senate Appropriations Committee.

The bill provides for a new formula for setting pay levels, based on the market for similar positions. The formula will be reviewed every five years, and adjustments will be made as necessary.

The bill was passed by a vote of 35-14, and now goes to the House of Representatives for consideration.
Judge grants delay for Hall trial; time is needed to test the evidence

By Patricia Reuter

The second-degree murder trial of James Blanchard has been moved from June 15 to September 21 by the court because of questions about the state's ability to provide the defense with the evidence it needs to prepare for trial.

The delay was requested by defense attorneys on Tuesday because of problems in obtaining evidence from the state's investigation of the killing of a 13-year-old boy who was found dead on March 13. The state had been unable to locate the boy's body until this week, when it was exhumed from a cemetery near the family's home.

The defense attorney, Edward T. Turner, said he needed more time to review the evidence and prepare for trial. He added that he had been unable to contact the state's investigators to obtain copies of the evidence they had collected.

Judge Paul J. Kelly granted the delay, but said he would review the evidence as soon as possible to ensure that it is being properly handled.

Kelly said that the defense had a right to have access to all the evidence in the case, but that he did not want to delay the trial any longer than necessary.

The trial is expected to last about six months, and will be held in the Johnson County Courthouse.

County fee doubts cause financial report rejection

By Patricia Reuter

The Johnson County Board of Supervisors has rejected the county's latest financial report because it did not include information about the fees charged for services provided.

The board's decision was based on a recommendation from the county's auditor, who said that the report did not provide enough detail about the fees charged.

The auditor said that the fees were not clearly defined and that it was difficult to determine how much money the county was making from them.

The board's decision was made after extensive discussions with the county's fiscal staff and the state auditor's office.

It is the first time in recent years that the board has rejected a financial report, and it has raised concerns about the county's ability to accurately track its revenue and expenses.

The county's financial report is due to be submitted to the state each year, and the board's decision could delay the submission of future reports until the issues are resolved.

The county has been working with the state auditor's office to resolve the issues, and it is hoped that a new report will be submitted soon.

Radar detector stolen

A stolen radar detector was reported to police on March 15, 1979. The detector was valued at $50 and was left in a car parked on Main Street.

Police are seeking information about the theft and are asking anyone who may have seen anything suspicious to come forward.

The case is being investigated by the Johnson County Sheriff's Office.

Iowa City, Iowa
Vice President George Bush was the keynote speaker at the 1984 University of Iowa Riverfest Pizza Taste Contest. Bush, a native of Abilene, Kansas, was named the grand prize winner. The event is sponsored by the University of Iowa College of Engineering and the Department of Chemistry. The grand prize is 100 pizzas.

Bush, who was a student at the university in the 1960s, said he was excited to return to Iowa. "I'm really looking forward to spending the day with my old classmates and reminiscing about our days as students," he said.

The university's President, Harry Leu, congratulated Bush on his victory. "We are proud to have such a distinguished alumnus, not just here in Iowa, but across the country," he said.

The event also featured a ceremony honoring the University of Iowa's 1874 charter. The charter was signed by President Abraham Lincoln and was the first in the state.

Bush thanked the university for its hospitality and promised to return to Iowa in the future. "I love Iowa, and I'm looking forward to coming back and enjoying some more pizzas," he said.

Downed coppper called ‘living proof’ of need for aid to Central America

The DRAFT treaty may be on the table in Geneva as Bush calls for a total ban on chemical weapons.

The draft treaty, which would ban chemical weapons and allow for inspection, has been under discussion for several years. Bush said in a speech last week that the United States would support such a treaty.

"I think it's important for us to take this step," Bush said. "It's important for the United States to be a leader in this area."

Bush also mentioned the need to work on a comprehensive plan for assistance to Central America.

"We need to do more to help the people of Central America," Bush said. "We need to provide them with the resources they need to help themselves.

He added: "We need to work closer with our allies in the region to find ways to help the people of Central America."

Bush's comments came after a visit to El Salvador, where he met with President Alfredo Cristiani and other leaders. Bush said he was impressed with the progress that has been made in the region.

"I was impressed with the progress that has been made," Bush said. "I was impressed with the commitment of the leaders.

Bush also emphasized the need for international cooperation in dealing with the issues in Central America.

"It's important for us to work together as a global community," Bush said. "We need to find ways to work together to help the people of Central America."

Bush's visit to El Salvador was part of a trip to the region, which also included visits to Guatemala and Costa Rica.

House vote forces stem Branstad to ink or ax drunken driving bill

Lentzmann has set up a confrontation with Gov. Terry Branstad for this week, calling for a special session to address the issue of drunken driving. The Governor's office did not respond to a request for comment.

"We're trying to help the problem of drunk drivers under 19," Mondale said. "We're concerned about specific problems of drunken drivers if deferred sentences are granted." Mondale was referring to the Governor's version, which included mandatory minimums for drunken drivers under 19.

"I think it was a good idea," Mondale said. "But it's a little bit of a stretch to say we can fix everything with one bill." Mondale said he was concerned about the bill's "right" through the Senate and said he would prefer a more comprehensive approach.

"I'm not saying it's a bad, I'm just saying it's a little bit of a stretch," Mondale said. "I think it's a little bit of a stretch to say we can fix everything with one bill." Mondale said he was concerned about the bill's "right" through the Senate and said he would prefer a more comprehensive approach.

Lost kids

About 1.1 million children are reported missing every year in the United States. While the majority are reunified, the sheer number of missing children has been a major priority in policy-making. A solution for this issue is to create a database for missing children, along with providing education to parents on how to prevent their children from going missing. Parental involvement is crucial in ensuring the safety of their children.

Terrorist shocks

Ever since the 9/11 attacks, the world has seen an increase in terrorist threats. Governments around the world have been working to prevent terrorist attacks, but despite these efforts, there have been several high-profile attacks. The rising threat of terrorism has led to increased security measures, including increased surveillance and travel restrictions. The global community needs to work together to combat terrorism and prevent future attacks.

Small stalls on comparable worth

The Merit System has always had to be dragged kicking and screaming into the 20th century on any employee fairly. Giving the Merit System implementation for comparable worth was inviting the wolf to guard the henhouse.

Cronyn finds jobs in ‘The Gummi’

The film ‘The Gummi’ has been criticized for its lack of cohesive plot and character development. The film’s plot is disjointed, with several subplots that do not tie together. The characters are poorly developed, with little backstory or motivation for their actions. The film’s pacing is slow, with long stretches of dialogue and exposition.

Viewpoints

The Merit System is good at selecting the best person for the job and putting them in charge. The system is merit-based, with employees being evaluated on their performance and contributions. This approach is fair and just, as it rewards hard work and dedication. Other systems, such as seniority, can lead to unfair treatment and inequities. The Merit System is a model that other countries should emulate.
Guerrillas cut off major road, storm nine Salvadoran towns

LANE SALVADOR (UPI) — Leaflet guerrillas stormed into five towns and cut off a key highway leading to the southern half of the country against the U.S.-backed government, military sources said.

In a series of attacks that started before dawn Wednesday morning, rebel fighters killed at least 13 soldiers and a civilian in two towns in the southern half of Morazan province, the sources said.

Lt. Col. Jorge Aguirre Corona, Morazan provincial governor, said 100 guerrillas attacked three towns — Nueva Esperanza, San Vicente and [redacted] — under the direction of the main rebel leader, Gilberto Cerrato, who is filling the空白 of his assassinated colleague, Piedad Rubiales.

One, often praised by U.S. military advisers as one of El Salvador's best guerrilla commanders, said the battle started during the night and that the rebels had been fighting for nearly five months.

"One was the guerrilla's response to the U.S. government's request for more equipment," Rubiales said. "We need more weapons and better training to fight against the government's forces."
Iowa State ready for Hawkeyes

By Brad Druker

The Iowa basketball team seems to be coming out of its defensive doldrums, as the Hawkeyes will get their first big test this week against a Clifford doubleheader with rival Iowa State.

The Hawkeye defense has looked solid in recent games, holding the opposition to an average of 64.9 points per game over the past four contests. With the season's first major test looming, the Hawkeyes will be looking to continue their defensive dominance.

"We're ready to go against Iowa State," head coach Steve Alford said. "Our defense has been strong the past few weeks, and we want to keep that going against the Hawkeyes."

Films

The pacing of the film is very good, and the acting and direction are impressive. The story is well told, with a clearly decipherable message.

Some reviews have commented negatively on the use of a metaphorical device, with a message about nature. However, it is a fascinating premise set up by the director, and it emerges as another of Tarkovsky's masterpieces.

Stalker

Part of the problem with Tarkovsky's films is their pacing. Some people might love it while others might dislike it. It can be said that the director is not interested in making things easy to understand.

The most important aspect of the film is not the story, but the atmosphere. The director wants to create an emotional response in the audience. The pacing is too slow.

Marilyn Monroe letters

Marilyn Monroe's handwritten letters have been sold for $5,500, with the proceeds going to a trust fund for her children.

The letter ended with the words, "Is there anything more beautiful than being loved?"
