Karami faces Cabinet crisis over Israelis

JERUSALEM (UPI) — Lebanon's new Cabinet, meeting for the first time, was forced to delay a decision to resign because the political crisis over former prime minister Bush's return from exile deepened tension in the territory.

The new caretaker Cabinet will be headed by President Emile Lahoud, who was appointed as leader of the new government by President Bachir al-Assad. The Cabinet was formed after President Bachir al-Assad called for new elections in an effort to end the political crisis.

Cabinet members met at the presidential palace in Baabda, northeast of Beirut, to discuss the country's political situation. The Cabinet's formation has been met with skepticism and criticism from various political groups and factions in Lebanon.

The Cabinet has been formed under the leadership of President Bachir al-Assad, who was re-elected to a second term in office last month. The political crisis has been ongoing since the fall of the previous government, which was led by Prime Minister Riad al-Sarouji, after he was forced to resign due to the political catastrophe.

The new Cabinet includes representatives from various political parties and factions, including the Muslim Brotherhood, the Christian Forces, and the National Salvation Front. The Cabinet's formation is seen as a step towards resolving the political crisis, but it remains to be seen whether the new government will be able to implement the necessary reforms and address the country's economic and social challenges.

BY Greg Phily
Thurlday

Fieldhouse customers will be able to eat and drink in the sunlight at a planned rooftop cafe at the Iowa City Crane Gymnasium. The cafe is planned for three levels of the hotel one of which is being built on the roof of the fieldhouse.

The project is the first of its kind in Iowa City, and has been approved by both the Design and Review Committee and the city council. The design is scheduled to be completed next month and the cafe is expected to open in September.

The cafe will feature indoor and outdoor seating, a bar, and a menu that includes breakfast, lunch, and dinner.

Three enter guilty pleas for spray painting walls

BY Patricia Reuter

Two people charged with spray painting the walls of the fieldhouse at the University of Iowa have entered guilty pleas in Johnson County District Court.

The case involves the tagging of public buildings with graffiti, which is a common problem in Iowa City.

The defendants, who are both students at the university, will face sentencing next month.

Correction

A story in the May 7 edition of The Daily Iowan incorrectly reported that the deadline to file for City Council in December had been extended to July 1.

The correct deadline is June 1.

Engle joins struggle to aid liver patient

By Patty Graglia

Paul Engle, UI emeritus professor in creative writing, has organized a public appeal for help for a Down town resident who has cancer.

The "Everybody" fund, the UI student group that raised more than $10,000 for a liver transplant, is now being used to help new resident Phan Que Pham. Pham, 417 Iowa Ave., has been diagnosed with liver cancer, a disease that cannot be cured at UI Hospitals.

"We're still raising funds," Pham's wife said in a memo. "We will have to have $50,000 and we'll be back in the hospital in about 6 months."

She said the couple has received help from sympathetic downtown businesses. "I was very happy to see people help the patient," she said.

The Central is now offering Pham's guests a 10 percent discount, while other downtown businesses have offered to help in other ways.

Holiday Inn not expected to compete with Iowa House

By David Lomax

Operations of the Iowa House in the Civic Center are not expected to impact the future of the Holiday Inn across the street.

Randy's resident hotel manager for the Holiday Inn and the Iowa House, said the completion of the Holiday Inn in downtown Iowa City this summer will not affect any plans the Holiday Inn has on the book.

Mr. Smith said he knew many of the same people and businesses held in the Civic Center when the Iowa House took over.

"The problem is getting them to and from the Civic Center," Mr. Smith said. "We're starting to get them here when they come to see other places."

Michael said the Iowa House has four restaurants and five bars.

David Randall has been a hair stylist at the Holiday Inn for the past 10 years.

"I know the Iowa House is a place to refer patrons when the Iowa House is closed," Mr. Smith said. "They're not going to compete with the Iowa House, they're competing with the Civic Center."
Report calls for united Ireland

DELBURG, Ireland (UPI) — The new president of the Irish Republic has called for a united Ireland, with Dublin at its heart.

Addressing a joint meeting of the Irish Parliament and the Ulster Assembly, President Patrick Hill sold the proposal as one of the most significant developments in Irish history.

"We must not let this moment pass," he said. "The time has come to bring an end to the violence and suffering that has plagued our land for too long."

The report urged London to reassess its policies in Northern Ireland, where the Provisional IRA and other republican groups have continued a campaign of violence.

The report also called for the introduction of international mediators to help negotiate a peaceful settlement.

"We cannot allow this conflict to continue indefinitely," said President Hill. "We must find a way to bring about a new era of peace and prosperity for all the people of Ireland."

The issue of a united Ireland has divided the island of Ireland for decades, with the British government insisting on maintaining its control over Northern Ireland.

The Provisional IRA, which has been fighting to bring about a united Ireland, said the report was a welcome development.

"We have long called for a united Ireland," said the IRA's chief negotiator. "We welcome this report and will continue to work towards that goal."
Let them eat cheese

Some folks in Downtown are not so smiling when they see cheese this week. The local supermarket has been blessed with the arrival of the largest cheese in town, weighing in at 270,000 pounds of the government surplus produce - although for distribution among low-income residents in five states, including Wisconsin. It was delivered last Friday after complaints that the cheese was spoiled. When distribution was halted, 16,000 boxes of cheese were returned. The incident will no doubt swell rumors of a deliberate attempt to undermine the health of urban residents. But similar tales have occurred before and they point to problems in the government's distribution of the perishable goods.

The current controversy of 1982, a disaster caused by the former Iowa Department of Social Services allowed volunteers in Jackson to sign up for the distribution of the cheese to those in need at no cost, even low on funds. Walter Mondale has the backing of about twice the number of votes as Democratic presidential nomination. Mondale has the backing of about twice the number of votes as the other candidate, even low on funds. He has also increased funding for social programs, reduced funding for the military, and increased the number of volunteers in Jackson to sign up for the distribution of the cheese to those in need at no cost.

Funereal fairness

The Federal Trade Commission, after three years of research, has concluded that in the funeral service industry, prices are grossly inflated and that customers are often sold unnecessary services. The FTC report, released recently, says that prices are grossly inflated and that customers are often sold unnecessary services. Rapists see only masters, rapists

On the night of December 23, I was reading in my favorite spot, the bathtub. I felt a sudden pang of pain. I looked up to see the sky, and the moon reflected in the water. I realized that it was time to go to sleep.

I decided that I would go to the bathroom, and that I would take a hot bath. I undressed and stepped into the tub, and the water was warm. I relaxed, and closed my eyes. Suddenly, I heard a noise. It was the sound of a door opening.

I opened my eyes, and saw a man standing in the doorway. He was holding a knife. I was scared, and I wanted to run, but I was trapped. I tried to scream, but I could not make a sound.

The man smiled, and said, "I know you're afraid." He began to cut my clothes, one by one. He tore off my pants, and then my shirt. He then grabbed me by the hair, and pulled me to the floor. He said, "I'm going to have some fun with you." He began to abuse me, and I cried. He made me undress, and then he raped me.

After he finished, he came to me again, and said, "You were a good one." He pushed me to the floor, and then he left. I lay there, sobbing, and I felt dirty and used.

The next morning, I went to the police station, and told them what had happened. They took me to a hospital, and gave me a physical examination. I was hurt, but I was alive. I told the police everything that had happened, and they promised to do everything in their power to catch the rapist.

As I lay in bed, I thought of the things that had happened. I thought of the pain, the fear, and the humiliation. I thought of the way I had been treated.

I knew that I had to do something. I had to find a way to get justice. I knew that I could not let this happen to me again. I decided that I would speak out, and that I would tell everyone what had happened.

I spoke to the managers of two local funeral homes. They told me that they would do everything in their power to help me. They promised to make sure that the rapist was caught.

I also spoke to the editors of the Daily Times and the Hawkeye Review. They promised to do everything in their power to help me. They promised to make sure that the rapist was caught.

And so, I spoke out. I told everyone what had happened. I told them about the pain, the fear, and the humiliation. I told them about the way I had been treated.

SANTA ANA, El Salvador (UPI) — El Salvador’s presidential campaign ended Wednesday with the President, candidate Carlos Duarte, saying a vote for him right, opposed would be a “vote for death.”

A day before a crucial Thursday night in El Salvador’s second largest city of San Salvador, where he repeated his claim that he would “invite guerrillas” to a “dialogue,” “the road to peace.”

Thursday, May 3, 1984

There's no way around it - the Big Ten tennis previews begin in their annual winners' circle this week. The conference's title is up for grabs as the 16 teams head to their home courts for three-day matches beginning Friday, May 4, at 4 p.m. in the lobby of Small Hall, Iowa City. Hawkeye fans will have to fill their empty seats to watch them in person, as the matches will be held in Blum Hall, the university's indoor tennis facility.

The 1984 campaign will be a battle of two teams: Illinois and Indiana. The Fighting Illini are the defending champions, having won the title in 1983. The Hoosiers, on the other hand, have been the runners-up for the past three years. The matchup between these two teams is expected to be intense, with both teams having strong returning players.

For the Hawkeyes, senior captain Mike Fondillo will be a key player. Fondillo, a three-time All-Big Ten selection, has shown great promise in his career. He has won a total of 47 matches in his three years on the team, making him one of the most consistent players in the conference.

The Illini will also rely on their senior captain, Mark Burow, who has been a strong player for the team in recent years. Burow has won a total of 44 matches in his career, and his experience will be crucial in leading the Illini to victory.

Despite the tough opposition, the Hawkeyes are confident in their chances of winning the conference title. With their strong returning players, solid depth, and a dedicated coaching staff, the Hawkeyes are ready to make a run for the championship.

The matches will take place on Friday, Saturday, and Sunday, with the winners advancing to the Big Ten tournament, which will be held in Scottsdale, Arizona, in May. The tournament will feature the top eight teams from the conference, with the champion earning an automatic bid to the NCAA tournament.

In conclusion, the 1984 Big Ten tennis season is shaping up to be an exciting one, with the Hawkeyes and Illini battling for the title. Fans should not miss this opportunity to see some of the best tennis players in the country in action. The matches will be held in Blum Hall, Iowa City, with doors opening at 4 p.m. on Friday and 10 a.m. on Saturday and Sunday. Come out and support the Hawkeyes as they make their move towards the conference title.

Big Ten Medal goes to Anderson; Barnes wins John Gillespie Award

By Mike Crooke
Assistant Sports Editor

Senior basketball player Lisa Anderson has won this year's Big Ten Medal, one of the highest honors given by the conference. The medal is given in recognition of a student-athlete's academic and athletic achievements.

After years of hard work and dedication, Anderson has finally been recognized for her contributions to both the basketball team and the classroom.

"I'm so proud of Lisa Anderson," said Coach Phil Witten. "She is a true role model for all our young players."

The Iowa City Press-Citizen reported that Anderson's selection was "well deserved and is fitting recognition for her athletic ability and academic achievement."

Barnes, a native of Oregon, Wis., was given the John Gillespie Scholarship. Barnes has been a consistent power threat from her senior season on, leading the team in scoring and rebounding.

"Slater Barns has been the cornerstone of our basketball program," said Coach Joe Johnson. "He is a true leader and will be missed next year."

The Daily Iowan reported that Barnes was "a team leader who had the ability to step up when needed."

Iowa eyeing first division finish

By Michael Rapoport

They may not be in the race for the Big Ten title, but the Iowa wrestling team is setting its sights on getting its first Big Ten title. With six freshmen on the lineup, the Hawkeyes have the potential to succeed in any meet they enter, but the Big Ten title is the ultimate goal. "I think we're in the top 5," said head coach Ken Kraft. "We're definitely the best in the Big Ten this year, but we have a lot of room for improvement. The freshmen are really good, but they need more experience. We're going to have to push ourselves to get better," Kraft added.

"We've been working hard in practice and we're looking forward to the Big Ten championships," said senior Ben Jones. "I think we have a good chance of winning the title. It's going to be tough, but we're up for the challenge." Jones has been a consistent performer for the Hawkeyes this season, with 10 wins and only 2 losses.

"I'm excited to see how we do in the Big Ten," said junior Tom Green. "I think we have a good chance of winning the title. We have a lot of young talent on our team and I think we can surprise some people." Green has been a key contributor for the Hawkeyes, with 11 wins and only 1 loss.

Iowa's hopes of winning the Big Ten title are high, but they know they have to work hard to make it happen. "We have a lot of work to do," said Kraft. "We have to continue to improve and we have to be consistent. We have to be able to perform at our best every day."
