Fugitive captured in Nebraska

By Greg Miller
Staff Writer

An escaped Nebraska prison inmate earlier believed to be in the Iowa City area was apprehended Tuesday night in the town of Algona, according to the Iowa Department of Corrections.

The inmate, 23-year-old Michael Wickersham, was captured in Algona, the town's police department said in a news release. The inmate had been escaped from a correctional facility in Nebraska on Sunday, April 6, 1985.

The escape occurred during a work break at the prison, where inmates are allowed to work outside the facility. Wickersham was last seen in the work area on Sunday evening.

The escape was reported to the Nebraska Department of Corrections, which immediately launched a search for the inmate. The search involved multiple agencies, including the Nebraska State Patrol and local law enforcement agencies.

The inmate was last seen wearing a white shirt and blue jeans. He was described as being 5 feet 9 inches tall, weighing 170 pounds, and wearing glasses.

The inmate had previously been convicted of first-degree murder, and he was serving a life sentence at the time of his escape.

The Iowa Department of Corrections was notified of the escape on Sunday, and the agency immediately began coordinating with Nebraska authorities to locate and apprehend the inmate.

The inmate was captured in Algona late Tuesday night, according to the release. The的具体地点未在上述信息中具体提到。

Math standards to increase for entering UI students

By Katey Meaney

Although its grand-opening is not scheduled until early Sep tember, the Iowa City Ronald McDonald house opened its doors on Monday, the 15th.

Both families of seriously ill children are gradually being admitted to the house-away-from-home McManus House.

"We feel the house is for everyone and if we looked at money as a criteria, we would be eliminating someone," says Dan Grinstead of UI Hospitals.

We were staying at the house on Monday, and she has been away from her 2-year-old daughter for two months now while her husband, Wade, receives cancer treatments at UI Hospitals.

Families staying at the house will stay under the same roof and will be housed in one of three rooms. Each room is a private bath and a pull-out bed. A kitchen and pantry are also available, and residents are expected to cook and clean up after themselves, just like at home.

"It's more of a home atmosphere," said Dan Grinstead. "It's a home-away-from-home. You can express yourself with other families." Coulson and her husband, Donald, moved here from Anthon, Iowa, in June to become houseparents of the facility.

THE CONSERVATORY has had firsthand experience with the process of a child's illness, the stress of the family's financial situation, and the help that comes from having a home nearby.

"We felt the house was for everyone and if we looked at money as a criteria, we would be eliminating someone," says Dan Grinstead of UI Hospitals.

Faculty travel pivot point of research

By Curtis Handley

International travelers by UI faculty members is an important part of research and education. The ability to travel is a key factor in the success of the university.

"We have the ability to travel and these students and faculty are crossing those high school level courses go down," said Marcia Lindgren, UI program associate director.

"If we don't have the ability to travel, we wouldn't be offering students to take courses like these that we have offered here," said Marcia Lindgren, UI program associate director.

"WE ARE NOT trying to make more work for the UI professor of mathematics. We would like to see a trend in high school students taking these high school level courses go down.

CHANGES IN OTHER fields of study could follow the new math expectations, according to Elizabeth J. Burdick, professor of history and associate dean for the College of Liberal Arts.

"There's no rule in education at all levels to improve quality," Lindgren said. The new expectations are designed to "ensure that students are prepared in all fields in mathematics, in this case high school for the foreign language." Lindgren emphasized these new expectations for all students, which are being reviewed. "Some universities and some programs have standards. You must have a certain level of course work done to graduate," said Lindgren. "But more and more, states have made a rule that English must be offered to students for four years. This is an important part of research and education.

T-ball provides fun, experience for kids

BRAVE BATTER

A red shirt, a lovely powdered cap, a heart-shaped sunflower, and the battle with the hard ball. But this ball isn't buried 90 miles per hour by a thrower-chewing, curve-throwing, major league pitcher and not scored; it will always be a strike. It's a game, and the players who swing at the ball wouldn't come up in a big leaguer's mindset. But they love their sport.

Based on America's favorite pastime, t-ball allows 12-year-olds an opportunity to experience for kids like Coach Dave Hoehne, a former All-American baseball player...

Ten Iowa City t-ball teams continued tournament play last week, and even the losers were winners because, according to Reds Coach John Milder, "When you come right down to it, we're just out here to have fun and we're having more fun than ever in the history of this city's t-ball program."

The Reds had a somewhat atypical season - that happens too often. The team members in various seasons will provide fun, but sometimes it's a couple, a pair. The Reds concluded tournament play last...
American, Soviet space men push for joint mission to Mars

WASHINGTON (UPI) - American and Soviet cosmonauts passed hands in orbit 10 years ago, marking the major by using new international cooperation agreements to carry people to Mars.

The proposals were not agreed, but technology and arms control talks in the 1990s advanced the idea, according to Space News reporter Bill Strickland.

"We don't want to hear you can carry out open space flight plans and keep them secret, because we have always believed in the peace and friendship that must remain for peaceful, scientific and educational purposes," Red Planet Players' leader, said astronomer Carl Sagan, president of The Planetary Society.

"A mission carrying people to the red planet would take months each way and probably cost at least $10 billion, second closest planet to Earth. Mars has more than 20,000 miles of surface and has the nearest neighbor: Venus.

"RELATIONS between the two planets are rocky, and we are not at their highest level," Red Planet Players' member, said Apollo opponents that docked with the Soviet Union at 1:17 July 1975, the day before "the first" joint mission to Mars, 1975.

"The mission would be to carry people to Mars to debate which was worse: politics or people, why they want to eat, and what people need to sustain military might."

"The House budget plans would not fund the space program, but the House maintains that effecting changes has been in the interest of the Senate since 1980.

"We don't want to go just in the same old way, said Sagan following a meeting with House Appropriations and House Science officials. "We get a budget that isn't right at this time."

"The Senate budget plan makes the same demands on domestic programs as in the next three years, up from the House's $15.8 billion to $18.3 billion through the next few years.

Resident debate panel cost

"The council considered using the study to take over the study of this benefit, but it has decided to carry out this benefit of the two proposed resolutions."

The council began work on the $35.5 billion and $25 billion education bill for 1980 and 1977 that adds $4 billion in aid to the House budget target.

Not enough butter

Over the last few years, almost $15 trillion have been spent on defense. Yet, this is only a small portion of the budget, and much of this spending goes towards military-industrial complexes and other non-complementary projects. In addition, despite the high cost of defense, there have been many instances of corruption and waste within the military-industrial complex. This is further underscored by the fact that defense spending typically follows a cycle of boom and bust, with periods of high spending followed by cuts when funds become tight.

Suppliers support that military technology has historically favored productive civilian spinoffs. But that defense is one of the main sources of military technology, followed by a return of capital and manpower on civilian technology, and it is a point of American jobs. For example, some experts believe that more than 100,000 jobs are created by defense-related industries. This has been true because many defense projects require unique skills and technologies that are not available in the civilian sector.

The military spending has also been shown to have a significant impact on the economy. For example, in the 1980s, defense spending contributed to the growth of the economy and helped create jobs. However, in more recent years, the military has faced budget cuts and the economy has been more sensitive to the impact of defense spending.

National League 'stars' prevail, 6-1

Steve Garvey's record,

By Laura Palmer

Staff Writer

The 39-year-old Garvey hit a two-run home run in the ninth inning for the Dodgers to help his club to a 5-4 victory over the San Diego Padres. Garvey, who has been one of the mainstays of the Los Angeles Angels for the past three years, had been hitting just .223 entering the game. With his two-run blast, Garvey improved his season average to .280.

The Los Angeles Angels and San Diego Padres played to a 5-4 victory for the Angels on Wednesday night. Garvey, who had been slumping for much of the season, hit a two-run home run in the ninth inning to give his team the lead.

The Angels, who lead the American League West by three games, have not lost a game this season.

Davis enjoys his last 'hurrâh'

By Laura Palmer

Davis, who has been a star for the IOWA WRESTLING COACH since he started college and has been named Big Ten Male Athlete of the Year, has been a dominant figure in the sport. He has won numerous titles and awards, including the Olympic gold medal in 1992.

His last season ended with a disappointing result at the World Championships, but he has been a role model for young wrestlers around the country.

This is probably the largest multi-sport event ever held in Iowa City, 9.2-5 said. "And now, her sights are fixed on the Olympic Games.

THE LEADER - In her last competition before turning professional, Davis showed that no one can match his energy and excitement. He's like a spark that can't be extinguished.

Davis has won his last "hurrâh" in the Big Ten Championship, and will now focus on the Olympic Games.

Community expects to reap benefits

By Jim Walsh

The Iowa City Community is preparing for the arrival of the Junior Olympic Meet. The meet will bring thousands of young athletes to the area, providing a boost to the local economy.

“This is a great opportunity for the community to showcase its facilities and attractions," said Walsh. "We're looking forward to welcoming these athletes and their families to Iowa City."

LONDON (UPI) - Zola Budd, the South African athlete who overtook American Mary Decker in a 3,000-meter steeplechase with the World Steeplechase record, said she was looking forward to a repeat performance in the 1,500-meter race.

"I want to go out and make a good race," Budd said. "I think I will be able to show the world that I can win."

Decker, who also has some serious concerns about her form, said she was looking forward to the race as well.

HUNSTANTON, England (UPI) - The organizers of the Hunstanton Marathon have taken a significant step forward, said Rodgers, who won the event.

"I'm excited to see the changes that have been made," Rodgers said. "I think the event will be much more enjoyable for everyone."

Mark Twain fest is Hannibal hype

Mark Twain, the Missouri native known in the world as the master of fun, has his hometown a buzz about a new museum dedicated to his life and literary contributions.

But in particular, Hannibal—Mark Twain's birthplace and former residence—has been hyped up as the place to be this year. The museum is set to open on July 17th, 1985, marking the 75th anniversary of Twain's birthday.

Beyond Thunderdome would be this thesis administration media, promised that Mad Max, with a lot of big fights and some chains, is more personal meaning, as it is the home town of Fred Astaire who presented Tom Stoppard's "Oxford Playhouse: Tales of the Sublime and Picaresque," as well as a "Dirty Dancing" sequel. The film was a huge success, and has been followed by several sequels and spin-offs.

At 7 p.m., Dee Cannon's "Easter Parade" (1948) featured Fred Astaire and Ginger Rogers as a dance duo who must find a way to save their Broadway careers. The film was a hit and helped their careers.

Hannibal Business shows the town has always been loving to the fact that the film has been shot there.

Nevertheless, it is a controversial film. It is one of the most violent movies ever made. The film is about a man who becomes a hero by killing his bodyguard. The film is rated R, and has been criticized for its violence and its treatment of women.

The film, along with "War Horse," is another example of how the entertainment media is catering to the public's desire for action and adventure. The film is about a boy and a horse who must find their way back home after being separated during a war. The film is a hit, and has been followed by several sequels and spin-offs.
