Eyeliner tattoos please patients, worry UI doctor

by Janet Johnson

When Black, 88, no longer troubles herself with the chore of applying eyeliner during morning make-up routines.

But a part-time printing teacher at Flori- dian International University, the tattoo-artist makes it difficult for her to apply any more. She is one of many 80-something women who have had eyeliner tattooed to their eyelids — a procedure which is known as tattooing.

But was one of the first patients Michael Tse, a dermatologist in West Palm Beach, Florida, performed the procedure at that time. Patipa has performed the procedure on other women, including his wife, without complications. She had the procedure done on her eyelids to prevent damage to the tissue surrounding in her eyes.

According to Patipa, the approximately 150 procedures were originally developed for war区内 women and those who have suffered injuries to their eyelids that are difficult to apply frequently. The procedure involves injecting pigment into the dermis of the eyelid to create a permanent tattoo effect.

If the procedure is done properly, damage to the tissue surrounding the eye is “universally and generally avoided,” said Patipa.

The ability to damage tissue surrounding the eye, however, and the increasing popularity of the procedure in popular culture have been the focus of a number of studies investigating its safety and effectiveness.

But Patipa believes any resulting damage to the tissue surrounding the eye is “universally and generally avoided,” said Patipa. “I think there is a risk for this,” said Tse, in a statement. “We recommend that anyone who has had a procedure like this be evaluated by a dermatologist before it is performed.”

In addition, the center is not a routine on-demand procedure, but only performed by a provider who has been trained and certified in this procedure.

Three compete for at-large council seats

Iowa City News-Citizen, December 4, 1985

District B candidates Darrel Courtney will face off against John Watson for the at-large City Council seat vacated by Jane Novak. Courtney is running on a platform of economic development, while Watson is focusing on city services.

Courtney, a 34-year-old business owner, said he will work to attract businesses to the city and help existing ones expand. "I'll be looking for new ideas and trying to make things happen," he said.

Watson, a 33-year-old city planner, said he is concerned with the city's financial stability and wants to keep utility rates low. "I don't want to see rates go up," he said.

Both candidates agree on the need to balance the city's budget and avoid deficit spending.

Examiner's Note

The guest opinions appearing on this page are by the Iowa City Community Council and funds for establishment of revolving loan fund as a business incentive is Iowa.

The proposal, as presented by the Iowa City Community Economic Development Block Grant Fund for Business Involvement, calls for the city to create a Community Development Block Grant Fund for Business Involvement. The program would provide revolving loan funds to small businesses that create new jobs, purchase new equipment, or renovate existing buildings. The grants would be made available to businesses that meet certain eligibility criteria. The proposes the term of the grant is typically six months to two years, with interest rates charged at market rates. The city would also require businesses to submit annual reports detailing their progress in creating jobs or other economic development initiatives. The revolving loan fund is designed to help businesses start or expand operations in Iowa City.

Proposal is good idea, but form falls short

by David Leault

The Iowa City Council will review the proposal at its meeting, which is scheduled for next month. The council will then discuss the proposal in more detail and make a decision about whether to move forward with creating the revolving loan fund.

Guest Opinion

Since Iowa City is not eligible for the State Economic Development Revolving Loan Fund program, a local program is needed. The Iowa City Community Economic Development Block Grant Fund is similar to the revolving loan fund proposed by the Iowa City Council. The revolving loan fund for small businesses is an innovative approach to economic development. It provides a way to support businesses that create new jobs, purchase new equipment, or renovate existing buildings. The revolving loan fund is designed to be self-sustaining, with interest rates charged at market rates. The city would also require businesses to submit annual reports detailing their progress in creating jobs or other economic development initiatives. The revolving loan fund is designed to help businesses start or expand operations in Iowa City.

Music

The Prelude and Fugue in G minor, BWV 543, is a work of great importance in the organ literature. Written in 1720, the form of the Fantasia is a development of the Baroque style, characterized by free counterpoint and dramatic contrasts. The piece is composed of a Prelude and a Fugue, with the Prelude serving as an introduction to the Fugue, and the Fugue as the main section of the work. The Prelude is a relatively simple piece, while the Fugue is more complex, featuring a wide range of rhythmic patterns and harmonic progressions. The organ virtuoso, Alain, performed this piece with great precision and expressiveness, emphasizing the technical brilliance and emotional depth of the work.
The Deer

The deer comes to the edge of the wood one day. All is in a low hum, and its only sound is the rustle of its hooves. It pauses, and then it moves on. Slowly, steadily, it navigates the terrain, its eyes scanning the surroundings. It is a creature of grace and beauty, and it moves with purpose.

Theater

The situations that drive the characters and script. The cast consists of twenty-two actors, with notable performances by Brian Best and Paul Stowers in the queen and king, respectively. The show is well-paced by Philip Adams, and the overall direction of Stephen P. Coli is delightfully tailored, creating a whimsical and colorful air of court life.

Replacements to debut album in anything-goes genre

By Alan Hughes Staff Writer

"OUI, MAIS, ALORS, " Paul Westerberg, the 25-year-old songwriter, lead vocalist and guitarist for the Replacements, said in a recent telephone interview, "we're entertaining. That's all we're trying to do. Whether it's the music or the record or our personalities. We like to entertain. If we feel like we're being too serious, then we might as well just go home." Westerberg meant it when he spoke those four words in the Replacements' two-year history, which consists of one album, just released on Sire Records. "We really wanted to win the public as well," Westerberg said.

A few weeks ago, the Replacements, known as the ?-Sixers, who? and the Holy Grail of the North, released their major label debut and comes ferociously, rambler-sorta, from the same group that recorded their unedited version on a cassette tape and took it out of the studio, releasing it to the public. "It's like that," Westerberg said. "It's just like we feel like it." Westerberg and bandmate Bob Stinson, the album's composer, guitarist and pianist Paul Westerberg, the writer, lead vocalist and guitarist, and Paul Westerberg, the producer, were all in the studio.

At the Blouin Center, the album was released on Sire Records. "We really wanted to win the public as well," Westerberg said. Westerberg and bandmate Bob Stinson, the album's composer, guitarist and pianist Paul Westerberg, the writer, lead vocalist and guitarist, and Paul Westerberg, the producer, were all in the studio.
