Tragic week draws to close; Burr, wife buried side by side

By Jerry Duncan

The bodies of Burr and his wife, 83-year-old Mildred Burr, were buried Monday in Lone Tree, surrounded by family and friends, marking the end of a tragic week that began last Tuesday when Burr shot and killed three Johnson County sheriffs and himself before killing himself.

Burr, a former police officer and sheriff's deputy, was known for his service to the community. He was killed during a shoot-out with the sheriff's department, leaving behind a wife and two sons.

"It was a difficult time for everyone," said one friend of the family. "We all knew Burr well, and it's hard to imagine the town without him."
Telesat says no to arms race

By Kent Schubert

The Canadian satellite firm Telesat says it is not interested in joining a military arms race.

Telesat, which is controlled by the Canadian government, is considering an offer from the United States government to join a military satellite program called the joint defense satellite system.

"We are not interested in joining any military arms race," said Telesat President R. W. Godfrey. "We believe in the peaceful use of space and are committed to promoting international cooperation and understanding.

Telesat, which operates a network of satellites that provide television and radio programming to more than 200 countries, is one of the world's largest satellite companies.

The joint defense satellite system, which is being developed by the United States Department of Defense, is designed to provide military communications and surveillance capabilities.

"We believe that the joint defense satellite system is a valuable asset for the United States military," said Godfrey.

"However, we are concerned that the system may be used for military purposes that are not in the best interests of the United States or the world as a whole."

Telesat has already expressed its opposition to the joint defense satellite system in a letter to the United States Department of Defense.

"We urge the United States government to consider the economic and security implications of the joint defense satellite system and to seek alternative solutions that are consistent with the principles of peaceful use of space," said Godfrey.

Profiles organise free library status

Trot talk

The fastest-growing segment of the labor force today is the category of mothers of preschool aged children. This child care is evolving into an issue of vital public concern.

The composition of Iowa City's population naturally includes the families of growing numbers of preschoolers in need of care for their children's workdays. Two great care facilities, Health Care of Iowa and Notre Dame Pre-School, are both located in Iowa City: the UC Continuum of the State on Women and the University of Iowa Hospital.

The two bodies approach the issue from very different angles. The former expresses it as an offensive action issue. The latter simply wants to provide care for the children of its students.

The student senate should not be faulted for its imprisoned wishing to reserve adequate care for UI students' offspring. The only unfair element of the senate proposal is that it requires payment to make the funds that would be left from collecting lower child care fees. Parents are already looking out against potential loss of quality. The senate maintains that the centers offer quality care and demand much more efficient.

It's hard to believe that the children couldn't benefit from greater separation appropriates. Caring for children is no place to experiment.

Ultimately it should not be the senate's responsibility to express an opinion on this question. This opinion is shared by both the senate and the women's council. This means the institution has the ability of feeling the daycare debate.

On busy afternoons, librarians in the Government Publication Reading Room of the University Library work feverishly to help students research last-minute projects.

The librarians who staff the office cheerfully help students find the necessary sources, despite their shortage of publications and sources available.

In regard to the issue of outclassing the product of the world's most powerful country, the U.S., with a branch of the Library of Congress, the librarian's work is critical.

Other UI department bureaucrats would do well to understand the role that the librarian holds to lead them in the push of paper, but how to best help students.

Forget the news, bring on the comics

By Don Ran

When I started reading "For Better or For Worse," a few years ago, I wasn't all that impressed. I thought it was a well-written comic strip, but it was nothing special. Then, one day, I was reading the comic, and I noticed a speech bubble that said, "Forget the news, bring on the comics.

I was surprised to see that the Strip was taking a stand against the constant stream of negative news that we see in the media. Instead, it was promoting the idea that comics can be a source of entertainment and a way to escape from the pressures of daily life.

I decided to give the Strip a chance, and I was quickly impressed by its writing and artwork. The characters were well-developed and the storyline was engaging. I soon became a regular reader of "For Better or For Worse," and I would recommend it to anyone who is looking for a funny and uplifting comic strip.

Crack: even dealers can't find this new drug

A poorer, stronger and more addictive form of cocaine has hit the streets of Iowa City, according to a national drug abuse hotline. Local cocaine users are wondering how long it will be before it hits New York City and Los Angeles, the cities where crack cocaine is prevalent, according to a national cocaine hotline. 1-800-COCAINE, operated by Fair Oaks Hospital in Iowa City.

The hotline officials compiled information from 200 emergency phone calls this fall and mapped out the areas according to the numbers. "It has really spread to all areas," said Jennifer Rice, a hotline counselor and the coordin­ator and interagency relations director for Fair Oaks Hospital in Davenport, Iowa. "Iowa has a hotline for freebasing cocaine. The marketing of crack allows form of cocaine commonly sold knowledge, saying that's the parame­ters involved for people who make their own, Schut said.

The new packaging of cocaine, therefore, is dangerous because it is more potent than the powder, and as a result, less has to be used, said Kluth. The freebasing process creates a more intense, more potent drug for users who use crack has not yet been seen in Iowa City for the Johnson County Sheriff's Department.

"It is nothing new but cocaine users know what I was talking about," said Richard Edwards, the director for MECCA. Iowa and the University of Iowa Health System have not seen crack, but there are signs the drug is used. "We have not had people, to our knowledge, asking for the pur­chase form that they use," said Terry Bartlett, clinical director of the MECCA. It can be the drug of choice for people who use cocaine hydrochloride - the form of powder commonly used on the streets, according to Sgt. Richard Edwards, who investig­ated drug offenses in Iowa City for the Johnson County Sheriff's Department.

Crack has been flooded extensively for years, however, it is difficult to track out imports to get pure cocaine. The freebasing process is dangerous because the process is not as refined, and as a result, the crack cocaine is said to be stronger than the powder. "What is new about crack is, it is a new marketing technique," Schut said.
