Girls infiltrate local junior high football team

Irregularities in the Iowa City Police Department have been uncovered. The investigation has led to the discovery of several irregularities, including excessive force and improper conduct by officers. The department has been working with the Iowa City School District to address these issues. The investigation is ongoing, and further details will be released as they become available.

Dow Jones plunges in record loss

The Dow Jones industrial average fell 226.80 points Thursday in Wall Street's heaviest trading in more than a decade. The blue-Chip average lost 8.63 percent to 135.25. The broader market indexes, including the 20-day moving average and the S&P 500, also retreated.

Violence in schools

A recent study by the National Center for Education Statistics found that violence in schools is on the rise. The study found that 33 percent of students reported experiencing some form of violence in school over the past year. The study also found that boys were more likely to report experiencing violence than girls. The study recommends increased funding for school safety programs and increased police presence in schools.

Limited manpower slows police

The Iowa City Police Department has been facing staffing shortages. The department has been working with the Iowa City School District to address these issues. The investigation is ongoing, and further details will be released as they become available.

Put up or...
In 1984, the UI College of Liberal Arts, urged by the administration to improve the quality of its graduating students, reduced the number of applicants accepted the following year, knowing that this move would result in some complaints. But College President Frank Laster, who was reelected in 1985, continued to promote the idea of reducing acceptance standards for freshmen. The crisis in some of the college's departments made the president feel that it was time to change his tune.

Continued dismal state funding had complicated the problem and forced Laster to change his tune. "I was afraid that if we did not finish, we were facing a budget crisis and would be facing a dilemma anywha, said the President. "That hasn't happened, and I now realize my optimistic concept of the situation was indeed over-optimistic...I've been converted by these changed circumstances.

Therefore, Laster joined 20 other members of the UI College of Liberal Arts in a formal petition to the state of Illinois to change the admission standards for entering freshmen. As a result of this action, Illinois's third-ranked liberal arts college was forced to re-examine the admission requirements for entering freshmen. The new standards, introduced in 1986, required that entering freshmen take a higher number of required courses for admission.

Some less serious ethical crimes
But athletic programs may still be mowed down

Mike Hines

My readers in last week's "Viewpoints" column asked me to write about the recent decision of the Board of Regents to cut several sports programs at the University of Iowa. I wrote, "I believe this is a wise move."

Hines, a 20-year-old UI graduate student in philosophy, writes, "I believe that the Board of Regents is making a wise decision by cutting sports programs. By cutting sports programs, the university will be able to save money and focus its resources on more important things, such as education and research."
City in need of bike program

By Gregory Kavenot

As a bicycle patrol—a bicycle patrol!—I've ridden the streets of Iowa City, and the police force on wheels is not a far-fetched notion. The police force on wheels would add another layer of safety to the city's streets. With each passing day, we are urged to be more concerned about the safety of our community. We are encouraged to be more vigilant, to be more aware of our surroundings. And yet, for all of the advances we've made in technology, for all of the strides we've made in safety awareness, there is still a need for more. The police force on wheels would be a force that could provide that extra layer of safety.

Dole says Demos blocking Contra bill

WASHINGTON — Senate Majority Leader Robert Dole charged Thursday that House Democratic leaders are deliberately delaying a vote on aid to Contras in Nicaragua, that action would be taken if the Senate had its way.

Dole said in an interview that President Ronald Reagan has asked him to write a letter to President-elect George Bush urging him to block any Contra aid bill that would come to the Senate.

Dole said he might try to force a vote on the Contra aid bill by invoking cloture, a parliamentary device used to cut off debate, if no action is taken by the end of the week.

Egyptian ambassador returns to Israel

ALEXANDRIA, Egypt — Egyptian President Hosni Mubarak said his country will resume diplomatic relations with Israel after he met with Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin Wednesday in Washington to discuss the resumption of negotiations between the two nations in an effort to achieve a "final and just peace". The meeting was the first between an Egyptian head of state and an Israeli leader since the 1973 war.

"I declared at our meeting that everything is going the right way," Mubarak said Thursday after he met with Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin in Washington. "We have a responsibility to our people to initiate a movement for peace in the region." The summit was arranged in consultation between the two nations, in agreement with the United Nations through United Nations envoy for Middle East peace, Dennis Ross.

"The sooner we arrive, the better," Rabin said. "We hope to see peace as a positive step. We hope it will pass the way for a broader peace in the region." The League of Arab States held a tense conference in Washington to condone the Israeli-Egyptian talks and called if Israel "publicly constraints its support of the peace process.""I declared at our meeting that everything is going the right way," Mubarak said Thursday after he met with Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin in Washington. Animal rights are his 'beef'

By Tom Harter
Staff writer

For 15 years a University Professor of Spanish and Portuguese, George DeMello has crusaded for the rights of animals. He now plans to change the face of Burlington.

"The main problem is that animals have no rights," DeMello said. "Humans do as much as they like to animals because humans have no respect for the spirit of the language and realizing principles, such as the law of non-contradiction." DeMello plans to work with DeMello on the new Spanish and Portuguese language curriculum and says he hopes to change the face of Burlington.

"I've written a few books and articles on animal rights," DeMello said. "I've also published several articles on animal rights in the Coralville Courier." DeMello has an excellent command of the language and realized DeMello that animals have no rights, "What's important is that animals have no rights," he said.

"I'm going to see if I can change the face of Burlington," DeMello said. "I'm going to try to become a model for local human rights organizations." DeMello said he hopes to change the face of Burlington.

Burlington law may set trend

By David B. Bader
Staff writer

A policy adopted by the Burlington, Iowa, city council this week in its effort to "affirm all forms of racial discrimination" may set a trend for other communities.

"The council's action is a good example of a local ordinance that could be copied," said Richard DeMello, a teacher at the Burlington High School.

The policy, which is to be introduced to the United Nations by President Jimmy Carter in 1975, was adopted by the U.S. Senate and submitted to the U.S. Congress...."It's the first time in the United States, possibly the West, that a council has considered this policy without a similar ordinance," said Burns H. Weston, Burlington Mayor. Weston said the policy was introduced at a meeting of the Burlington City Council.

Senator DeMello, who helped write the ordinance, said he hoped the idea would spread to other communities as well. "I'm going to try," he said, "if I can stimulate this thing all across the United States." Weston said.

"We think it's a good policy," Senator DeMello said. "It's one that could be adopted by the United States." He was so affected by the ordinance that he said he would "try to become a model for local human rights organizations." DeMello said he hopes to change the face of Burlington.

The treaty Ridgley referred to would include a number of local human rights organizations as well.

Wolverines seek win at Notre Dame

Michigan: the pre-season favorites to win the Big Ten championship, have made a strong start under Coach Bo Schembechler. Their two wins, over Purdue and Indiana, have given them a 3-0 record. They face Notre Dame on Saturday at South Bend, in what is expected to be a tough game. Michigan is favored to win.

Big Ten Roundup

Michigan is 16-1 in season openers under Schembechler. This year they are looking to win their 16th straight season opener and have home opener since 1980. This week, they take on Illinois.

"Any team will need more in scoring games, but Michigan doesn't," said Head Coach, who met with Schembechler, said "But, Michigan doesn't need a lot of scoring games, nor do they make any excuse about making the move in between games.

Wolverines No. 1 in nation after giving birth to her son.

"I'm just glad we can do this," said Slaney. "Physically, Slaney said. "But, Michigan isn't giving up on her son."

"We're happy to be here," said Slaney. "Physically, Slaney said.

"The first game was an opportunity," said Michigan coach. "No need for Michigan to take it easy."

Big Ten Roundup

Michigan State: the Spartans have won six straight games and are favored to win the Big Ten. They face Ohio State this weekend.

"We're confident we can win," said State coach. "We're ready to go and win this game."

Wolverines ready for Fifth Avenue Mile

NEW YORK CITY: Matt Decker Slaney, who has spent much of her running career in New York, will compete in the Fifth Avenue Mile this weekend. Slaney, who was born in California, has run in New York City since 1980. She has won the Fifth Avenue Mile twice, in 1983 and 1984. She is currently ranked second in the country in the mile.

"I'm looking forward to the race," said Slaney. "I've been training hard this season, and I'm ready to compete."

Decker Slaney, who is the holder of every women's mile record in the country, is looking to win her third Fifth Avenue Mile. She has won the race three times, in 1983, 1984, and 1985. She is currently ranked second in the country in the mile.

"I'm just glad we can do this," said Slaney. "Physically, Slaney said."
On the Line

Here's what you have been waiting for. The final roster of student-athletes has been announced by the University of Iowa. The total number of student-athletes is now 1,200. This is an increase of 200 from last year. The increase is due to the addition of new sport programs, which will be announced in the near future.

...Foggy's the star of the show...

The University of Iowa's athletic department has released a statement regarding the status of quarterback Rickey Foggie. Foggie, who previously committed to the University of Iowa, has been ruled eligible by the NCAA. The statement reads, "Rickey Foggie's eligibility has been ruled as the result of a decision by the NCAA. The decision was made after a thorough review of the facts and circumstances surrounding the case. The University of Iowa is committed to complying with all NCAA rules and regulations."
Roth still rockin’ as solo act

Music

"Music makes me feel young and alive," the Iowa-raised David Lee Roth said recently. "It's a way to express yourself, to stretch your boundaries, and to have fun."

Roth, who turns 50 this week, has been on the phone all day, promoting his upcoming shows in Ames, Iowa, and Des Moines. "It's great to be back in Iowa," he said, "where I first started my music career." Roth said he has been on the phone for three hours, and is looking forward to performing at the Iowa Memorial Union on Friday night. "It's going to be a great show," he said, "and I can't wait to see everyone there."

Roth's new album, "Master of Disaster," has been well-received by fans and critics alike. "It's a great album," Roth said, "and I'm proud of what we've accomplished."

Roth is also excited about his upcoming tour, which will take him to cities across the country. "I'm looking forward to seeing everyone on the road," he said, "and I can't wait to share my music with as many people as possible."

Roth said he is also looking forward to spending time with his family and friends. "I'm really excited about getting together with my loved ones," he said, "and I can't wait to have some fun with them."

Roth's dedication to his music is evident in his work ethic and his attitude towards life. "I'm a hard worker," he said, "and I always try to give my best in everything I do."

Roth said he is looking forward to the future, and is excited about what the future may hold. "I'm really optimistic," he said, "and I can't wait to see what happens next."

German film explores feminist issues

By Daniel Frankel

In Margarette von Trotta's newest film, "Bijou," the camera explores the constructed identity of a character who is both artist and woman. The film is a complex and nuanced examination of the relationship between the artist and the public, the private and the public sphere, and the ways in which identity is shaped by societal expectations.

The story follows Ruth, a successful concert pianist who has been struggling with a fear of performing in public. She is asked to perform at a prestigious music festival, but her anxiety leads her to cancel at the last minute. In desperation, she seeks the help of a psychiatrist who agrees to work with her.

As Ruth begins to explore her fears, she becomes increasingly interested in the art of Franz Liszt, a composer known for his virtuosic playing and his love of the piano. She begins to study Liszt's music, and as she does so, she becomes more confident in her own abilities.

However, as Ruth's confidence grows, so does her awareness of the gender expectations placed upon artists. The film critiques the way in which women are often expected to sacrifice their own needs and desires in order to succeed in their art.

Ultimately, "Bijou" is a poignant and thought-provoking film that explores the issues of gender, identity, and art. It is a reminder that the public sphere is not just a place for men, and that women have just as much to contribute to the world of art and music.

In Hancho Auditorium as part of the Concerts of Music at the University of Iowa, Van Cliburn received favorable reviews for his performance of the Chopin Etude in C, Op. 10 No. 21. He played it with great control and sensitivity, showing his mastery of the piano.

The performance was part of his extensive tour of the United States, which included concerts in Boston, Chicago, and New York. Cliburn's playing was praised for its technical precision and emotional depth, with critics noting his ability to convey the essence of the music.

The event was part of a larger celebration of Cliburn's career, which had included numerous awards and honors. His performances continued to amaze audiences around the world, and he remained a prominent figure in the classical music world for many years to come.

Van Cliburn winner to play atancher

By Mike Titk 300

UI students trying to make a little extra cash with their concert tickets are finding that it isn't quite as easy as it used to be. In the past, students patrons were allowed to trade, but that privilege is now gone. The new UI Student Ticket Policy is expected to take effect this fall.

UI ticket holder is not allowed to transfer tickets, but is only able to sell them at a price not exceeding the original cost. The new policy is intended to prevent black market activities, and to make student tickets more accessible to those who really need them. Under the new policy, students will only be able to sell tickets to other students. The price of the ticket will be set by the student, and the student will receive the proceeds of the sale. The new policy is only intended to be in effect for the upcoming season, and it is hoped that it will be relaxed in the future.

UI gets tough on alcohol, tickets

Fans must tailgate without kegs, bottles in UI lots

By Don Wilkie Assistant photo editor

The first effect of the UI's new approach toward program sales will be the elimination of allUI students and faculty from attending any UI athletic events. This will be a radical change, but it is necessary to ensure the safety of allUI students and faculty attending these events.

The new policy is expected to be enforced immediately, and the athletic department will be responsible for enforcing it. In addition, an alcohol enforcement team will be established to keep a close eye on the situation. It is hoped that this team will be able to keep the drinking to a minimum, and to ensure the safety of allUI students and faculty attending these events.

UI students and faculty must remember that they are representatives of the university, and that their actions can have a great impact on the university's reputation. It is important that they act in a responsible manner, and that they do not do anything that could bring the university into disrepute.

THE OPPORTION

The Cyclones’ troubles behind — for now

By Robert House

State football lessons and players may be looking forward to the 1984 season more than they have in a long time.

This optimism is not so much the result of a promising season, even though the team should be in better shape than in recent years, as the players look forward to kicking this fall is because they want to divert attention away from controversies and other problems that seem to follow sports teams around the country. But the true test of the Cyclones’ improvement will come when they hit the gridiron for the first time.

The 1984 season promises to be a challenging one for Coach Vince Criner, who takes over the Cyclone program in his first year. Criner has spent the last several years as an assistant coach at Oklahoma State, and he is looking forward to the opportunity to lead his own team.

Criner has a solid group of returning players, including quarterback Alex Espinoza, who will be looking to build on his impressive performance from last season. Espinoza led the Cyclones in passing yards with 2,893 and had 20 touchdowns.

The Cyclones may also have found a new leader in the running game with the addition of runningback Andrew Jackson. Jackson had 903 yards and six touchdowns in 1983.

The defense was one of the Cyclones’ weaknesses last season, and Criner is looking to improve that aspect of the team. He has added several new players to the defensive linemen, including senior guard Vince Jasper, who played in all but one game during the 1983 season.

Criner has high hopes for the Cyclones, and he is confident that they can come back from the troubles of last season to achieve success in the Big Eight.

Criner said, “The Cyclones are looking forward to the upcoming season with optimism and enthusiasm. We have a strong team and we’re confident that we can make progress and improve our record this year.”

The Cyclones’ season starts on Friday, September 1, against the Sooners. It will be interesting to see how the team has prepared for the new season and how they perform in their first game.

Van Cliburn winner to play at Hancher

In Hancher Auditorium as part of the UI Arts Overseas Program that is still in the planning stage. Many pianists fade from public view after their competition tours are over. "The real need is to be around concert engagements," says Feghali, one of the most prestigious competition organizers in the country.

Feghali gave his first public recital at the age of 15 in 1953. Since then, he has won the top prizes in most prestigious music competitions since the most prestigious competition tours are over. He has been at the top of his field for over 50 years. He played his first recital at the age of 15 and has continued to receive top honors and awards around the world. His playing is praised for its technical perfection that he has passed on to a group of new music students that are working at the University of Iowa.

Van Cliburn winner to play at Hancher

The waiting for the frustration and the head-scratching that comes with the bubble has ended. Robbie Minor is back in the Iowa State lineup.

Minor had to endure being kicked off the Cyclone team after being suspended for the final two games of last season. But now, he's back and looking to do his part to help bring a State's winning football program back to the top of the Big 12.

"The problems with Robbie were due to his actions on the field," Iowa State Coach Jim Craig said. "Off the field, he had all the ability and was using properly toward several members of the coaching staff."

With that in mind, the head-coach said this is a huge opportunity for Minor to show what he can do.

"It's something I was unaccustomed to," Craig said. "However, after several warnings, I put him on the list and said, 'I'm not sure what's going to happen this season, but if you don't come back on the list, you're off the team.' Minor did come back, and now he's back with us.

Cyclones move on despite probe

-- By John DeForest

Roughly two dozen Iowa State football players, including sophomore Mike Feghali, who was suspended for the spring semester, were invited to practice with the Cyclones again after being reinstated, Feghali was again released from the team. But after taking his suspension as an appeal heard, he was allowed to return to the team in September, although he was not allowed to play until the following season.

"We're putting it that stuff behind us," said Craig. "Everyone has a good attitude, and if we play the way we're supposed to, everything will be the same."

HAWKEYES

'Forester' Sims to patrol secondary

By Brad Zimanek

Dwight Sims will be a returning presence in Iowa's secondary this season. Sims, who played at Hancher Auditorium as a student, is expected to contribute significantly to the team's success.

Sims is a versatile player with experience in both defense and offense. HisCalling will be to help the defensive line and contribute to the team's overall success.

'86 Hawkeye offense can count on solid tight ends

By Scott Hester

Special to the Daily Iowan

With the loss of the starting tight end, the question mark for the Iowa Hawkeyes is the offensive line. The Hawkeyes rely heavily on their tight ends to provide protection and create opportunities for running plays.

The team's offensive line will face challenges this season, but they are confident in their ability to perform.

MAJORS!

The Air Force has openings for young men and women requiring an advanced career in engineering fields, like Aeronautical, Atmospheric, General, General, and Electrical Engineering. Mathematics, Physics and Computer Technology.

To help prepare for one of these Air Force ROTC offers two and four-year programs of study which will fulfill some of your college requirements.

After completion of the ROTC requirement, and upon your graduation, you'll be commissioned as an officer in the United States Air Force. This means immediate opportunity in very responsible positions at home or abroad.
Van Cliburn winner to play at Hancher

Music

As Hancher Auditorium opens this weekend for the UI Arts Overture, so does the current king of the competition circuit.

FEDHALI HAS been almost as dominant after his 1980 success.

Feghali was the last year's Van Cliburn competition winner, and he was the most prestigious competition in this country. The Van Cliburn is a competition in which the pianist has to play before a panel of judges who note every mistake. The number and quality of conservatories in this country and abroad are testament to the growing exposure of classical music in the United States.

Feghali received highly favorable reviews for some of these performances, but that is still no guarantee of a successful career. Many pianists fade from public view after their competition tours are over. But to a pianist, it means hundreds of hours of practice. The public is always impressed with mechanical proficiency but the public wants a musical experience also.

For tonight's concert Feghali will play a program that includes two of his greatest successes. Mozart's "Sonata in D Major," an almost romantic exploration of melody, and the "Suite Bergamasque" by Claude Debussy, which includes the famous "Clair de Lune" meditation, is standard repertoire for high school students. For tonight's concert Feghali will play pieces not known for their technical difficulty, but they are big crowd-pleasers nonetheless.

"The real secret is to be around after the two years of competition engagements," Feghali said in a press release made by Winston Barclay, assistant director of Arts Center Relations at the UI.

"FEDHALI BELIEVES that it is not technical perfection that makes a pianist last. "A great musician once told me that I like to produce something that communicates," he said. "The public is always impressed with mechanical proficiency but the public wants a musical experience also."
