Reagan: Arms-for-hostages rumor 'false'

President Ronald Reagan yesterday told the nation that the White House has no knowledge of the arms-for-hostages rumor that has swirled throughout the country in recent weeks.

Reagan, appearing on ABC's "View," said that the reports of a swap proposal that calls for six U.S. hostages in Lebanon to be released in exchange for 78 rifles and other weapons are "false.)"

"The charge has been made that the United States has knowledge of a proposed swap agreement," he said. "Such a proposal would amount to a gross violation of the sanctity of the hostages in Lebanon, a claim which would amount to a gross violation of the sanctity of the hostages in Lebanon, a claim which would be totally unacceptable to the United States government."

Reagan said that while the United States has had no direct talks with the Lebanese authorities, it is "strongly encouraging all parties in the Lebanese conflict to seek a peaceful and just solution by direct talks".

New UI phones will face cut rates

By Shawn Plank

The telephone rates for UI students residing on campus will be cut in half, but off-campus UI students will not see a change, according to the newly released University and Student Government Association (USGA) budget. "I'm happy to see the board of regents put the breaks on tuition increases," said UI Student President George Lugar. "The budget for UI students should be a priority for the board of regents."

UI Planning and Telecommunications director Raye Morgan added, "I'm happy to see the board of regents put the breaks on tuition increases." Morgan said that UI students should be able to expect lower rates next semester. "We've been working hard to keep phone rates as low as possible," said Morgan. "We're proud of the job we've done so far."

UI students lose their cool over residence hall heaters

By Jessica Levy
   Staff Writer

Meters may have never met Iowa City's jewel of a building. But students at the University of Iowa's Slate Residence Hall are very disappointed to have their meters moved by the university.

New meters will be installed in the hall's hallways. All the meters will be moved to a new location. The students have been told that the meters will be moved to a location that is more convenient for the residents.

The new meters will be installed on the first floor of the hall. The students say that this is not a convenient location for them. They say that they would prefer the meters to be in the hallway, where they can easily see them.

The students say that they are not happy about the move. They say that they feel that the university is not listening to their needs. They say that they have been trying to get the university to listen to them for a long time, but they have not been successful.

The students say that they are going to continue to fight for their rights. They say that they will continue to speak up for themselves and for their rights.

"We are very disappointed about this decision," said one of the students. "We feel that the university is not listening to us. We are going to continue to fight for our rights."
A step forward

Iowa State University President Gordon Eaton cited a desire to "run a clean athletic program" as the logic behind Cyclone Football Coach Jim Criner’s dismissal. Eaton and athletic department officials involved in the decision to oust Criner are not available for comment.

The sudden firing, however, doesn’t leave ISU’s integrity illuminated. Both ISU’s football and basketball programs are currently undergoing NCAA investigations. Football players with criminal records — like Cyclone quarterback Alexm Express — have been implicated with little to do. The university faces allegations of a score of NCAA violations, including charges that recruits received loans, rent, and money payments.

Eaton’s tenure at ISU has been short. He took the helm in July, in the midst of the athletic turmoil. He’s suffered through NCAA investigations, preparation for NCAA hearings and, most recently, linebacker Jeff Braswell’s eighth hearings.

Eaton’s a tough stand against student scandal, merely firing those who can’t win the state class and mitigate the loss. Criner’s dismissal is a much-needed first step in lessening corruption at ISU. Continued integrity checks on players and athletic department personnel are mandatory. Eaton vowed to develop the respected program Eaton says he desires.

Tug of war

The midterm elections held Nov. 4 resulted in the Democratic gain of six seats in the U.S. Senate, allowing the Democrats to take control of both the House and Senate. The same situation exists in Iowa’s state legislature.

The party split is not new; instead, both the federal government and the state legislature are governed by Republican/Progressive policies. History has proven that when one party controls the legislative branch of government and the head of the executive branch is a member of the opposite party, the results are often a political " tug of war" instead of the passage of meaningful legislation.

Of course, the checks and balances system written into the Constitution can still be approved by both the Senate and the house of representatives as well as the chief executive. The same process is true for the Iowa state government.

NASA denies photos of shuttle's cabin

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. — Citing invasion of privacy, NASA said Thursday no photographs of wreckage from the shuttle Challenger's crew cabin were released because they were "available only to a select number of attomeys and mediators." The statement was issued after Sunday's accident as a result of a leak in a fuel line near the base of the booster rocket. This was the second time NASA canceled a news conference Thursday, saying that they were "anxious to make the appropriate announcement at the appropriate time." The first news conference was called off before 8 a.m. because of "a technical problem" in the press center. "It seems to me that the media is not interested in the facts," an official said. "They want to know more about the shuttle, the technology, the astronauts, and the reason for the accident." The shuttle Challenger was named after a United States Navy ship that was sunk in World War II. In the last war, the ship was commanded by a young lieutenant named Ted Williams. New bill slashes student aid

Irene King

One of the biggest changes in the new definition of student aid is the broader definition of "dependent." Students who are 24 or older, or who are "financially independent," or who are "financially self-supporting," can now apply for financial aid. This means that students who previously qualified for financial aid may now be eligible for non-need-based aid.

Walter Warner, director of the Financial Aid Office, said, "The new law is very confusing, but it seems that there are more available resources for students now." He noted that the new law also allows for the use of financial aid for miscellaneous expenses, such as living expenses or tuition payments.

However, many students are concerned about the potential impact of the new law on their financial aid. Many students are worried about the increased paperwork and the potential for errors in processing applications.

"There is a lot of paperwork now," said Jennifer Burge, a junior majoring in Business Administration. "It's a lot more work than it used to be." She added, "I'm not sure if it's worth it now."

Walter Warner, director of the Financial Aid Office, said, "I think it's important that students understand the new regulations and work with the office to make sure they are getting all the aid they qualify for.

"There are a lot of changes," said Jerry Craft, chief of financial aid counseling. "I think it's important that students work with us to understand the new regulations and how they affect them."

"We are trying to make the process as clear as possible," said Warner. "We are available to help students understand the new regulations and how they affect them.

"I think it's important that students understand the new regulations and work with the office to make sure they are getting all the aid they qualify for."

Bundy lawyers call for stay of electric chair execution

LAKE CITY, Fla. (UPI) — Lawyers for the Ted Bundy appealed Thursday to the trial judge who sentenced him to death in February to let Bundy's scheduled execution Tuesday. The case is an appeal to stay Bundy's execution.

Washington attorneys Polly Nelson and James Coleman had an afternoon hearing in Judge William J. Jollage in Federal District Court in West Palm Beach, Fla.

Bundy is on death row for the 1978 slaying of Kimbell River. In 1982, he was also under a death sentence for the Adairsville killings and for a Florida rape within a year of the timer.

State Attorney General Styers said he would not file a reply brief today on the Bundy's motion for a stay. If the motion failed, said Styers, Bundy would be put to death.

Coleman said he planned to ask Judge Jollage to stay Bundy's execution because Bundy was denied a timely hearing.

COUNTY RECORDS SHOWED Bundy selected Lakefront from the campus at Lake City Junior High School in February. The selection of Lakefront High School was found under a decision of the West Palm Beach Federal District Court in the case of In re Ted Bundy.

Group claims lead reduction plan will leave U.S. water contaminated

WASHINGTON — The nation's plan for reducing lead levels in water would leave millions of Americans exposed to adverse health effects from the metal, according to a new report released Thursday.

The report, "Lead in U.S. Drinking Water: A National Crisis," was released by the interstate Environmental Protection Agency.

The report said the current U.S. plan for reducing lead levels in drinking water is not adequate to protect children.

The report said that 50 million Americans, or about 80 percent of the U.S. population, are exposed to levels of lead in drinking water that are too high.

EALIER THIS MONTH, an EPA task force reported that the nation's plan for reducing lead levels in water would leave millions of Americans exposed to adverse health effects from the metal, according to a new report released Thursday.

Womanc recovering quickly after artificial heart implant.

JOYCE ALDEN IMPLANTED a new artificial heart on Tuesday in Lexington, Mass., the first woman to receive an artificial heart.

Land's heart was rapidly destroyed, apparently by virus, the day before she received the artificial heart. The artificial heart implant will give doctors time to help Christiansen recover from the illness that destroyed her heart and provide time to find a human heart, she said.

Unemployed lowells collect more benefits during October

WASHINGTON (UPI) -- Unemployed lowells collected $8.4 million in jobless benefits in October, up from $6 million in September, as a nation-wide work stoppage more than doubled the number of unemployed.

Department of Employment Security Director Richard Pauson said he expected the number of unemployed to continue to grow in November, as the work stoppage continues.

Marcia Christoffersen was transferred to Abbott Northwestern Hospital in St. Paul as a result of myocardial failure as a result of myocardiitis.

Fry, Hawks ready for Boilermakers

By Mike Burtnett

Iowa's basketball team will seek to rebound from a loss at Northwestern as they have to build in the second game of the season against Purdue.

The Hawkeyes have dropped their last two games, both to Northwestern, and have fallen to 44 alleged violations in the NCAA probe of recruiting violations. The Hawkeyes are trying to bounce back from two straight losses, and need one more win in conference to have their chance to make the NCAA tournament.

Coach Leon Rice said, "I'm sure they'll be a tough team to beat, but I think we can win."

The Hawkeyes' season opener, a 3-0 win over the Boilermakers in November, was a game-changing moment. Iowa was able to end its losing streak and start the season with a win.

Ed Horton and David Davidson of the Cyclone, who have 18 and 14 points respectively, are coming off a big win, but they are yet to come up against the Hawkeyes. Horton, who leads the Cyclone, said, "I think we can definitely beat them, but we need to come out and play our best game against Iowa."

Iowa women's cross-country team took part in the NCAA Championship race. For the third consecutive year, the Hawkeyes placed fourth. As a result, coach Ken Kennedy said he was worried about his team's ability to compete on a national scale. "Cheryl Zemaitis and Pattie Stewart were both out and Cheryl is still really hurt," Kennedy said. "We need to get our laurels at regionals and get as many of the teams in the national meet as possible."

"We're really rebuilding from last year and we lost many of the core people," Kennedy said. "So we have the talent and we need to build our depth going into the championship."

The Hawkeye women's swimming team, on the other hand, has been working to improve their depth. "We need to get our backstroke strong," Kennedy said. "But we have a lot of depth in the breaststroke and freestyle."

The meet was originally scheduled for 11 a.m., but the starting time has been moved to 11:30 a.m., with the new coach and only 11 of them four make the trip to Iowa City.

The new coach, Aldred, is taking over the team's swimming program. "We have a lot of depth in the breaststroke and freestyle," Kennedy said. "But we need to build our depth in the backstroke and freestyle."

"We're really rebuilding from the bottom up," Kennedy added, "and asking that a lack of depth will hurt us severely in the NCAA meet."

"The meet is coming out - half of the team is coming out - but the other half is coming out," Kennedy said. "We need to build our depth in the backstroke and freestyle."

Wright. Horton averaged 3.7 games last year as the only returning letterman from the Hawkeyes' 1995 Big Ten-winning team. With Horton's departure, Iowa faces the challenge of holding the line between disappointing seasons and those that can turn into breakthrough performances.

Iowa State Coach Dan Herock said the program has a "mixed emotions" game on their hands, as they battle the Buckeyes of Ohio State for the top spot in the Big Ten. Herock said his team is "on the upswing," and Iowa State is "very close" to a winning season.

Michigan Coach Bo Schembechler said his team is "very close" to a winning season, too, and he added that "Michigan is a very good team." Schembechler said his team is "on the upswing," and Iowa State is "very close" to a winning season.

Davis will be expected to fill in for Wright. He averaged 3.7 points per game last season and is a returning starter.

Michigan State Coach George Perle said the Wolverines' win over the Hawkeyes was "very important for us," and it suggests that the team is "on the rise." Perle said his team is "on the rise," and Michigan State is "very close" to a winning season.

On the other hand, the Wolverines' loss to the Buckeyes of Ohio State was a "big disappointment," and Michigan State is "very close" to a winning season.

By Mike White

"It was a big disappointment," said the Wildcats' coach. "We had high hopes for this season, and we were doing well until we lost to the Buckeyes of Ohio State." Illinois is "very close" to a winning season, and its win over Iowa was a "big disappointment," and Michigan State is "very close" to a winning season.

As a young boy, Alfred Hitchcock loved to watch his father, Henry, as he directed the way Vertigo does, while Hitchcock himself was defined as a male wimp. Alfred Hitchcock's "Vertigo" plays in the California Theatre for the next two weeks. Hitchcock clearly had problems with his sex. He's a different sex than he was born as, and he's not sure if it's good or bad. He's had money to solve these problems throughout his life. This is the dark side to all the fame and success. In fact, Hitchcock is known only in one of the most important performances in his life. Stewart begins a slow transformation of Judy into a character who is not only very safe but who also is not only very protective and is an emblem of her spirit - the one he's moved so inherently. It's an emblem of his transformation. Without giving away the secret of the film of Scottie buying clothes and forcing Judy to change her hairstyle, we can see that Hitchcock is wrestling with his own identity. He's the celluloid-encased version of his own desire, which he can see in Madeleine. Hitchcock is a man who i not only very safe but who also is not only very protective and is an emblem of her spirit - the one he's moved so inherently. It's an emblem of his transformation.}

ALTHOUGH performing artists are generally not considered part of a work of literature, film offers a unique image of itself as a loosely defined medium, often merging the lines of the book-signing table with the theater stage. "You don't see yourself as a writer," David Alahbari, Yugoslav short story writer and director of the National Writing Program, in a recent interview for the Daily Iowan. "You think about what you are doing in the moment."

Hence his inability to write a film without it. For Alahbari believes a writer's job is instinctively to accommodate other mediums, and vice versa.

Hawkeyes will win pivotal contest

By Dan Millea
Assistant Sports Editor

This week's Iowa-Purdue match-up will probably be one of the least interesting of the year for the rest of the nation, but for Hawkeye fans it's pivotal.

Just a few weeks ago when Iowa was coming off a close loss to No. 3 Michigan at Ann Arbor, Mich., a Purdue upset in this game seemed impossible but not now.

In back-to-back losses to Ohio State and lowly Illinois the past two weeks, the Hawkeyes have looked like a 2-7 team. But fortunately for Iowa fans the opponent this week really is a 2-7 team.

Purdue is terrible, just down right terrible. So is Illinois, but don't look for the Hawkeyes to let another game like that 20-16 embarrassment sneak past them.

Reality stood up and slapped Iowa square in the face last week, and there were no excuses — not even from Iowa Coach Hayden Fry.

The Hawkeyes know they can't play that way in the Big Ten and expect to win.

THE BOILERMAKERS also know they can't play that way in the Big Ten and win, but they can't help it. They can't play any better.

Purdue has inexperienced players, a lame duck coach, a disoriented freshman quarterback, disgruntled fans, no hope for a bowl trip, no hope for a decent season and no hope for a win Saturday, unless Iowa's offense duplicates last week's "effort."

In fact, that's why it is tough to predict exactly what will happen Saturday because no one knows what to expect from the Jekyll and Hyde offense.

The offensive players may get things worked out this week and feast on a poor Purdue defense, racking up big points and working off a good deal of frustration.

Or they may come out, stumble and stagger for about three-fourths of the game and manage just enough points for a win.

Perhaps Mark Vlasic will have a great day or maybe Tom Pobolesky, Dan McGwire, Chuck Hirt, Jim Stiebel, Kevin Harmon, David Hudson, Rick Bayless, Richard Bass, Mike Flagg, Mark Cook, Robert Smith, Jim Mauro or Quinn Early will have a big day.

Somebody ought to, it's been a while.

Iowa has had problems at quarterback, a slumping running game and an all-around ineffective offense of late. But the Hawkeyes have one important plus that almost made the difference at Illinois and will make the difference Saturday against Purdue — defense. It set the offense up all day long in Champaign, Ill., only to see the offense shut itself down.

Despite injuries, the Iowa defense is tough — too tough for Boilermaker quarterback Jeff "where's my flak jacket" George.

George has taken a pounding all season long, but his statistics are respectable. Still, he and his teammates aren't capable of overpowering the Iowa defense which has been steady all year long.

The Boilermakers are not the offensive juggernaut Coach — soon to be ex-Couch — Leon Burttnet is accustomed to fielding. Iowa's defense will shut Purdue down and set up a loving game, because the offense can't do it all day long. What the offense does with the ball is its business.

The defense will earn yet another win, just as it tried to do against the Illini last week.

Final score: Iowa 34, Purdue 10

As one of the oldest conferences in the nation, the Big Ten is rich in history.

Purdue President James Smart met with seven other Midwestern college presidents in 1895 and formed what became known as the Big Ten conference.

As football in the Midwest grew more and more competitive, schools began to bring in non-college players to play on their teams. This practiced angered Smart and other university leaders, and they joined together to form a conference in order to end the "outsider" practice.

Twelve members of the conference were Chicago, Illinois, Michigan, Minnesota, Northwestern,

Indiana, and Wisconsin. Four years later Indiana and Iowa were added to the conference members.

In 1906 the conference members met and set up five regulations for practices in college athletics. At that time those regulations were replaced by a new conference that specified the number of minutes of residence for athletes, allowed only three years of competition, limited the football season to five games, eliminated an all-around ineffective offense of late. But the Hawkeyes have one important plus that almost made the difference at Illinois and will make difference Saturday against

Iowa -- defense. The defense up all day long in Champaign, Ill.,

only to see the offense shut itself down.

Despite injuries, the Iowa defense is tough -- too tough for Boilermaker

quarterback Jeff "where's my flak

George.

George has taken a pounding all season long, but his statistics are respectable. Still, he and his teammates aren't capable of overpowering the Iowa defense which has been steady all year long.

The Boilermakers are not the offensive juggernaut Coach -- soon to be ex-Coach -- Leon Burt nett is accus-

ted to fielding Iowa's defense with a shut-down defense and set up the offense with good field position all day long. What the offense does with the ball is its business.

The defense will earn yet another win, just as it tried to do against the Illini last week.

SENIORS

Seniors relive days as Hawkeyes

By Julie Deardorff
Staff Writer

After five years of Iowa football, cornerback Ken Sims’ favorite memory isn’t his last-second interception against Michigan State or his touchdown-saving sack of Michigan quarterback Jim Harbaugh. It dates back to his freshman year.

“It was against Wisconsin in my first season,” Sims said. “My brother played for them, we were both No. 9 and we both played the same position. My mom was sitting in the stands, and in the first half she wore red and white and in the second half she changed to black and gold.

“For her to be alive and to see us both playing each other had to be the best highlight of my career,” he said.

Sims’ favorite memories are similar to those of many graduating seniors on the Iowa squad. They’ve experienced the things the typical student can’t even imagine.

“It’s real sad to know that 17 players will be finishing their eligibility,” Iowa Coach Hayden Fry said. “You get to know them real well, as athletes, as students and as human beings.”

Quarterback Mark Vlasic waited five years for his chance in the spotlight. Despite spending the majority of the season injured, he has no regrets. His most vivid memory, he says, will be the Iowa fans.

“They were one of my main reasons for coming here,” the Monaca, Pa., native said. “Every year we have a great turnout. Coming from Pittsburgh, I’ve gone to a few games back home and they only sell out for Penn State or something like that where it’s a big game. This Saturday, in the last home game of the year, I’d like to go out on a good note for the fans.”

VLASIC’S GOAL WHEN he came to Iowa, like many of the others, was simply to play.

“I wanted to be the starting quarterback. I worked my butt off,” Vlasic said. “It didn’t come right away. I had to sit out and wait until my fifth year, but I learned a lot.

“I don’t have any regrets. I’ve made some great friends and you can’t make up for that anywhere. And when you lose a game, you have to come back and practice the next day, play the next week,” he continued. “It’s something the students going to class never get to experience. In the long run it’s been very beneficial.”

For defensive lineman Jon Vrieze, the relationships are going to be the hardest to leave behind.

“I just want to go out with class and have one of the best years of my life,” he said. “I know it (Purdue) will be a really emotional game.”

When Iowa punter Gary Kostrubala thinks back to his football career, he’ll remember his 70-yard first down quick-kick against Michigan State last year.

“I was lining up sort of in field goal formation and we were in our own end zone,” he recalled. “It was really funny because I heard the other guys running around, yelling ‘What the hell is going on?’ I almost started laughing back there.

“Football may be over for Kostrubala but athletics will continue as he will begin training for the track season. He has used up his eligibility in track so he is unable to compete on the Iowa squad, but he plans participate in meets as an independent.

FOR SIMS, THE FIVE YEARS has been enough. He’s put in his time, and now he’s ready to move on.

“It’s physically hard on you,” he said. “I’m ready to go even though I loved it here. Who knows what I’ll be doing, if I’ll be playing pro or not. I have my communication major to fall back on, at least.

If I’m fortunate enough to be drafted, I’ll play pro.”

Sims believes Iowa offered him more than a chance to play football. Iowa City offered him the opportunity to integrate with the rest of the world. Coming from East St. Louis, Ill., a predomi-

Iowa’s Ken Sims is congratulated by Coach Hayden Fry after Sims’ interception won the Michigan State game 24-21 Oct. 4. Was this the greatest moment in Sims’ college career? No, not according to the East St. Louis, Ill., native. A contest versus Wisconsin against his brother in 1983, his freshman year, ranks higher.

“I first got here, my goal was just to play. After a while, your goals change. Each year they get higher and higher. I’m graduating in December, I’ll get my degree and go from there. I haven’t really been thinking about it, I’m concentrating on winning the next two games,” he said.

Drost also had some advice for youngsters interested in football. “Get a kicking tee if you don’t want to abuse your body,” he said. “It’s not for everyone. You have to really love the game, and I do. It’s the best thing I’ve ever done, I can’t imagine getting through school without playing football.”
Career? No, not according to the East SI.

In 1983, his freshman year, ranks higher. I'd like to go out on a good note for the fans," Mark Vlasic says about his last appearance at Kinnick Stadium.

Purdue's tradition of great quarterbacks continues as Indiana native Jeff George looks to show the skills that made him the top prep quarterback in the nation a year ago on a Boilermaker team where youth abounds.

While George's baptism to the Big Ten has been less than brilliant, the 6-foot-4 freshman hasn't lost faith in his talents and looks to a far brighter future.

"I knew the first year would be tough, but I didn't think it would be this tough," George said. "However, I've gained experience with each week, and I'm very excited about the future and what it holds for me."

"JEFF HAS BEEN showing tremendous progress with every new game," Purdue Coach Leon Burtnett said. "Jeff has a big advantage over many quarterbacks in that he knew our system, having lived so close to Purdue and because his high school emphasized throwing the ball as much as they did.

"He's learning how to read coverages better and handle himself on the field with more maturity. My only regret is that he hurt himself due to injury. But, given time he will become a fine quarterback." George attended Warren Central High School in Indianapolis where he showed his abilities in basketball and baseball as well as football.

AS A TWO-YEAR STARTER in basketball and baseball, he averaged over 16 points per game while hitting for a career average of 456. But it was the opinion of magazines all over the nation that his specialty was football, and they echoed this statement by pronouncing him the National Player of the Year. Included in this list was USA Today, the Washington Touchdown Club, the National High School Coaches' Association and others.

George then began the process of choosing which school he would attend for his college career, and after narrowing his choices down to Purdue and Iowa, he decided to go with the Boilermakers and get a quick start on his learning experience.

"Purdue was close to home, and I really thought a lot of Coach (Leon) Burtnett," George said. "I also came in wanting to play as a freshman, and I'm happy I got that chance."

GEORGE SOON REALIZED he'd gotten more than he bargained for as defenses took advantage of the youngster for 12 interceptions while allowing only four touchdowns. Still, George has amassed over 1,000 yards so far while completing more than 59 percent of his passes, leaving his optimism at its peak.

"My freshman I knew two interceptions," George said. "In high school, I faced two to three different defenses at the most, but things have been happening much faster lately. I just know that if I can make it through this season, things will only get easier in the future."

Like every great player, George will learn with experience just as those who have come before him. Players like Jim Everett, Mark Herrmann, Gary Danielson, Mike Phipps, Bob Griese and Len Dawson learned to adjust and each went on to have shining careers in Boilermaker uniforms.

GRIESE, EVERETT and Herrmann have made names for themselves the highest level of achievement which began back during their years at West Lafayette, Ind.

"BACK WHEN I WAS coming into college football, the Big Ten was considered the best conference in football, and I wanted to see if I could play with the best," former Kansas City Chiefs' star Dawson said. "It was such a different experience than I was used to in high school, and I don't think I really benefited as a quarterback until after I got out of college and had spent a couple of years in the NFL."

For Dawson, learning to adjust to a new style of play took time, but he soon learned to make that adjustment and is confident that George will as well.

"Jeff is in a situation where people are expecting a great deal from him, and he has to understand that becoming a great college quarterback doesn't happen overnight," Dawson said. "Jeff has the ability to be a good player as long as he doesn't go in thinking he knows it all."

"PURDUE IS A PASSING team, and I knew I would fit in well here," George said. "There's a tradition of quarterbacks here, and while my goals are high, I know that I'm still young and have a long way to go." George has also had the added pressure of seeing Burtnett's forced resignation, which will take effect at the end of the season.

"I've thought a lot about it," George said of Burtnett's resignation, "and I know it will have an impact on my future. Coach Burtnett is the main reason I came here, and I just wish it wasn't true."

"I've talked to Jeff's parents after every game," Dawson said. "Jeff has talked to me about it a lot." Burtnett said. "Jeff has said he's perfectly happy here and I don't anticipate him going anywhere.

On top of that is the Boilermakers' 2-7 record, which could end up being their worst since 1942 (1-8). If all these factors work together, Purdue may end up losing their star for the future as well.

"AS A TEAM we're getting a lot of experience and should be tough in the future," George said. "In two years I think we'll be in the Rose Bowl."

"Because a person does well in high school as Jeff has done, people expect him to be just as good when he gets to college and think that he's really asking a lot," Dawson said. "The maturity factor is so great as far as having to move away from home and become a topnotch athlete as well."

"If Jeff can put everything in perspective and work as hard as he can, he will become a topnotch athlete as well."

George has also had the added pressure of seeing Burtnett's forced resignation, which will take effect at the end of the season. It was something which has saddened the young man and left his future in doubt.

"I've thought a lot about it," George said of Burtnett's resignation, "and I know it will have an impact on my future. Coach Burtnett is the main reason I came here, and I just wish it wasn't true."

"If Jeff can put everything in perspective and not worry about it too much too soon, I think he will become a fine addition to the Purdue program, and in the future he will be fine," Dawson said.
Quast excels in initial season

By Brad Zimanek
Sports Editor

Iowa freshman linebacker Brad Quast is determined to be the leader of the Hawkeye defense.

Last weekend, with blood dripping down his forehead, he dejectedly walked off the field after Iowa lost 20-16 to Illinois. The 6-foot-2, 225-pounder shouldn't be too depressed. He already has accomplished in his first year what many collegiate athletes have taken four to do.

"It wasn't good enough was it," Quast shot back when asked about his performance in the defeat. "We didn't play up to our potential."

Quast certainly did. In nine games this year Quast has 73 tackles, third versus the Fighting Illini.

"MY GOAL EVERY GAME is to improve. Do a little better because you learn more from week to week," Quast added.

Not too many freshman can step in and start for a major college team, especially for Iowa Coach Hayden Fry. Quast has, and it brings Iowa fans a memory of another linebacker who started for Iowa in his first season - former all-American linebacker Larry Station who is now with the NFL's Pittsburgh Steelers.

Station in his first season with Iowa in 1982 led the Hawkeyes with 88 tackles after earning a starting position five games into the season. Quast may break Station's mark, but he doesn't prefer to be compared to Station or anybody else for that matter.

"I just got to keep on doing what I have been doing. It's great to be compared to that (Station), but I just got to play to my best," Quast, a Des Plaines, Ill. native, said. "I can't worry about what anyone compares me to. I just have to do the best I can."

QUAST HAS ANOTHER leader, one which he will follow a little more willingly — his father, Dick Quast, who played professional football with the NFL's Baltimore Colts and Winnipeg of the Canadian Football League.

"Dick was always supportive. He coached them (Brad and his brother) for the first three or four years they played grade school football," Diane Quast, Brad's mother said. "We never really pushed Brad. We never had to force him into football or anything like that."

One of the main reasons that the Quast parents never had to push either of their sons into sports is that it was already part of their life because of both Dick and Diane.

"We're very much into sports. I had a physical education scholarship myself," Diane said with a sense of pride in her voice after reminiscing about collegiate volleyball days at Northern Illinois. "We never forced either one of them. There was always football, baseball or basketball. I think sports helps develop character, and it was very advantageous for Brad."

IOWA'S QUAST NEEDED A little character after the loss to the Fighting Illini. Quast had been badgered about attending Iowa by some of his home state "friends" and a loss to Illinois will sting, especially since the Hawkeyes will not have the opportunity to play Illinois again until Nov. 4, 1989.

"I'm never going to live this one down," Quast said.

Quast believes Iowa can come back and win the last two games, including Saturday's game against Purdue if the Hawkeyes just put their minds to it.

"It's going to take a lot of character on our part to come back and rebuild ourselves," Quast said. "We are going to have see how we practice this week. Knowing the team that we have I think we'll come back and play well against Purdue. It's at home, and that helps out a lot."

The Quast family will be attending Saturday's game against the Boiler makers, and according to Diane Quast, it really doesn't matter if the Hawkeyes win or lose because Brad will have had his chance. And at least he is happy he made the decision to come to Iowa.

"We are really pleased with Iowa and everything Fry and Barry Alvarez (Iowa linebacker coach). We think the world of them," Diane said.

"Win or lose it really doesn't matter because he learns more with every game. Brad is really happy to be part of a great bunch of guys."

Iowa defensive back Dwight Sistrunk had a decision to make three years ago. He wanted to concentrate his efforts on one of two sports: football or basketball. Luckily, for Iowa fans, he put the roundabout behind him and decided on football.

"My first year out of high school I played basketball at a junior college (Moberly, Mo.) I played down there for a year. I had a good year too, but I just missed football. I'm more of a football (player)," Sistrunk said.

The junior from Dayton, Ohio, transferred to Illinois Valley Community College where he intercepted 15 passes in two seasons. He was named the team's most valuable player in 1985 and made several junior college All-American squads.

BUT THAT'S NOT what people think of when Dwight Sistrunk's name is heard. People think of another Sistrunk, as in Otis, the former Oakland Raider defensive end who happens to be his uncle.

"A lot of my instructors say, 'Are you related to him?' That's what they know me by. I kind of hate it sometimes. I want to get my own identity," he said.

The Iowa defensive back said he still keeps in touch with his uncle.

"I talk to him every now and then," he said. "It's kind of difficult. I don't have much time, let alone to call home. I don't have much time left."

"He calls me and lets me know I'm doing a good job and to hang in there. He's getting a lot of good reports even though I'm not playing as much as I would like to play. I'm doing good, and I try to do the best I can to carry on the name and the tradition."

UNLIKE HIS UNCLE who never went to college, or is often referred to as attending the University of Mars, the 21-year-old defensive back is attending school with a purpose in mind.

He chose Iowa over a host of other schools that sought his services. Having been recruited by schools from coast to coast, including eight Big Ten schools (Michigan and Northwestern were the only two that failed to express an interest) and a slew of other colleges like Arizona State, Kentucky, Ole Miss, North Carolina and Kansas State.

Sistrunk said Uncle Otis is "gonna try and come down for the Purdue game. A lot of players want to meet him. That'll be a great thrill for me."

After this season Sistrunk has one more year of eligibility remaining and he's not sure about it.

"Right now everything's looking pretty good. I got a fifth-year senior (Kyle Crowe) in front of me now, but after this season it should be almost over for me," he said.

"I don't think I want to do that. It's about time I moved on."

"It's got to be over for me at some point, I just don't know when," he added.

Sistrunk is often referred to as attending the "University of Mars," the 21-year-old defensive back for the Hawkeyes, one of the top 10 in the nation.
