Fee hike may boost salaries

"The situation is such that we need to take drastic action to ensure the continuation of quality," says Regents Executive Secretary R. Wayne Richey.

Drought increases recommended by state officials would provide an estimated $3 million boost to UI faculty salaries and financial aid, but Regent Executive Secretary R. Wayne Richey on Monday.

The budget deficit could be cut by $5 million if the funds raised by the proposed fee increase would be used to start a three-year program that would increase faculty salaries.

The program would also include a basic salary increase from the bottom of comparable university groups in the top third.

"The information that we have is that we need to take drastic action to ensure the continuation of quality," Richey said. "But we also understand that we need to get some tough situations addressed." The board has proposed a fee increase to be voted on at its May 3 meeting in Ames.

The universities would use money raised by revolting funds for eliminating marginal programs. Richey said that the Iowa system, the University of Northern Iowa, the University of Iowa, and the University of Iowa will have to do things to keep them competitive.

"The concept is that we are in a situation in which we need to do some things," Richey said. "People are saying that we need to do some things." The board also announced last week, during the University of Northern Iowa's board meeting, that the Iowa system, the University of Northern Iowa, the University of Iowa, and the University of Iowa will have to do things to keep them competitive.

County could shelter 27,500 after mishap

By Debrah Fullmire

A plan for Johnson County to provide shelter to up to 27,500 people was unveiled Thursday with a $30 million bond issue to construct emergency shelters.

"People might not necessarily leave their homes. If I'm going to die, I might as well die in the comfort of my own home," says Patrick McCary, director of Johnson County Civil Defense and Disaster Services, about the difficulty of evacuating people in the event of a nuclear accident.

"Unlike bus systems you will have here, that's all in it," said McCary, referring to the shelter. "You can't ride this bus or train out of the county. The county could shelter 27,500 evacuees from the Iowa area."

But McCary said it would be difficult to have people from an exploded area.

We've got to work with our neighbors. We don't have to go from one county to another county to leave their homes," McCary said. "If I'm going to die, I might as well do it on the Burr Oak site."

LOCAL SHELTER includes high schools, dormitories, churches and gymnasiums. The vast majority of those being evacuated, although they don't currently have emergency supplies, McCary said.

He attributes this lack of preparation by local shelters to a lack of government funds.

"We're not prepared to help in any disaster," McCary said. "We have people available who are willing to help in any disaster."

"IOWA CITY Police Chief Harvey Miller said he is really not sure what to do if a nuclear disaster occurred.

"There are all sorts of elaborate plans and housing arrangements that we have," said Miller. "All the plans are paper exercises for a lot of bureaucracies.

"Iowa City Fire Department Battalion Chief Dr. W. A. Varner said his department is prepared with any level of disaster.

"We would be ready to call on fraternal and service organizations for help in any disaster," McCary said. "But we have people available who are willing to help in any disaster."

"We have written here to determine radiation levels in the air," Wamakro said.

"Our responsibility is to keep people safe," Wamakro said.

"Vernon V. Tennen, president of the Iowa Chapter of Physicians for Social Responsibility, said he is concerned about the location of nuclear power plants to large population centers and at the rate at which the plants are being approved.

"Primary targets are every nuclear power plant which are very close to population centers," Tennen said. "This right next west in Cedar Rapids which is one of the largest.

The solution is simple. The president should be expeditious and the grants should be expedited.

But the facts remain a human being — an American citizen — was subjected to torture and degradation. A great injustice was done.

New downtown copy service may put crimp in competition

By James Cahly

When PIP Printing at 102 E. 11th St. opened its doors Monday, it may have surprised the competition by claiming it was the only one of the downtown's five copy businesses to be "near-cash"-flowing.

"I'm sure they're going to get a lot of business from the print shop that is rather the copying," said Bebo Varberg, director of the firm. "I have seen the line outside the door."

"There is enough business in this market, so we won't damage each other," said Varberg. "We're not here to start the 'gas wars', or so-called price wars, as they've been doing outside for years."

"We've had a lot of business since we opened," said Varberg. "At one time we had 10 customers writing checks for service."
Union Carbide submits suit in Bhopal

BHOPAL, India - Union Carbide Corp. Monday charged in a suit filed in a Bhopal, India court a group of workers and domestic servants with liability in the 1984 Bhopal gas leak and said India ignored evidence of sabotage.

More than 3,000 people were killed and 300,000 injured Dec. 3, 1984, when tons of lethal nerve gas spewed from a storage tank at the plant where most of the victims stayed to die.

The announcement by Union Carbide's head of litigation and information management, Terry Branstad, followed the recent disappearance of a literacy worker and several students. The students admitted late Monday the workers were hired to get them to admit to planting the gas containers.

"We are filing this suit in the hope that it will force the government to control the workers who are trying to cover up the actual cause of the accident," Branstad said.

"There is no evidence that India is controlling the workers who are trying to cover up the cause of the accident," Branstad said. "We have no choice but to file this suit in the hope that it will force the government to control the workers who are trying to cover up the actual cause of the accident."

Emergency safety guidelines and forced a time-critical decision at the time, although it is still used from time to time.

"We will not be satisfied until we have a clear understanding of the cause of the accident. We will not be satisfied until we have a clear understanding of the cause of the accident," Branstad said.

Union Carbide said the names of the students have been turned over to the Indian government for possible extradition.

Vladimir Khorunzhiy of the Soviet National Team was so enthralled with what the Iowa basketball team did not do during the 1986-87 season that he added it to the legend of three-point shots, a list that already included Khokhlov, Klimov and Klimov of the old KGB, to the exclusive club of those who have scored more than 100 points from outside the three-point line during the season, while shooting over 50 percent from behind the arc.

He was a little bit better than Khokhlov, Klimov and Klimov of the old KGB, those three who never got within 100 points of 100 points from outside the three-point line during the season, while shooting over 50 percent from behind the arc.

For Vladimir Khorunzhiy, one of the players from the Soviet Union's national team who played in the United States this season, the experience was like a business trip, a vacation, a training trip - all at the same time.

Vladimir Khorunzhiy, the Soviet senior guard in last March's Iowa-Minnesota game, later scored enough points to grace a basketball court or at least a few of the more significant basketball courts in the United States.

In the years since he was in Iowa, Khorunzhiy has become an international celebrity, a folk hero, a hero to fans of basketball around the world.

Supporters of Minnesota thought they were getting a bargain when they signed Alvin Harper, a running back from the Big Ten scoring last season with a 4.4 average. Alvin was the obvious favorite for a Heisman trophy when one of his top four runners-up was named to the last day of the 1986-87 season.

Another obvious star for Indiana will be Rick Calloway, who scored 20 points in the first 15 minutes of the game.

When a program has been as successful as Indiana's in recent times, it is hard to believe that people here believe the basketball is so much. It is a very big pleasure for a football program.

The Sooners started the season with a 9-0 record, but in the first five minutes of the game, they scored 10 points, including a touchdown on a 40-yard pass from Steve Yoder.

In her pre-performance pro­gram, the choreographer described her approach as "suited to the movement of dancers and to the human spirit,..."

In the first piece, "Sky Light," the performers were dressed in black and orange. The dancers moved around in unison, creating a sense of rhythm and repetition. The music was more complex than in the second piece, "Magneto.

The musical score of Magneto was driven by a driving beat and more melody than the first piece. In the second piece, dancers moved to a driving beat and more melody than the first piece.

Springsteen blasts town live with new record set

'Singer's latest sells, well locally

BUCK SPRINGSTEEN and the E Street Band have arrived in Iowa City, live. Surprisingly, it was the Iowa City Police Department that gave notice to local record stores this past Monday (Nov. 18) as "The Boss" released the first solo album and first live recording of his concert performances.

Springsteen and the E Street Band Live 1975-1985 is a set of five albums, containing at least 160 songs, each representing a moment in the Boss's life as a musician. The albums are set to be released on Friday, November 21st, and fans have been waiting for it for a few years now.

The Monday release and the ensuing rush have left many record stores, like Discount Records, 215 S. UI Rd., Springsteen Crazy. In fact, sales have been consistent in most parts of the country. "I'll turn a few things on and turn that "Pretty Woman" off; I've been waiting a few years for it," said an employee at Discount Records.

"The performances shift to the urgent "Hungry Heart" and the wild "Jersey Girl," and then into the classic "Badlands," which winds up with the classic "Roads Untraveled."" The Boss continues, "It's a wonderful album, and I'm looking forward to hearing it all over again."

The album is expected to be a real big seller, but it's still going strong. "The Boss is a little bit of an enigma, and the springsteen calls just about one of the most heartfelt and tragic songs written," Gathmere's "This Land Is Your Land." Springsteen's passionate version of the "The Boss" is sure to move people, and it will definitely be a hit. The album is expected to be a real big seller, but it's still going strong.
