U.S. rocket test-firing flawless

NASA officials jubilant as shuttle begins comeback

By Rudy Abramson
Los Angeles Times

BRIGHAM CITY, Utah — The guttural roar of the world's biggest solid rocket motor reverberated through the valleys of the Wasatch Mountains Sunday, heralding the revival of the United States' moribund space program.

Marking a critical milestone in the comeback of the grounded space shuttle, engineers carried out an apparently flawless captive firing of the shuttle's 126-foot-long booster rocket.

It was the first full-scale test of the rocket since extensive modifications to a leaky seal that caused the destruction of the shuttle Challenger in January 1986.

Officials of Morton Thiokol Inc., the rocket builder, and the National Aeronautics and Space Administration were jubilant at reaching the milestone with preliminary indications of success, but they cautioned that they will not fully know the outcome until the spent rocket is taken apart and inspected over the next month.

AS MANY AS 10,000 spectators lined a highway adjacent to the Morton Thiokol test area as the booster, cradled in a horizontal test stand, ignited with a thrust of 1.2 million pounds.

A 500-foot-long orange plume from its nozzle shot against the base of a mountain, and spewed upward, sending a boiling cloud of gray ash into the atmosphere.

Early indications were that the rocket, closely resembling the two boosters that will power the shuttle Discovery on a launch, now scheduled for next June, performed flawlessly.

Minutes after the expended casing was flooded with carbon dioxide, turning it into a huge tube of dry ice, test officials inspected it at a distance through field glasses and found the redesigned joints showing no sign of damage.

"From all indications, the redesign is three for three," said John Thomas, chief of NASA's redesign team, referring to two earlier scale model tests of the new seal.

LATER SUNDAY, engineers began analyzing data from nearly 500 sensors attached to the booster at critical points during the firing. To speed the answer to the vital question of whether the newly designed seal between the rocket's segments survived the firing undamaged, a few engineers will crawl through the nozzle into the blackened interior of the casing for a preliminary inspection before the sections are taken apart later this week.

Sunday's test came three days after problems with a

Iowa Poll: Voters favor Gephardt

DES MOINES (UPI) — With little more than five months left before Iowa's first-in-the-nation precinct caucuses, Missouri Rep. Richard Gephardt holds a narrow lead over seven other contenders for the Democratic presidential nomination, a newspaper poll showed Sunday.

The Des Moines Register's Iowa Poll surveyed 316 registered Democrats 18 and older by telephone to find 18 percent would vote for Gephardt if the election were held this week. All respondents said they plan to attend the Feb. 8 caucuses.

Massachusetts Gov. Michael Dukakis and Sen. Paul Simon of Illinois follow closely behind with 14 percent and 13 percent support respectively, the survey indicates.

EIGHTEEN PERCENT OF all respondents said they have not decided whom they will support.

Sen. Joseph Biden of Delaware and the Rev. Jesse Jackson each generated 10 percent support in the poll. Former Arizona Gov. Bruce Babbitt garnered 9 percent; Rep. Patricia Schroeder of Colorado, who has not officially entered the race, 6 percent; and Sen. Albert Gore Jr. of Tennessee 2 percent.

Sen. Sam Nunn of Georgia, who last week announced he would not enter the race, received 2 percent support in the poll, and Ohio Gov.

Richard Gephardt

Richard Celeste, who also has decided not to run, received 1 percent.

Nunn's and Celeste's totals were not figured into the poll.

The poll marks the first of the 1988 presidential race that questioned only those who said they definitely or probably will attend their precinct caucuses. A May survey of Iowa Democrats — not limited to caucusgoers — showed Gephardt leading with 24 percent support, followed by Jackson with 13 percent and Dukakis with 11 percent.

S. African mine workers end strike

By Michael Parks
Los Angeles Times

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa — The National Union of Mineworkers, faced with the mass dismissal of thousands of its members, ended its 3-week-old strike at South Africa's gold and coal mines Sunday, accepting a management offer of improved benefits but winning no further increases in pay.

Cyril Ramaphosa, the mineworkers' general secretary, insisted that the union had not lost what both it and the major mining companies had seen as a crucial test of strength between black labor and white capital — a battle that would have a broad political impact.

"We have not won all the demands we sought to win," Ramaphosa told a press conference, "but the Chamber of Mines has not... taught us the lesson they thought they would. We have emerged a lot stronger than we were."

"THERE IS A STALEMATE in the mining industry at present — they have not won, and we have not lost — but they have helped the union lay a strong foundation for further and significant victories in the future," Ramaphosa added.

Despite its brave words, the union accepted the wage increases — 15 percent to 23 percent — that management had unilaterally implemented two months ago, refusing further discussions on worker demands for 30 percent across the board. The average miner now earns about $285 a month, plus food and lodging, according to company figures.

The union also accepted company proposals for increased vacation pay and higher death benefits that it had rejected as inadequate only last week when it decided to continue what already had become the nation's costliest work stoppage.

THE STRIKERS BEGAN returning to work late Sunday on the mines' overnight shifts, but company and union officials said that it would probably take more than a week to bring back all the workers and resume full production.

Ramaphosa, explaining the union's abrupt reversal in its position, said that mineworkers' leaders and members had "reassessed the balance of forces" as tens of thousands of workers were fired late last week with uncertain prospects of being re-employed after an eventual settlement at the same mines and the consequent weakening of the union.

The focus thus shifted, union officials acknowledged, from winning a larger pay increase and forcing the mining companies to back down to emerging with what Ramaphosa Sunday called "an organizational victory" that would allow the mineworkers to renew their battle for higher wages next year from a position of strength.

Area group hopeful of luring U.S. West plant

By Joseph Levy
The Daily Iowan

Iowa City Mayor William Ambrisco said Sunday he won't be surprised if U.S. West, a national telecommunications firm, chooses the Iowa City area to locate its new research and development center.

"I think we stack up as well as anybody," Ambrisco said, adding a presentation to U.S. West executives Aug. 4 and 5 in Des Moines may have increased the area's chances.

Five representatives from the firm heard presentations from several Iowa metropolitan areas, including a joint-presentation from Iowa City and Cedar Rapids delegates.

Ambrisco, one of Iowa City's delegates, said the 30-minute presentation packed "showmanship" along with testimonials from prominent Iowans.

"I THOUGHT IT WENT very well," Ambrisco said, adding the Iowa City/Cedar Rapids effort was highly organized. "We were probably the only territory that finished their presentation on time."

Hansen named dean

UI Associate Professor of Physical Education and Secondary Education Gary F. Hansen has been named associate dean of the UI College of Education.

He succeeds UI Professor of Educational Development and Research R. Jerrald Shive, who will resume his position as associate professor in the Education College.

Hansen has been chair of the UI Department of Exercise Science and Physical Education for the past two years and acting chair for one year. He has also served on the Iowa Board of Control of Athletics since 1984.

Hansen earned three degrees from the UI, including a Ph.D. in physical education in 1964, and has conducted research in the area of teacher preparation and certification, the administration of athletics and has conducted workshops and seminars on the topic of substance abuse.

"Gary Hansen has exactly the type of qualifications needed to serve the college as associate dean at this critical point in its history," UI College of Education Interim Dean Lowell A. Schoer said. "His familiarity with teacher education in particular will be invaluable as we face the many issues confronting this critical area of the college's activity."

UI hosts farming seminar

UI Professor of Preventive and Environmental Health Kelley Donham announced this week that the UI and other Iowa organizations are making plans for a national conference next fall to chart policy strategies for reducing health hazards in agriculture.

The conference—"Agricultural Occupational and Environmental Health: Policy Strategies for the Future"—will be held in 1988 on Sept. 18-21 and 29-30, and will be sponsored by the UI, Iowa State University and the Des Moines-based Pioneer Hi-Bred International seed company.

Donham said at the Sept. 18-21 session in Iowa City, research and service needs and pertinent policy issues will be identified.

The second and third sessions in Des Moines will consist of policy working groups on Sept. 29 and a public forum on Sept. 30.

"Our ultimate objective with the conference is to reduce health and safety hazards on the farm, something that hasn't yet been dealt with in a programmatic way," Donham said.

CAC holds first meeting

The 17-member UI Collegiate Associations Council will hold its first meeting of the 1987-88 academic year tonight at 7 in the Union Princeton Room.

The council will discuss its revised constitution and will vote on whether to approve a $5,000 Parents' Council project, CAC President Mike Reck said.

The Parents' Council would generate a list of parents of UI students to participate in letter-writing campaigns to the Iowa Legislature, the state Board of Regents and other state bodies to voice their opinions on governmental decisions affecting students, Reck said.

Goodwill close to goal

Goodwill Industries of Southeast Iowa has raised over $793,000 in gifts and pledges, nearly two-thirds of it's $1.26 million fund-raising campaign begun in April, Goodwill Executive Director John Watson announced last week.

Among the projects scheduled to be funded by the campaign is the renovation of Goodwill's Iowa City building, 1410 First Ave., scheduled to begin this fall and be completed in 1989.

In January, the Hall Foundation of Cedar Rapids awarded a challenge grant of $240,000 to launch the campaign.

Major local donors to the campaign include First National Bank, 204 E. Washington St.; Iowa-Illinois Gas and Electric Co., 1630 Lower Muscatine Road; and Procter and Gamble, 2200 Lower Muscatine Road.

Actor Barr revisits, stumps for Dukakis instead of Hart

By James Cahoy
The Daily Iowan

Doug Barr

Actor and Cedar Rapids native Doug Barr made an appearance in Iowa City Sunday on behalf of Democratic presidential candidate Gov. Michael Dukakis, D-Mass., just five months after he was in the city campaigning for former Colorado Sen. Gary Hart.

Barr, formerly of the television show "The Fall Guy," was in town to speak at a benefit in Coralville on behalf of Dukakis, whom he said was the Democrats' best hope to win the 1988 presidential contest.

"My No. 1 reason is primarily that he has a proven record," Barr said. "If you look at what Dukakis has accomplished in Massachusetts, you can't help but admire him. He really did an excellent job in turning the economy around."

BARR, WHO WAS IN Iowa City April 24 to campaign for Hart, admitted he was disappointed at first when Hart decided to withdraw from the presidential campaign in May.

"I really felt bad when he had to withdraw," Barr said. "But I have always been interested in politics, and I didn't want to give up on the 1988 race just because he wasn't involved in it."

After meeting several of the candidates when Hart decided to withdraw, Barr said he found Dukakis the best qualified.

"I found Dukakis the most effective of all the candidates," Barr said. "I think we have seven strong candidates in the race, but I thought his record made him stand out."

Though he doubts Hart will re-enter the race, Barr said if he does, he will remain committed to Dukakis.

"I don't even think the possibility (of campaigning for Hart) is worth speculating on," Barr said. "I'm working for another candidate now."

Barr said he plans several more campaign trips to Iowa before the February caucuses. He also plans to continue his acting career, having recently made an appearance on the television series "Designing Women."

"I plan to work very hard for Dukakis in the future," Barr said. "As much as possible, I want to help him win in 1988."

Regina High selected for $500,000 guidance program

By Craig Sterrett
The Daily Iowan

Iowa City Regina High School was one of four Catholic schools in the nation selected to participate in a $500,000 consultative guidance program, school officials announced Friday.

The program, which will provide guidance in the areas of governance, management and development, begins Sept. 1 and will be worth about $115,000 in consultation to Regina over the next four years.

Regina will receive consultation from Catholic School Management, of Madison, Conn., the nation's only full-service consultative organization for Catholic schools.

"Catholic School Management is one of the foremost consulting firms," Regina Principal Michael Ashton said. "We feel quite fortunate to be working with the firm for four years."

Catholic schools, Regina was chosen from a pool of 50 schools who applied for the grant.

McGill-Toolen High School, Mobile, Ala.; Woodside Priory, Portola Valley, Calif.; and Cabrini High School, New Orleans La., were also chosen to participate in the program.

"Being chosen speaks well for the the program already in place at Regina," Ashton said. "The program will just make us better."

The Rev. Harry Linnenbrink, Episcopal Vicar for Iowa City's four Catholic parishes, identified six reasons for Regina's selection.

First, Regina recently completed an accreditation report which emphasized the quality education offered at Regina. Second, the Regina Board of Education proved its willingness to implement new school procedures, Linnenbrink said.

$1.7 million Elementary Center building, the establishment of the Regina Development Office and the tradition of Catholic schools in Iowa City dating back to 1846 were also factors which contributed to Regina's selection, Linnenbrink said.

The grant was based on a Harvard University study called "Effective Catholic Schools: An Exploration." The study cited two major problems in parochial school management problems—finance and governance.

Catholic School Management "will examine every aspect of the school from business affairs, board relations, internal operations, faculty involvement and school communication," Ashton said.

"They're going to come in and make recommendation that will not be used unless the board approves them," Ashton added. "They will try to put something together that will be right for Regina."

Travel scam costs lowans

DES MOINES—Travel-related scams that promise a free vacation in return for the purchase of a $400 voucher have cost hundreds of lowans as much as $1.5 million, the state attorney general's office said Sunday.

Assistant Iowa Attorney General Richard Cleland said his office received and investigated 111 travel-fraud complaints in 1986 and has received an additional 534 so far this year.

He estimated lowans have been cheated out of as much as $1.5 million by the too-good-to-be-true schemes.

Cleland said the sales pitch usually begins with a postcard that promises a free exotic vacation or a trip at an outstanding bargain rate if a voucher is purchased for $300 to $400. A postcard recipient phones a number listed on the mailing, and a smooth-talking solicitor requests the recipient's credit-card number, to which the voucher fee and often additional charges are assessed.

CLELAND SAID ONCE the vacation is planned, unforeseen charges, such as hiked off-season hotel-room rates and first-class airline tickets, often are added to the traveler's credit-card bill.

Unsuspecting would-be travelers who request a refund after seeing an astronomical credit bill usually have a difficult time obtaining their money, Cleland said. He said some are promised refunds but never are subsequently contacted.

Cleland said Iowa Attorney General Tom Miller has filed suit against several firms promoting the scam, including Amy Travel Service of Naperville, Ill.; B&D Marketing Co., Resort Travelers and Time and Travel Marketing, all of Los Angeles; Marketing Advance Research of Conroe, Texas; and Resort Performance of Pahrump, Nev.

Police

By Franc Contreras
The Daily Iowan

A Madison, Wis., man was arrested by Iowa City police early Friday morning after he broke into an Iowa City woman's home and allegedly assaulted her, according to police reports.

Steven G. Goff, 20, was charged with assault, criminal trespass and public intoxication by police in connection with the incident, according to the report.

He was released from Johnson County Jail Friday night after posting a $300 bond.

Accident: An Iowa City man was injured early Saturday morning after his vehicle was hit by another car which allegedly failed to heed a stop sign at the intersection of Bloomington and Gilbert streets, according to police reports.

The accident occurred when a vehicle driven by Mark M. McMahon, age unknown, of 29 W. Burlington St., was hit by a vehicle driven by UI senior Lee Jaehyuch, of 702 N. Van Buren St., according to the report.

McMahon was taken to Mercy Hospital, 500 Market St., and was released Sunday, according to a hospital official.

Jaehyuch was charged by police with failure to stop at a stop sign in connection with the incident. Other charges are pending, according to police reports.

Accident: A two-car collision in the 500 block of South Dodge Street Saturday night caused more than $500 damage to the vehicles involved, according to police reports.

No injuries were reported in the accident, which occurred when a vehicle driven by Beth D. Butler, 21, of 650 S. Dodge St., was hit by a vehicle driven by Gregory E. Davis, 18, of Kalona, Iowa, according to the report.

Davis, who was delivering pizza for Rocky Roccoco's, 118 S. Dubuque St., at the time of the incident, was charged with improper lane use in connection with the incident, according to the reports.

Arrest: Three Iowa City men were charged with public intoxication Sunday in connection with an incident in which they allegedly took down a stop sign near the intersection of Benton and Van Buren streets and were hitting a nearby residence with the sign, according to police reports.

David J. Breed, 23, of 406 S. Gilbert St., Daniel P. McGovern, 22, of 3007 Lakeside Drive, and Kurt W. Steinbrenner, 22, also of 3007 Lakeside Drive, were charged in connection with the incident, according to the report.

Grant will aid UI research on rural women

By Anne Kevlin
The Daily Iowan

A $250,000 grant from the Rockefeller Foundation will reinforce UI research on rural women and feminist UI Women's Studies Program Chairwoman Margery Wolf said Sunday.

Money from the grant will go toward six fellowships to be awarded to postdoctoral scholars who wish to study rural women and issues that surround them, she said.

By focusing on rural women, Wolf said, feminist research becomes more accurate.

"A LOT OF feminist theory has been based on urban women, urban middle-class women, urban middle-class white women," Wolf said. "We are beginning to question our own theory."

With the farm crisis, Wolf added, rural women's roles are changing. Women who worked at home and on the farm before the crisis are being forced, for economic reasons, to work outside the home.

"This changes gender relations," Wolf said. "Men are not used to having the women hand them money; they are used to handing the women money."

"We are certainly trying to look at another perspective rather than the women who are putting on a suit and going to work every morning, or women who are going to work at a factory every morning," she added.

RESEARCH IS becoming feminist-oriented, according to Wolf, who said conducting feminist research is necessary to gain an accurate assessment of various issues.

"It's including 100 percent of the population instead of 50 percent," she said.

The first two residency program fellowships will be awarded in the spring, and Wolf said she expects recipients will apply their research to articles and public lectures.

Coehlo: Democrats must lead

By James Cahoy
The Daily Iowan

The Democratic party must take the lead in foreign and domestic policy initiatives in the next 18 months if it wants to recapture the presidency in 1988, the third ranking member of the U.S. House of Representatives told an audience at the UI College of Law Friday.

Rep. Tony Coehlo, D-Calif., who currently serves as House Majority Whip, spoke to a crowd of 20 people at the Boyd Law Building and about the same number at Swan's, 210 S. Dubuque St., during a campaign appearance on behalf of presidential candidate Rep. Richard Gephardt, D-Mo.

COEHLO, WHO IS one of 70 House members backing Gephardt, said one of his main reasons for supporting the Missouri congressman is Gephardt's "electability."

"Gephardt can win in the South and the West, and that's very important for any candidate we nominate," Coehlo said. "I also feel Gephardt has the right vision for America in the future. He knows what our priorities should be."

The Democratic party must have a clearly defined vision for success in 1988, Coehlo said.

"I think the odds are extremely good we will win the White House in 1988, but we have to establish an alternative to the Republicans in the year," he said. "We have to redirect our money away from expensive defense programs and invest it in the future of our country. We have to invest it in the future of our young people."

The Reagan administration's foreign policy was one of Coehlo's primary targets. Coehlo said President Ronald Reagan's policy exhibits a mentality of "fight first, then ask questions later."

CONSISTENT DEMOCRATIC opposition to aid to the Nicaraguan Contras and support of a Central American peace plan, Coehlo said, shows the determination of the Democrats to provide an alternative to Reagan's policies.

"There is no reason why the Central American nations can't achieve peace among themselves, and that's what we are trying to push with this peace plan," Coehlo said. "We have to oppose aid to the Contras to make this peace plan work and stop the killing in Central America."

Coehlo was also strongly critical of the Reagan administration's policies in the Persian Gulf, pointing out he and several other congressmen were taking the administration to court to invoke the War Powers Act to try to stop "the largest U.S. military commitment since Vietnam."

"WHAT WE SHOULD have done is sit down with our allies and consult with them on the best way to provide free passage through the gulf," Coehlo said. "But for some reason, we decided we were going to do it all on our own."

On the topic of the Democratic presidential efforts in 1988, Coehlo complained about the media's treatment of the current field of seven Democratic candidates, saying they should not be labeled as the "seven dwarfs."

He also stressed the party must return to its roots to win in 1988.

"We must believe in the grass roots strength of our party," Coehlo said. "We must identify the difference between our party and the Republicans and emphasize it in 1988."

from DI wire services

Mass murder likely in Seoul cult deaths

SEOUL, South Korea — Officials investigating the deaths of a religious cult leader and 31 followers said Sunday most of the victims were drugged and strangled in what they believed was a mass murder-suicide.

A local businesswoman and religious cult leader, who had once been awarded a presidential citation, was found Saturday in the attic of a factory building alongside the bodies of her three children and 28 workers, witnesses said.

Witnesses said many victims had their hands and feet tied, some had tissue paper stuffed in their noses and mouths and one man was hanged by the neck from the attic rafters.

A preliminary autopsy showed Park Soon-ja, 48, her children and the workers had ingested an unspecified drug before they died and that all but one had been strangled, a government official said late Sunday.

Canadian autoworkers authorize strikes

TORONTO — Autoworkers at 27 Canadian plants voted overwhelmingly to authorize strikes against any of the Big Three automakers if contract talks fail, union negotiators announced Sunday.

The talks affect 63,000 members of the Canadian Auto Workers union employed by General Motors of Canada Ltd., Ford Motor Co. of Canada and Chrysler Canada Ltd.

Three-year contracts with GM and Ford and a two-year pact with Chrysler expire Sept. 14. The Canadian union is negotiating simultaneously with the three and no strike deadlines have been set.

Libya hands Chad major defeat

PARIS — Libya said Sunday its forces killed 460 Chadian troops and wounded 877 in retaking the border village of Aouzou, handing Chad its first major defeat in a campaign to end Libyan occupation of its northern territory.

The Libyan news agency JANA, monitored by the British Broadcasting Corp., said a number of Chadians scattered by the fighting were coming out of the sun-baked Tibesti mountains in central Africa to surrender, in search of water.

After heavy fighting Friday, Libyan soldiers hoisted the Libyan flag over Aouzou, in the disputed border region between Libya and Chad, JANA said.

The Libyans had lost control of the desert-oasis Aug. 8 and were beaten back in two subsequent attempts to retake it before Friday's decisive battle in the Aouzou strip.

Poll shows difference in AIDS attitudes

PRINCETON, N.J. — Most Americans say people with AIDS "should be treated with compassion," but one-third of the public believes employers should have the right to fire AIDS victims because of the disease, a poll showed Sunday.

Sixty percent of those surveyed agreed with the statement: "People with the AIDS virus should be made to carry a card to this effect," said the Gallup Poll of 1,607 adults around the United States.

The survey of people's attitudes toward acquired immune deficiency syndrome, conducted between July 10 and July 13, found that respondents were more sympathetic when questions were presented in general terms rather than when specific measures — like identification cards or firings — were discussed.

New drug slows effects of Alzheimer's

CHICAGO — Italian researchers reported Sunday that a new drug appears to retard and partially reverse the mind-crippling effects of Alzheimer's disease, but U.S. scientists urged caution in interpreting the results.

The drug, based on a fatty compound derived from cows, caused delayed but significant improvements in 62 Alzheimer's patients who took low oral doses over a three-month period, said Luigi Amaducci of the University of Florence School of Medicine.

Amaducci said that the drug produced no side effects, and that further trials were under way to determine if higher intravenous doses would produce greater clinical improvements.

"I certainly don't want to say this is a cure, because it is not," Amaducci said.

A spokeswoman for the Alzheimer's Disease and Related Disorders Association cautioned sufferers or their families from expecting too much too soon from the drug.

Man kills self, 5 others in shooting

BOSTON — A 23-year-old Vietnamese man who got "set off by something" shot and killed five people, including his sister, uncle, aunt and cousin, before killing himself with a handgun, police said.

A female Vietnamese visitor also was slain. Two people, including a man believed to be the suspect's brother and a 3- or 4-year-old girl who is the daughter of another cousin, were wounded, the child critically.

The shootings began about 2 p.m. CDT on Newport Street in Boston's residential Dorchester section. Bullets were sprayed on the street outside, where some bodies were found, and also inside the Vietnamese family's apartment on the first floor of a three-story building.

A domestic dispute may have sparked the bloodshed, officials said. Authorities found a 9mm handgun and a .22-caliber handgun at the scene.

Israelis cancel plane project

By Dan Fisher
Los Angeles Times

JERUSALEM — Swallowing its national pride, the Israeli government voted narrowly Sunday after a long and dramatic debate to cancel the multibillion-dollar Lavi jet fighter project.

The decision was immediately welcomed in Washington, which had taken the extraordinary step two weeks ago of publicly urging Israel to drop the aircraft "in the best interests of both our countries." The United States has funded virtually the entire $1.5 billion cost of the project to date.

But workers and management at Israel Aircraft Industries, which developed the Lavi (Hebrew for Lion) and where thousands of jobs are at stake, branded it a catastrophe and threatened drastic protest measures.

Moshe Arens, a former ambassador to Washington considered the spiritual father of the Lavi, said he would resign his Cabinet post rather than share collective responsibility for the decision. And Industry Minister Ariel Sharon, a rightist in the Cabinet, called it a "surrender to foreigners" in what some saw as a harbinger of bitter political infighting ahead.

THE FINAL vote was 12-11 against continuing the 7-year-old project with one pivotal abstention by Health Minister Shoshana Arbeli-Almosino, a member of Foreign Minister Shimon Peres' Labor Alignment who had previously supported the Lavi.

Billed as one of the most crucial economic and strategic decisions in the country's history, action on the Lavi was finally taken along partisan political lines. The only Cabinet officer to cross party lines was Finance Minister Moshe Nissim, a consistent opponent of the project even though he belongs to the Likud Bloc of Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir, who staunchly supported the Lavi. Nissim said there was no economic alternative to killing it.

But it was Arbeli's surprise abstention that turned the tide. "I am very sorry, but this is the decision of the party, and I am a member in the party," she told reporters after the meeting.

PERES ACCUSED Shamir of being the first to "politicize" the vote this weekend, when he allegedly pressured Tourism Minister Avraham Sharir, a Likud member and formerly a Lavi opponent, to switch sides.

"Until Friday it was a personal matter of each member of the Cabinet," Peres said. "But when the Likud started to press minister Sharir it became a political matter. And that is why we had to ask Shoshana to vote with us. I sympathize with her. I know how she feels. But we had to do it."

Peres himself had favored continuation of the Lavi as recently as two weeks ago, when he joined Shamir in blocking a Cabinet vote that looked as if it would go against the project. But he switched sides in recent days, apparently influenced by strong U.S. government opposition to the program and concern that his stand had put him in conflict with almost every other top leader of his centrist political party.

TWO LAVI prototypes have been built and flight tested, and production of up to 300 Lavis was originally to have begun in the early 1990s. However, Washington turned against the Lavi as it became clear that it would wind up costing much more than originally forecast and that it would be far cheaper for Israel to buy American-made F-16 fighters.

The Israeli military also argued against the project, saying that it would starve other essential weapons development programs of vital funds.

U.S. arms negotiator allays fears of treaty compromise

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Chief arms negotiator Max Kampelman said Sunday the administration would insist on verification of any arms pact with the Soviets, dismissing fears he might compromise on the issue to secure a superpower summit.

Senate Republican leader Robert Dole and Sen. Albert Gore Jr., D-Tenn., appearing on CBS's "Face the Nation," embraced the prospects of a U.S.-Soviet arms pact and called for bipartisan support of such a treaty.

All three men made their remarks in response to reports this week that U.S. and Soviet negotiators meeting in Geneva were close to reaching an agreement on limiting medium-range nuclear missiles in Europe.

Kampelman told ABC's "This Week with David Brinkley" he was optimistic an arms agreement is imminent, but said U.S. negotiators would not be pressured into reaching an agreement with the Soviet Union in order to secure a summit meeting between President Ronald Reagan and Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev.

"I do not believe in negotiating under a deadline of the calendar," Kampelman said. "We want to make sure that if they say they're going to destroy it (their missiles) they're going to destroy it. That would require some method of on-site inspection," he said.

In separate interviews on CBS, Dole and Gore backed the arms pact, but the Kansas lawmaker warned the administration U.S. verification of Soviet compliance to an arms treaty would be a "sticking point" in gaining legislative approval of an agreement.

Armed with newspapers on the Philippines' on the streets of Manila Sunday morning after crushed coup attempt, newsboys hawk their wares government forces stopped mutinous soldiers.

Aquino lashes out against leaders of failed takeover

By Mark Fineman
Los Angeles Times

MANILA, Philippines — President Corazon Aquino unleashed a blistering propaganda offensive Sunday to further discredit the renegade leaders of Friday's failed military coup against her government, condemning them as "treacherous and cowardly" liars who "mercilessly slaughtered" civilians and staged their mutiny mainly to assassinate her and her entire family.

"The aim of the rebels was clearly to kill the president and her family," Aquino asserted in an angry speech delivered beside the Tomb of the Unknown Filipino Soldier during solemn National Hero Day rites on a rainy Sunday afternoon.

The 54-year-old housewife-turned-politician dared the rebel leaders and their remaining troops — hundreds of whom continued to evade a manhunt for them — to try again.

REITERATING HER HIGH praise and confidence in Gen Fidel Ramos, the armed forces chief of staff, Aquino reminded her listeners that she and Ramos "have crushed every threat to this government and our democracy." She was referring to five previous unsuccessful armed attempts to overthrow her 18-month-old government as well as to Friday's failed coup.

"Last Friday taught them their most bitter lesson. And we shall do it again if they want," Aquino said. Nevertheless, Aquino was surrounded during all of her public appearances Sunday by the largest personal security force ever seen around a Filipino president.

A 13-vehicle motorcade of presidential guards armed with automatic weapons escorted her to the site of the tomb in the heart of army headquarters in Manila's Ft. Bonifacio. The public was barred from the event.

MANY CABINET MEMBERS and foreign diplomats present winced or ducked when an army ceremonial team fired a 21-gun salute, and all eyes watched as an air force helicopter flew low over the proceedings. The helicopter's door opened and the crew inside dropped thousands of yellow flower petals on the ceremony, then tipped the rotor blades in memory of the nation's newest dead heroes.

THE CEREMONY AT Ft. Bonifacio was an indication, local political analysts said, of how the failed coup eventually may have helped bring Aquino closer to her armed forces, if for no reason other than that it saved the lives of the president and her family.

Meanwhile, armed forces troops remained on red alert nationwide, and a second battalion of Filipino Marines and artillery were flown in to Manila from the southern island of Mindanao to stand guard against any renewed assault by rebels still at large.

During a ceremony at Camp Aguinaldo welcoming the new Marine battalion, Ramos assailed the coup leaders, including Col. Gregorio "Gringo" Honasan, a charismatic combat veteran who was one of the key planners and leaders of the February 1986 uprising that toppled then-President Ferdinand Marcos and brought Aquino to power.

STANDING IN THE parade ground 100 yards from the burned-out general headquarters building of the armed forces, Ramos described for the Marines how rebel troops started the fire in an effort to drive out 116 loyalist officers and men who had held the rebels at bay for hours with a few dozen M-16 rifles.

Ramos repeated his earlier report that 705 mutineers are now in custody.

Military and civilian leaders agreed that the government must now quickly begin to redress grievances raised by the coup leaders, among them the poor quality of life for the military and the low pay of the soldiers, who get an average of $75 a month to fight an estimated 23,000 Communist insurgents in jungles throughout the country.

Coup attempt leader known for macho lifestyle, bravado

By Keith B. Richburg
Washington Post

MANILA, Philippines — In films of the 1986 military revolt that toppled Ferdinand Marcos as president of the Philippines, Col. Gregorio "Gringo" Honasan is always silent, but always in the foreground.

From the side of his mentor, former Defense Minister Juan Ponce Enrile, Honasan emerged as a mustachioed, musclebound matinee idol of sorts, sometimes attracting more attention than his boss at public appearances and always drawing affectionate attention from a throng of female admirers.

On Friday Honasan led an unsuccessful military coup against Marcos's successor, Corazon Aquino.

HONASAN'S "HERO" status, rooted in those heady days of February 1986, was helped along by a lifestyle that lived up to the macho image. He was known as a ruthless combat warrior when he fought Moslem rebels during a rebellion in Mindanao in the 1970s, reportedly carving off the ears of his victims.

Honasan was fond of his pet python, Tiffany, and made parachute jumps with the snake draped around his neck.

Honasan was once spotted dancing bare-chested, again with his ever-present snake around his neck. He was also known to dash off from political road trips with Enrile to judge local beauty contests.

HONASAN WAS ONE OF Enrile's "boys," a founding member of the Reform the Armed Forces Movement (RAM), the core of which was composed of 1971 graduates of the Philippines' elite military academy.

So when Enrile broke from President Aquino last year and declared that he would "do like Rambo" if provoked, it was inevitable that the team became known as "Rambo and the RAM Boys."

It was a game that soon turned deadly. The RAM Boys' sometimes comic bravado became less humorous as they became increasingly strident in their criticisms of Aquino and talked openly of their ability to topple yet another president.

Last fall one of the RAM Boys close to Honasan laid out for a foreign reporter a scenario for a coup that involved making Aquino a virtual prisoner in her palace, stripping her of real power, launching "surgical strikes" against some of her key aides and allowing her to continue to rule like a British monarch.

That scenario turned out to be remarkably close to a coup plot.

Playboy beat by Penthouse to Hahn story

NEW YORK (UPI) — Penthouse beat Playboy to the punch Sunday with Jessica Hahn's own lurid story about her sexual encounter with television evangelist Jim Bakker, an account liberally spiced with intimate, explicit details.

The disclosure of Hahn's December 1980 tryst with Bakker and the Rev. John Wesley Fletcher in a Florida hotel room toppled Bakker from his pulpit and the leadership of the $129 million PTL Ministry in March.

Hahn has sold her story to Playboy for an undisclosed sum, and her lawyer said it would "stun the country."

The Penthouse version of Hahn's story, due to go on sale Sept. 8, will be brought out six days early due to expected demand, a Penthouse spokesman said.

A 'Hill' of a look at Vietnam

'Hamburger Hill' offers a different view of the latest trend

By Matthew Wills
The Daily Iowan

Hamburger Hill is the latest example of a "Vietnam movie," a full-blown late 1980s film trend that's already seen Platoon, Gardens of Stone and Full Metal Jacket. More are on the way, and even television is right in there with a series or two. It's been a decade and a half since U.S. ground troops were pulled out of South East Asia, and Hollywood has finally decided it's safe enough to cash in on a topic that won't raise as many hackles as it once did.

Hamburger Hill is a back-to-basics Vietnam war film. It doesn't have the metaphysical hokum of Platoon or Full Metal Jacket's ruminations on masculinity and militarism. Indeed, it has no pretense of explaining the reasons and causes of U.S. military intervention in Vietnam, or even the psychological motivations of the troops themselves. For an "experience" often excessively subjectified, Vietnam provides a perfect example of the dichotomy between history and psychology: Now it seems as if, with the psychology exorcised in earlier films, the continuing interpretations of the war can get back to its history.

Not here.
This film simply follows a squad through several days of fierce combat and endless mud. The action is graphically filmed as the basic Ten Little Indians plot is played out on the Sisyphean hill of the title. There's much blood, guts, and bang-bang, a standard treatment of GIs in action.

IT IS, IN SHORT, a classically constructed war film, one of Hollywood's time-honored genres. This basically boils down to meaning that war is hell, but somebody's got to do it. These somebodies are portrayed by a cast of unknowns who update the "kid from Brooklyn too young to die" archetypes of many a World War II film. The only thing that isn't traditional is the use of Philip Glass's original musical score; it's oddly out of place here when it swells melodramatically at the end of the fight for the hill.

BY STRAYING AWAY from "answers" (either historical or psychological) to the question "why Vietnam?," the film's construction suggests that Vietnam was no different from any other war. This is troubling, considering the film's subject matter and its interesting start. The beginning is a temporal whip pan which wrenches the film from the Vietnam Memorial in contemporary Washington, D.C., to the jungles of Nam under fire 18 years earlier. None of the other recent Vietnam films have been so bold as to suggest that Vietnam was actually a historical event with continuity and relevancy to the present. What's been so incredible about the other recent "serious" Vietnam films is precisely that they've been so adamantly ahistorical.

HAMBURGER HILL makes stabs at setting up a historical context by foregrounding the Vietnamese and pointing to racism within the structure of the U.S. military itself. The form, in direct contradistinction to Platoon's invisible enemy, are often highlighted, particularly early in the film (yet both films continue to make the mistake of suggesting that Filipinos look like Vietnamese). One shot in particular is quite powerful, even in its self-conscious way; the frame is filled by a child sitting in front of an umbrella as gigantic truck wheels roll by, suggesting two completely different worlds.

But Hamburger Hill also takes several cheap shots at the opposition to the war in the United States, eluding the real issues with emotional breast-beating. Yet even this is as far as it goes.

This film, then, is only as good as the time it is made in. Discourse concerning Vietnam should be encouraged, but its current representation in mainstream film should not be taken as a sign of progress. Hollywood's narrative cinema is of course a great whitewasher of history, but in this case the topic is too important to be treated as just a setting for another war film.

On Art

Readers face the problem of finding new short stories to read. Not that they aren't being published, but somehow they don't seem to have the same impact — the same grasp of reality.

The old stories suffice, but they have been read — in a sense, used up.

Now comes Russell Working, winner of the Iowa Short Fiction Award, with his short story collection Resurrectionists, published by the UI Press. The writer is only 27 years old. His writing is very good.

At first the reader might say, "Am I going to like this?" Or even, "Am I going to understand this?" Working writes a disturbing line of prose.

His opening story in the collection, "Charis," relates how a young man suffers a seizure at a New Year's Eve party and cannot remember large areas of his subsequent experience. He has a friend named Charis (at times he does not remember her name) who graciously stays with him to bring him back to a normal life.

THE STORY HAS sudden stopping points, like a broken circuit, but it is told from the point of view of a mind blown by a series of grand mal seizures, a life frightened by the arbitrariness of sudden trips to the dark and the groping back to light to face a medical profession that is caring, but baffled in its search for causes.

All of Working's major themes come forth in "Charis." Epileptic seizure (Working himself experienced an unexplained seizure), a caring relationship, confrontation with the possibility of dark death inside the cleansed arena of a hospital and the Biblical/religious theme.

The word Charis means grace. A strong feeling of Biblical grace flows through every story. The protagonist's situation in "Charis" might be Kafkaesque, but if so, it is Kafka suffused with light and warmth.

THE BOOK'S TITLE story, "Resurrectionists," tells of a young American widower named Rossin adrift in Haiti. His wife has just died after contracting some mysterious tropical disease that wastes her away in the hospital. Rossin muses through his days with forms of work (he photographs the dead), and in the story he bitterly reflects on life, death and the resurrection while lying in his hotel room lubricating his mind with watered rum.

Working puts it across. One feels the horror of the island straining under the impoverishments of ignorance, corruption, violence and poverty. One witnesses the pluck of the individual island citizens who struggle against their situation. One experiences the despair of a husband confronting death in the midst of youth.

"RENDERING BYZANTIUM" takes Oregon as its outward topography, but inwardly it continues the same thematic exploration: injury (physical and spiritual), a breaking/healing relationship, a spiritual catharsis. It is the only modern story I have read that deals significantly and sympathetically with an experience common to millions of people in the world — Christian salvation.

Asked about this aspect of his fiction, Working replied: "Religious themes provide a depth to literature; also, they are important to me personally as a Christian. I see the world in religious terms even in very secular situations."

Working's book of stories represents only a token of the really worthy fiction being written all the time, everywhere in the world. It is a firm promise of more good things to come from him.

Pick Up Your Ears (1987) An added performance because of demand, this Stephen Frears art house hit is a biography of British playwright Joe Orton, unfortunately more famous for his gruesome death (bludgeoned to death by his homosexual lover) than for his brutal black comedies. The movie follows biographer John Lahr (Wallace Shawn) in his search for the "truth," running into Orton's agent (Vanessa Redgrave) and other Orton associates. Gary Oldman stars as the acidic, prowling Orton, and Alfred Molina plays Halliwell, his embittered lover. 5 p.m.

UI dance troupe planning 1987 gala

By B. Gordon
The Daily Iowan

Iowa is no longer called "A Place to Grow," but more and more it is becoming known as "A Place to Dance."

The UI Dance Department has big plans, according to faculty member Elena King. "We're hoping our touring company, Dancers To Go, will be ready for Asia in the near future," she said recently.

Dancers To Go, now in its third year, has already made two tours of Iowa elementary and high schools, and has also toured in Illinois and Wisconsin. The spring tour will include dates in Omaha, Neb., and St. Louis.

KING SPENT THIS summer in Hong Kong and Taiwan at the International Dance Academy Festival, where such premier dance schools as Juilliard and the State University of New York-Purchase have been featured guests. King said there was a possibility that the UI Dance Department will join that prestigious company.

"For this year's gala we're really trying to promote our future goal of going to the Orient," said faculty member Alicia Brown, who is organizing the 1987 annual Dance Gala in Hancher Auditorium.

The gala is a yearly event featuring the best dancing the UI has to offer. The program often includes new faculty choreography and runs the gamut of dance styles.

UI dancers perform "Visions" on the Hancher Auditorium stage. Dance Gala '87 auditions begin Sept. 2, and are open to all interested parties regardless of their affiliation with the UI.

THIS YEAR'S GALA will have an Oriental theme, in keeping with the department's long-term aspirations. The popular, exuberant Chinese "Red Sash Dance" will be on the program, along with some traditional Chinese solo works danced by U.S.-China Dance Exchange graduate student Er-Dong Hu.

Hu is in his second year at the UI, and faithful Dance Department audiences will remember his "Sword Dance" from the Dancers To Go kickoff concert last year. Operagoers of last spring and summer will recognize him as the featured male dancer from Don Giovanni and La Traviata.

The Dance Gala will also revive Lew Christiansen's "Con Amore," a comedic love romp in the classical style, from the 1985 gala. Faculty members David Berkey and Susan Dickson will have new works for the event.

KING'S NEW PIECE will be a collaborative effort, a work choreographed to Sergei Prokofiev's third piano concerto, which will be played by Music Professor Kenneth Amada and the UI Symphony Orchestra.

And the winners of the first annual Seven States Choreography Competition, Sam Watson and Christina Ernst, will have their "Power of Different Places" premiered at Hancher.

The Seven States Choreography Competition was instituted last year by the Dance Department in order to promote original dance in the region. Over 60 entries were viewed by the department faculty, who narrowed the competition field to four works.

Nina Wiener, whose company did a brief residency here last winter, chose Watson and Ernst's piece from among the four finalists.

DANCE GALA AUDITIONS begin Sept. 2 and are open to all interested parties regardless of their majors or connection to the UI. King said she would encourage non-departmental dancers to participate in the auditions. Dancers To Go is also open to non-majors.

The gala will take place Nov. 14 and 15.

Also on the department's schedule this year is its annual Space/Place Concert in North Hall on Dec. 10, which will be combined with the composition concert for student choreography.

The UI Dance Department holds classes for beginners and intermediate dancers in ballet, modern, jazz and tap. Advanced dancers who wish to take majors' classes must arrange for an audition. Semester hours may fulfill Physical Education requirements.

Huston's old works will be remembered best

By Matthew Wills
The Daily Iowan

John Huston was 81 when he died on Friday. This fall will see the release of the last film he directed, The Dead, based on the James Joyce short story.

Like the true Hollywood romantic he was, Huston worked right up to the end, only vacating his role in Mr. North, a family affair with daughter Anjelica and writer/director son Danny, when pneumonia sent him to the hospital.

Huston directed such film classics as The Maltese Falcon (1941); The Treasure of the Sierra Madre (1948), for which he received the best screenplay and director Oscars; The African Queen (1952); and Beat the Devil (1954). In more recent times, Huston was responsible for The Man Who Would Be King (1975), Wise Blood (1979), Under the Volcano (1985) and Prizzi's Honor (1985).

At his best when directing men in adventure, Huston's life seems to have been made to be filmed. Before he got his first job in Hollywood in the 1930s as a screenwriter for Samuel Goldwyn, Huston was a boxer, cavalry officer, art student and newsman.

While some of his later films were indifferent or uninspiring, his early films will be the ones best remembered.

Area entertainers perform at banquet

By John Marcus
Special to The Daily Iowan

Several local and regional entertainers came together Sunday afternoon at the Johnson County Fairgrounds to present "A Prairie Music Sampler" to benefit funding of a new facility for the Iowa City Crisis Intervention Center.

Perennial Iowa City folksinger J. Knight served as master of ceremonies and interval act, introducing the artists and providing suitable lightweight sing-along numbers and country fiddle standards to help establish a festive atmosphere in the sun-soaked and balloon-bedecked fairground bleachers.

First, musician Tom Nothnagle assumed the sitting position on center stage and calmly and casually reproduced his recent record album, a collection of reflective, folk-tinged classical guitar instrumentals.

Nathan Bell and Susan Shore were up next and cheerfully delivered their brand of modern country and western tales of adultery and despair.

AS THE BEST-known performer at "A Prairie Music Sampler," Greg Brown fulfilled his role as the well-traveled, well-seasoned entertainer with his humorous anecdotal songs and monologs. Reminiscent of John Prine or a less-twisted Jonathan Richman, Brown sings simple odes to the commonplace and ordinary — a common enough conceit among his generation of coffeehouse balladeers.

His broad and rough-cut appearance and baritone voice belie his gentle, almost sentimental observations of middle American life that are always saved by a cutting humor and unexpected cynicism.

In the context of a summer festival, all the acts were enjoyable, but Brown alone managed to identify himself as an individual artist.

J. Knight strums his guitar Sunday at the Johnson County Fairgrounds during a concert benefitting the Iowa City Crisis Center. The concert, called "A Prairie Music Sampler," featured several bands and drew more 100 people to hear folk and country and western music.

Love is not enough

"August is our worst month," says Bev Horton of the Iowa City Animal Shelter, referring to the drastic increase in the number of pets abandoned by their owners at this time of year. In 13 years of service at the shelter, Horton has never seen the number of abandoned animals go below 1,000 per year. Some of the blame for that horrifying total must lie with the students who comprise such a large segment of Iowa City's population.

Coming often from homes in which there were well-loved family pets, many students try to duplicate that bond. They sneak animals into residence halls, into married student housing or into off-campus apartments. Students often fail to check leases or talk with landlords about pet ownership and, despite Associated Residence Hall's best efforts at spreading the word, some students each year are surprised to learn that the puppy they just bought can't be kept in their dorm rooms.

The fact that such oversights seem harmless is a sad measure of the indifferent cruelty humans can sink to. Given the unstable, transitory nature of student life at college, almost any attempt at providing a lifetime home for an animal is doomed to failure.

And the failure extends beyond college: any student who can't say with absolute certainty what their living conditions will be like after graduation can't make the necessary commitment. It's that simple.

"We want students to do some real soul-searching," says Horton. But not enough souls are being searched. More than 1,000 animals are brought to the shelter each year, many left in dorm rooms during breaks or at year's end. Only one in 10 finds a home. Most of the rest are killed.

Students at college are on the edge of adulthood; they're expected to start taking some responsibility for their actions. But the problem of animal abandonment is far more important than the weekend drinking spree or a dent in the car. These animals are innocents, and they pay for student shortsightedness with their lives.

Before obtaining a pet, students should call the shelter at 356-5295. The staff is trained and willing to answer questions and give advice. Patience and planning like this could prevent needless suffering.

Ban on Bork

Throughout his administration, President Ronald Reagan has shown, in his appointments and nominations, an uncanny ability to find mediocrity in the guise of excellence. His nomination of Robert Bork to the Supreme Court continues the trend.

It is easy to see why Bork is Reagan's man. He lends legitimacy to the official constitutional canard of the White House "original intent." He has long been active in arch-conservative circles, has been a radical advocate of presidential autocracy and on the Federal Appeals bench he has consistently defended business interests against regulatory agencies and aggrieved individuals. Bork has the kind of memory that is fashionable within the current administration, and like many Reaganites he easily shoulders the sort of logical contradiction which would make most of us feel like hypocrites.

The nomination may reflect presidential nostalgia for the days when Bork, as former President Richard Nixon's solicitor general, fired the special prosecutor who had the audacity to subpoena the White House tapes, since so many of Reagan's appointees have run afoul of special prosecutors. Bork has claimed that he was (Saturday Night Massacre notwithstanding) a vigorous proponent of the Watergate investigations, though none of those directly involved remembers it quite the same way.

Like the president, Bork has been known — when circumstances require — to admit a "mistake." While seeking confirmation as solicitor general, he said that when he had vigorously opposed Civil Rights Act he had erred. He had, prior to the act's passage, written articles condemning it and had briefed 1964 presidential candidate Barry Goldwater on its legal weaknesses. (He no longer remembers this briefing, however.)

Bork had objected to the Civil Rights Act — though he "personally disapproved" of racial discrimination — on the grounds that the majority ought not enforce its morality on the bigot. Nowadays however, he argues that the majority is richly entitled to enforce "morality" on a minority, in matters like abortion and homosexuality. No right to privacy is protected here because the framers of the Constitution did not speak specifically of such a right.

This principle does not always apply apparently, for Bork has argued that only "political speech" — not scientific or artistic expression — is protected by law, because that's what the framers "originally intended," even if they did not say as much.

Robert Bork's candidacy should not be rejected because of his conservative agenda, but because he has no agenda, merely a capricious reactionary tendency. "Bob is a man of total principle," one of Bork's Yale colleagues recently said, "but . . . sometimes he fools himself and sometimes the principle comes to serve his goals."

The same could be said of numerous Reagan appointees. But Bork, if confirmed, will have the job for life.

Welcome to Iowa City, Part II

J.L.
McClure

UI sports are to Iowans what heroin is to drug addicts — an initially pleasurable, mind-numbing indulgence that slowly but inevitably turns the brain to a puddle of cerebral gelatinous goo.

The streets are awash with brain-dead "Hawkeye fans," filling themselves with pizza, donning their uniforms of gold and black sweaters and generally turning the city into a surrealistic version of Alice in Wonderland as performed by a colony of bees.

HAYDEN FRY. Much like corn and swine, UI football Coach Hayden Fry has become an Iowa institution. Zeus is the pantheon of UI athletics, whatever Hayden wants, Hayden gets. The only problem is that Fry, who came to Iowa from the planet Norton, is not particularly fluent in English and thus some of his demands are embarrassingly misinterpreted.

For example, a few years ago, he was heard to mumble something about not being able to win a post-season bowl game until an "indoor practice facility" was built. So the UI administration, snapping to attention, built him an indoor practice facility. Only later was it learned that he demanded not an indoor practice facility, but rather "income tax immunity."

Magnanimous if he is nothing, Fry has gone ahead and used the indoor practice facility anyway, though it hasn't helped him win a bowl game. Nor the Kickoff Classic. Maybe this year he'll succeed in gaining his income tax immunity and lead the Hawks to victory in the Spiked Punch Bowl, or whatever the runner-up is this year to the Rose and Cotton Bowls.

UI WRESTLING. Especially if you've just moved here from out of state, you probably never even knew wrestling was a sport, merely a TV show that comes on late Saturday night and requires massive quantities of beer and a single-digit IQ to appreciate.

Not so here in Iowa City — at least it isn't a TV show on Saturday night, though it does require massive quantities of beer and a single-digit IQ to appreciate.

But the UI wrestling team, under UI wrestling Coach Dan Gable's able direction, has proved to be not only incredibly successful on the mat, but they provide a local public service as well. In the off-season, Dan regularly escorts his boys to the downtown bars where they will massive quantities of beer and present exhibition matches, sans admission fees or rules. Last year's best match pitted Dan's boys against members of the UI basketball team. But most often, they take on just anybody who happens to be walking by.

WRITERS' WORKSHOP. The crown jewel of UI Liberal Arts is the renowned Writers' Workshop. Each year a select number of participants are admitted to the program from thousands of applicants. These chosen few descend upon Iowa City in order to dress significantly, talk with southern accents, write poems such as:

my mother watches me
death about noon
America (america?)
pop pop pop
and be conferred Master's of Fine Arts degrees. Sound like getting a graduate degree for recreational drug use? Well, that's pretty much what it amounts to. Which is why so many people apply each year for admission.

And I guess that's also why, in a more general sense, most of us gravitate to Iowa City, where goofy is as goofy does and black ties and straightjackets are optional.

Welcome.
J.L. McClure's column appears on the Viewpoints page every Monday.

Letters

School starts
To the Editor:

The opening ceremonies conducted on Wednesday made me wonder if this university is really committed to learning and academics. I was one of several hundred students who had a class in Macbride Auditorium at 9:30 a.m. When I showed up, a marching band was playing, and that was followed by several boring speeches. I then found out that this fanfare, which had caused my class to be cancelled, was part of a traditional academic ceremony students appreciated.

I, for one, did not appreciate my class being cancelled. Is UI Interim President Richard Remington and the UI administration more interested in academics or in pompous, ego-stroking ceremonies? I really wonder

Wrong choice
To the Editor:

The recent vote to award Holiday Wrecker the city's towing contract is yet another inconsistent move on the City Council's part. It is inconsistent for several reasons. Not only is this move ludicrous, but it undermines the effectiveness and dignity of the council. The council has established new precedents in voting to "award" the contract to Holiday.

First, the council is saying that it is permissible for a company to violate an earlier contract and be rewarded for it. Holiday violated an earlier contract by operating a used parts business. Is this how the members of our council do their own business? Should we reward violations? I thought the towing contract was for towing violators, but the council believes it is for violating towers.

Second, the council demonstrated its support for local business. The city-owned company was shunned for an out-of-town business. The council's regard for the citizens was also illustrated in the fact that the towed vehicles are housed in an out-of-town location not accessible by bus.

Letters policy

Letters to the Editor must be typed and must be signed. Unsigned and untaped letters will not be considered for publication. Letters should include the writer's telephone number, which will not be published, and address, which will be withheld upon request. Letters should be brief and The Daily Iowan reserves the right to edit for length and clarity.

Third, the council has evidenced its lack of fiscal responsibility. The local service provided a lower bid and the council voted for the higher priced service. This happens at a time when the council is asking the taxpayers to raise sales taxes . . .

The question we should ask ourselves in light of these events is do we need a new sales tax or a new city council? My vote is for the latter.

Note's notice

The Aug. 27 issue of The Daily Iowan carried an advertisement for Lyn-Mar lecture notes. Among the courses listed in the advertisement was 32:1, Judeo-Christian Tradition. The instructors in this course have repeatedly refused their permission for Lyn-Mar to do this, and regard Lyn-Mar's continued intrusion as highly unethical, if not illegal. Students should be aware the Lyn-Mar's advertisement does not mean that they have permission from those in charge of a listed course to offer this service.

Furthermore, since no teacher assistant or anyone officially connected with the course is taking these notes there is no assurance of their quality. Students are best advised to save their money, take their own lecture notes and consult with their T.A. if they are having problems.

Bomb ruled out as cause of fire in AIDS carriers' house

ARCADIA, Fla. (UPI) — Authorities completed an on-the-scene investigation of the house fire that drove the family of three young AIDS carriers out of town and said Sunday there is no evidence a firebomb caused the suspicious blaze.

The cause of the fire still has not been determined, DeSoto County Sheriff's Major Vernon Keen said.

"It does appear it started inside the house. It does not appear that anything was thrown through the window," Keen said.

The Friday night fire gutted the home of Clifford and Louise Ray and their four children. The Rays, who were staying with relatives at an undisclosed location at the time, said they suspected a firebomb caused the fire.

Clifford Ray's brother, Andrew, was the only one in the house when the fire broke out, and was treated for smoke inhalation.

The family received death threats after a federal judge ordered that their three sons be allowed to return to school last week. The boys, Richard, 10, Robert, 9, and Randy, 8, are hemophiliacs who apparently were exposed to the AIDS virus through transfusions of blood-clotting components.

THE BOYS have not developed any symptoms of the disease and their parents and 6-year-old sister test negative for the virus.

Keen said deputies found no flammable liquids or evidence of a firebomb. Firefighters believe the blaze started in a utility room near the kitchen.

The state Fire Marshal's office is probing the blaze but investigators with that office said they cannot comment until their report is issued Wednesday.

Deputies, completing their on-site investigation, removed the crime scene barriers, and turned the property back over to the Rays late Saturday. A relative retrieved a few belongings from the charred white ranch house, then left.

"HE GOT what they wanted out of the house and we stood by while they did that, then we left," Keen said. "They didn't request any further security."

Keen said deputies were still questioning neighbors, several of whom called an emergency number to report the fire.

"We've interviewed all the neighbors preliminarily. So far, we've found nothing," he said.

"As far as threats, only one was reported to our office and that was 10 days, two weeks ago. Mrs. Ray said she got a phone call, something to the effect that 'Your children are going to die,' and that was it. They didn't say whether they meant they were going to hurt them or if they meant they would die of the disease," Keen said.

Keen said there apparently were other threats that were not reported to the sheriff's office.

On Saturday, the tearful parents said they would leave Arcadia and never return.

"Arcadia is no longer our home," Clifford Ray said. "To be safe, we have to go someplace else."

HARTFORD, Conn. — A New Haven-based charity is appealing to shipping companies and truckers to help it move 50 tons of seed corn from Iowa to help feed the hungry in Appalachia and the Caribbean.

The corn was purchased by the Rev. Larry Jones, president and founder of the Feed the Children of Oklahoma City, and now Hunger and Relief Development of New Haven is looking for a way to ship it.

The corn, stored in Coon Rapids, Iowa, is slated for shipment to Jamaica and to the Westport, Conn.-based Save the Children Foundation for distribution in Appalachia.

"Shipping is the key. There may be some shipping company that says, 'We go across country with empty trucks, how can we help you,'" said Rep. Vito Mazza, D-West Haven, president of the New Haven group.

MAZZA SAID THE 50 tons of corn is the first shipment his group is trying to move in an effort with Jones, who is trying to buy as much surplus grain, seed corn and pinto beans as he can.

Mazza's group recently won support for its efforts when the National Conference of State Legislatures approved a resolution urging lawmakers to help secure surplus grain to feed the hungry.

"We asked state legislators nationwide to recognize hunger exists and that no one wants a child to go hungry," Mazza said. "Now it's official and in writing."

"The need is critical. We're seeing a greater need to help starving people both domestically and internationally," he said.

The planned shipment to Jamaica will mark the latest by Mazza's group, which arranged the shipment of 50 tons of medical and other supplies to Haiti earlier this year. It was the largest shipment ever to the country.

MAZZA SAID HE also is looking into the possibility of having the corn shipped on military flights. Federal law allows such shipments when space is available on the flights, he said.

Hunger Relief and Development was founded about eight years ago. The voluntary group primarily works to assist the poor in Haiti but also finances a project in Somalia through Save the Children, Mazza said.

"The important thing about our organization — and I sometimes wonder how we do it — as totally volunteer, it's sometimes difficult to get people together and coordinated," Mazza said.

MAHARISHI AYURVEDA ON PHIL DONAHUE SHOW

The World's Oldest and Most Complete Scientific System for the Prevention and Cure of Disease and Promotion of Longevity

Maharishi Ayurveda, the world's oldest and most complete scientific system for the prevention and cure of disease and promotion of longevity, will be the special topic of the Phil Donahue Show (see details at right).

Several of the Maharishi Ayurveda techniques that scientific research has shown effective in preventing disease and reversing the aging process will be demonstrated.

Dr. Deepak Chopra, author of the much-acclaimed Creating Health: Beyond Prevention, Toward water hose — designed to cool the casing after the firing — triggered a series of events leading to a postponement. During the Sunday firing, the cooling system failed again. Engineers inspecting the spent rocket said that the paint on its lower segment was blistered, indicating that the molten slag residue left after the engine shut down had burned the insulation inside the segment, making it doubtful that the segment could be reused.

"WITH THE DATA we have now, it sure looks good to me," said Richard Truly, NASA's associate administrator for space flight. "I can assure you it is a major step along the way to returning the shuttle to flight."

Acknowledging that NASA faces a foreboding task in meeting the scheduled Discovery launch in June, Truly said Sunday that the testing of the huge solid boosters in the Utah desert will continue to be the major event that determines the outcome.

If the new seal design tested Sunday stands up under the scrutiny it will get in the next month, NASA and Morton Thiokol plan a test firing in November of a booster identical to those to be used in flight.

BUT NOT UNTIL September 1988 does the test plan call for a firing of a booster under cold conditions. Abnormally cold temperatures in Florida were found to be a contributing factor to the solid booster failure that destroyed the Challenger 72 seconds after liftoff 19 months ago.

ally halted attacks on shipping in the gulf.

In the intervening weeks, Iraq had become increasingly frustrated as Iran boosted its petroleum exports to more than 2 million barrels a day unimpeded by Iraqi air raids.

Saturday, Iraqi warplanes bombed a number of smaller Iranian offshore oil facilities, with President Saddam Hussein vowing to "destroy all the economic arteries which finance their military aggression."

Sunday, Iraqi aircraft attacked Iran's Kharg Island oil terminal, the primary loading point for Iranian crude oil being shipped abroad.

SHIPPING SOURCES said tugboat crews operating in the vicinity spotted columns of smoke rising from the eastern jetty at Kharg Island, but the extent of the damage was not clear.

A war communique issued in Baghdad said that Iraqi warplanes had also hit a "large maritime target," which is usually Iraqi shorthand for claiming to have hit a tanker.

Iraq also accused Iran of artillery shelling against Basra, Iraq's second largest city. Iranian forces last year battled to within 10 miles of the port city.

Meanwhile, the master of a ship reported hit at Iran's Sirri Island

Saturday, the Iranian-owned Alvand, telephoned the British Broadcasting Corp. in London to report that his ship was undamaged.

While Iran has threatened to retaliate with a "crushing response" to Iraq's latest attacks, there have been indications that it may refrain from overt attacks while diplomatic moves are under way to settle the war.

Some nations have called for mandatory sanctions or an arms embargo against Iran if the fighting resumes. According to Western diplomats, Iran may feel that it stands to gain more by appearing to be the injured party.

end to keep the union intact and in place, preserving its solidarity and focusing on next year," another union official commented. "If everyone were fired and sent home, we might have needed three years to build up our strength again. . . . We will be back next year, stronger and asking for more."

Calling the settlement "a tactical move sideways," Ramaphosa said, "This was a dress rehearsal for further action — 1988 has already been set by our members as the year when the National Union of Mineworkers is going to move to win more significant gains. . . . The Chamber of Mines will have to change — if not, they will go through exactly the same experience, but worse."

THE UNION CLAIMED that, at the strike's peak, more than 340,000 of South Africa's 600,000 black miners were out at 44 gold and coal mines. The South African Chamber of Mines, which groups the six major mining companies, has maintained, however, that no more than 240,000 miners participated, but acknowledged that they had effectively shut down about a third of the country's 100-plus gold and coal mines.

Nine miners were killed in the course of the strike. Most of them died in clashes with mine security guards, but three apparently were killed by fellow workers angered by their refusal to join the strike. More than 500 were injured in clashes with police and security guards, and about 400 were arrested, including 78 on charges of attempting to kill strike-breakers and endangering state security.

U.S. West

Officials from Council Bluffs, Waterloo and a Des Moines/Ames delegation also gave presentations to the U.S. West executives.

Gov. Terry Branstad gave a speech on behalf of the state.

The Iowa City/Cedar Rapids effort included telelink hookups with Rep. Tom Tauke, R-Dubuque, and UI Professor Emeritus of Physics and Astronomy James Van Allen.

U.S. West is searching 14 states to find a location for a research and development hub, company Public Relations Consultant Dave Mack said. Mack said the company should reach a decision by mid-September.

IF THE COMPANY chooses to locate in the area, as many as 1,500 jobs will be created, Iowa City Area Development Group President Ray Muston said.

"It's going to be a sizable facility," he said.

Ambrisco said having the facility in or around Iowa City would be great for the area.

"It would be just fabulous for us for economic development," Ambrisco said, adding declining UI enrollment has contributed to a stagnant local economy. "Whenever you have something like this that happens in your area, you'll have all of these serendipitous things springing up."

Iowa City's community environment, its "downtown ambience" and the UI should all help attract U.S. West to the area, Ambrisco said.

The company, according to Mack, is looking for a progressive community with strong schools; a commitment to research and development; physical attractiveness; and opportunities in recreation, the arts and other cultural activities.

Third Reich field goal nips Hawks

By Melissa Rapoport
Special to The Daily Iowan

Tennessee kicker Phil Reich severed Iowa's hopes of winning college football's Kickoff Classic, delivering the game-winning field goal in the final three seconds Sunday at the Meadowlands in East Rutherford, N.J., giving the Volunteers a 23-22 victory.

"We don't have anyone to blame but ourselves," Iowa Coach Hayden Fry said. "Tennessee deserved to win as far as I'm concerned. They capitalized on big mistakes we made, but we played extremely well for the first game."

Tennessee Coach Johnny Majors

didn't believe the win was quite as decisive. "This was one of the most outstanding comebacks," Majors said. "We had a very sporadic start to say the least. Iowa did a good job keeping us off balance. We're very fortunate to win."

WITH LESS THAN nine minutes to play, the Hawkeyes jumped ahead, 22-17, with a 42-yard field goal by senior kicker Rob Houghtlin. Tennessee retaliated, however, marching 69 yards in 10 plays to match the Hawkeyes' three points, closing the gap, 22-20. Iowa regained control of the ball but could not muster a first down. Junior quarterback Tom Poholsky, the third Iowa quarterback to play in the game, pitched the ball to senior Rick Bayless for a two-yard gain to the Iowa 32-yard line. In the next two downs Poholsky threw incomplete passes to tight end Craig Clark and running back Quinn Early.

Punter Mark Adams ended the series with a 46-yard kick, which was returned nine yards by Tennessee's Terence Cleveland to the Volunteers' 29-yard line with 4:37 to play.

TENNESSEE CAPITALIZED on Iowa's inability to run more time off the clock, moving the ball 69 yards in four minutes, 32 seconds. At third down and goal, with three seconds on the clock, Reich kicked the winning field goal.

"I was just thinking about doing my job like I do in practice," Reich said. "The closer you are, the harder the angles are, but I just set it up and hit it down the middle."

Although the Hawkeyes' defense broke down at the end of the game, Fry believes problems plagued the running game.

"The biggest disappointment was

SportsView

It's usually quite interesting watching a football game at a bar.

There are people all around crossing fingers and toes for the same purpose — to see the Hawkeyes win a game. Sunday, however, the Orange Blossom Special from Tennessee edged what seemed to be an error-prone Iowa team on a last-minute field goal, 23-22. Somehow that put a damper on it all.

I figured that watching the game at the Sports Column and later writing a sports column about the environment would be interesting. For example, how would people react to a first down, an interception or a touchdown?

OVERALL, EVERYTHING was pretty much how I expected it to be, especially the realistically loud reactions to Iowa's favorable plays and the realistic "aws" heard when the Hawkeyes had problems. First, there was one table, also known as the best seat in the house, in which the patrons rarely watch the game but rather discussed how difficult their classes were going to be or what happened last week on their favorite soap opera.

Second, people who had placed wagers kept cheering for what will make them richer, even if it goes against the flow of what every Iowa fan present is expecting to watch.

Third, there are always people second-guessing the play-calling. Somehow they must believe Hayden Fry and his coaching staff don't know what's going on.

Second-guessing is the pastime of the foolish. There are so many things to second guess the football team on. Mistakes were made; Iowa will likely learn from them and move on to bigger and better things.

THERE WERE A couple of surprises during the game, however.

Spikers sweep Blue Demons, gain first win

By Marc Bona
The Daily Iowan

The Iowa volleyball team swept the DePaul Blue Demons, 15-12, 15-9, 15-4, at Oak Park-River Forest High School (Ill.) Friday.

But the Blue Demons, who finished 10-23 last year, were tougher than the Hawkeyes expected.

"They were playing real well," Iowa Coach Sandy Stewart said. "They gave us kind of a scare. It was good to get some of the butterflies out. We were a little shaky at times — the ball was set and no one was there — but it was neat to look down at the end of the bench and see everybody. It was so difficult for me to choose at times."

Iowa's Ellen Mullarkey, who won the 1986 Most Valuable Player award, began the 1987 season where she left off last season. Mullarkey had 14 kills in 30 attempts to tally a .333 hitting percentage. She added one serving ace and six digs.

"SHE HAD A really good night," Stewart said. "We had a really good night all the way around."

Iowa sophomore Kari Hamel provided the second-best offensive output for the Hawkeyes, contributing eight kills in 19 attempts for a .210 efficiency rating. She added five digs.

"You have to start somewhere," Hamel, from Dubuque, said. "So you might as well start with DePaul. They weren't the toughest. It's nice to start out this way; it will be easier to play better when you have better competition."

Like her coach, Hamel spoke highly of freshmen who, until Friday night, had been untested in collegiate competition. "They're good, and they'll only get better,"

she said. Stewart felt pleased about the win, as she played her entire roster.

"WE DID PLAY everybody," she said. "We had three different lineups. We've got so many options with this team. We need to experiment with the team, and I thought our chemistry came together. Everybody did a good job."

And everybody, according to Stewart, includes first-year players. She started three freshmen — Janet Moylan, Jenny Rees and Barb Willis.

"Janet did a good job running the offense, for the most part. I think she's starting to feel more comfortable. It comes more with experience," Stewart said.

No 'foggie' weather ahead for Gophers' running game

MINNEAPOLIS (UPI) — The Minnesota Gophers, looking to improve on last year's 6-6 record, should have a formidable running game again this year, with all three backfield starters returning.

Minnesota led the Big Ten in rushing in 1986 with 2,523 yards. Nearly half the yardage came from Darrell Thompson, who churned out a school single-season record of 1,240 yards as a freshman. Thompson, 6-foot-2, 206 pounds, also led the Big Ten with 888 yards as the Gophers finished third with a 5-3 league mark.

Second-year Minnesota coach John Gutekunst says Thompson still has something to prove.

"He's the type of kid who feels the way I do," Gutekunst said. "Do it once, it could be luck. Twice and you're real."

Senior quarterback Rickey Foggie is back for his fourth season engineering the Gophers' option offense. Foggie had 349 yards running last season. He also completed 87-191 passes for 1,265 yards. He scored 15 touchdowns, seven running and eight passing.

This is the sixth of a nine-part series previewing the Big Ten. Today: Minnesota

WHILE FOGGIE DIDN'T miss a game last season, he sat out the last two spring practice periods with stress fractures in his legs. But heading into the 1987 season, Foggie is considered to be in his best shape in two years.

The third member of the backfield will be Roselle Richardson, a 6-2, 238-pound junior fullback who had 273 yards last season.

"What we're looking for now from him is consistency — to be an every-down type of player," Gutekunst said. "We weren't disappointed at all in him last season, don't get me wrong. Considering the shift and everything, he did fine. But now we want him to be competitive play after play."

The Gophers have lost nine defensive starters and three offensive linemen from last season. But Gutekunst indicates he isn't worried about that.

"We've got a bunch of hard-working, willing kids," he said. "Heck, this will be fun. We're replacing starters with familiar faces. They know us, we know them. We'll see how many now want to step forward."

GUTEKUNST ALSO has 13 redshirts who sat out last season with which to work, including flanker Pat Tingelhoff, defensive tackle Mike Sunvold, offensive tackle Mark Drabczak and offensive tackle John Selvestra.

Gutekunst will be looking to bolster his defensive backfield, which was on the slow side and unreliable last year. Looking for faster players, he has moved junior Warren Berry into the No. 1 free safety spot. At strong safety, Eddie Miles is being challenged by Doug Evans.

Schillig set for 'unique' year as Iowa's interim net coach

By Tom Dickerson
The Daily Iowan

Who says you need an official head coach to have a successful season.

That's what the Iowa women's tennis team will try to accomplish under the direction of interim Coach Micki Schillig.

Schillig took control of the team last spring when Coach Charley Darley was forced to take a medical leave of absence. Darley has elected to stay with the team as an assistant coach.

"My main interest is on-court work with the athletes," Darley, who had been head coach since 1984, said. As an assistant coach, Darley feels he'll have more time to actually work with the players.

"I THINK THE situation we have is unique," Darley said. "This set-up will let us do more. Instead of just putting the best athlete on the court and letting them play, we can concentrate more on developing each of the player's game."

According to Schillig, she will remain as interim coach for the season because the job hasn't been offered nationally. That will happen in February, and the position will be filled in the spring, with Schillig's name at the top of the list.

Women's Tennis

"I think she has the makings of an excellent college coach," said Darley. "She showed me a lot last year."

Schillig has a strong nucleus of players returning from last year's squad which produced a record of 15-6 overall, 5-4 in the Big Ten, and placed fifth in the Big Ten Championships, which was somewhat of a disappointment considering the Hawkeyes were hoping to improve on a fifth-place finish from the year before.

SECOND TEAM ALL-BIG Ten performer Pennie Wohlford will probably take over the No. 1 spot vacated by four-time letterwinner Michele Conlon, who will stay on as an assistant coach along with Darley and second-year assistant Kelly Morrison.

Wohlford, a junior from River Forest, Ill., set a school record for wins last year, posting a 26-12 mark prior to the championships, eclipsing Conlon's mark of 25.

Besides Wohlford, who played No.

2 behind Conlon most of last season, Iowa has the No. 3, 4, and 5 players back. Sophomore Liz Canzonieri, Stone Mountain, Ga., junior Madeleine Willard, Grosse Pointe, Mich., and senior Pat Leary, St. Louis, all return giving the Hawkeyes a good chance of closing in on the Big Ten's elite, Indiana and Northwestern.

"IT'S BEEN A building program; we're just breaking through," said Schillig. "We're a step away from Indiana and Northwestern, but I know we'll be there soon."

That's pretty good considering the Hawkeyes finished last in the Big Ten just three seasons ago. Recruiting has been one of the keys to the team's turnaround.

This year, Schillig and Darley split the recruiting duties and came up with Catherine Wilson (Abilene, Texas) and Tracey Peyton (River Forest, Ill.).

"I haven't seen them play, but I've heard really good things about them," Schillig said. She added Colleen Nichols, a sophomore from Elmhurst, Ill., and Susan Evans, a sophomore, Libertyville, Ill., have good shots at seeing extensive playing time.

Sportsbriefs

Davis finishes 2nd in world meet

Former Iowa wrestler Barry Davis, who is now an assistant coach for the Hawkeyes, finished second Friday in the finals of the World Freestyle Wrestling Championships at Clermont-Ferrand, France.

Sergei Beloglasov of the Soviet Union won the gold by pinning Davis in one minute, 25 seconds. Davis, who won a silver medal at the 1984 Olympics in Los Angeles, has never beaten Beloglasov.

Meeting set for intramural managers

Organizations interested in competing in the all-point championship (co-ed, women's and men's) need their intramural manager to attend an information meeting in Room E220 of the Field House Wednesday, Sept. 2.

Members from West side dormitories (Hillcrest, Rienow, Slater, South Quad and Quad) meet at 4:45 p.m. Fraternities and Sororities convene at 5:30 p.m., while East side dorms (Burge, Currier, Stanley, Daum and Mayflower) meet at 6:15 p.m.

Representatives from professional societies and independents will meet at 7 p.m. in the staff lounge of the Field House.

Attendance by intramural managers is worth 25 points in the all-university point system.

For more information contact recreational services at 335-9293 or stop by Room E216 Field House.

Richardson signs contract with Bears

CHICAGO (UPI) — Holdout cornerback Mike Richardson has agreed to terms on a one-year contract with the Chicago Bears and was back in training camp Sunday, the team announced.

Richardson and his agent Ethan Lock met with Bears' finance director Ted Phillips on Saturday, and an agreement was reached at 6 p.m.

Financial terms of the contract were not disclosed, but Richardson reportedly will earn somewhere between $300,000 and $340,000 this season.

Richardson, a holdout since the start of training camp, led the team in interceptions last season with seven.

The signing of Richardson came the same day the Bears announced that coach Mike Ditka had agreed to terms on a new three-year deal.

Noonan ends contract dispute with Dallas

IRVING, Texas (UPI) — Defensive lineman Danny Noonan, the Dallas Cowboys' No. 1 draft choice, ended a six-week holdout Sunday and signed a series of one-year contracts, the team said.

Noonan, a defensive tackle from Nebraska, had been expected to make a bid for a starting job during the Cowboys' training camp at Thousand Oaks, Calif., but became involved in a bitter contract dispute. Salary terms were undisclosed.

The Cowboys made a new offer late last week, and an agreement was reached a few hours before Dallas faced the Los Angeles Raiders in an exhibition game Sunday night.

After coming to terms, Noonan returned home to Kansas City, Mo., and was scheduled to return to Dallas Monday for a physical examination. He will officially join the team Tuesday.

Noonan was the 12th player chosen in this year's draft and is expected to eventually replace 14-year veteran John Dutton, another Nebraska product, at left tackle.

Navratilova gets back on winning track

BRYN MAWR, Pa. (UPI) — Top-seeded Martina Navratilova defeated second seed Helen Kelesi of Toronto, 6-4, 6-0 Sunday to capture the KISS 100 Tennis Invitational at Bryn Mawr College.

Navratilova, of Fort Worth, Texas, needed just 65 minutes for the victory. Kelesi played well early, but Navratilova won a controversial line call during the eighth game and bounced back to win the first set.

Raiders top Dallas 34-10 as Cowboys amass errors

By Mike Rabun
United Press International

IRVING, Texas — Vance Mueller broke open the game with a 40-yard touchdown run and the Los Angeles Raiders intercepted five passes Sunday night to post a 34-10 exhibition victory over the Dallas Cowboys.

The Raiders returned a fumble and a punt for scores against the mistake-prone Cowboys, who were penalized 88 yards in the first two quarters.

Both teams are 1-2 with one preseason game remaining. The Cowboys have scored only two touchdowns in their three outings.

Mueller, a second-year running back listed as third string, plowed into the line on third-and-1 early in the fourth quarter and was knocked back by the Dallas defense. But Mueller remained on his feet, darted through a hole and ran 40 yards for the score that made it 20-3.

LIONEL WASHINGTON added a touchdown by returning a fumbled punt 11 yards and, with five minutes left in the game, Stefan Adams ran 75 yards on a punt return for another score.

Marcus Allen had scored the Raiders' first touchdown on the opening play of the second quarter, barging over from the 1-yard line four plays after Los Angeles linebacker Jerry Robinson intercepted a pass at the Dallas 11. Chris Bahr added third-quarter field goals of 46 and 25 yards.

Dallas' lone points came on a second-period field goal of 28 yards by David Trout and a 6-yard touchdown run by Gerald White with 1:20 left in the game.

Robinson, Vann McElroy and Lester Hayes intercepted Dallas quarterback Danny White in the first half. The Raiders added two more against backup Steve Pelluer in the second half.

Rusty Hilger started at quarterback for the

NFLPA may consider strike

By Will Dunham
United Press International

WASHINGTON — The contract between NFL players and management expires today, and the union will meet privately to likely consider a strike deadline.

Negotiations for a new three-year pact have not been held since Aug. 14 and the league's chief negotiator has accused the NFL Players Association of "posturing and rhetoric."

The approximately 1,600 NFL players will be without a contract at midnight today when the five-year collective bargaining agreement ends. That contract was reached after a 57-day strike wiped out seven weeks of the 1982 season. It was the first players' strike to interrupt the regular season and it cost management a reported $200 million.

Dick Berthelsen, the NFLPA's general counsel, said the nine-member executive committee, led by union president Marvin Powell of the Tampa Bay Buccaneers, is planning to consider a deadline for a walkout.

"WE'LL BE TALKING ABOUT

NFL Labor Talks

Key issues remain unresolved in talks between the NFL Management Council, the league's negotiating arm, and the NFL Players Association, the union representing approximately 1,600 players. The contract expires Aug. 31.

The new three-year collective bargaining agreement would run for the duration of the new $1.42 billion league television contract.

Free agency — This is players' flagship issue. The players want unrestricted free agency for players whose contracts have expired with a club in a system that excludes a team's right of first refusal and compensation. Fearing collusion among owners to gut free agency, the union is also proposing a financial incentive package that would reward the top teams. For example, a $3.5 million bonus for the Super Bowl champ, $2.5 million for Super Bowl loser, $2.25 for conference winners, $2 million for division winners and $1.7 million for wild card teams.

Guaranteed contracts — The union says only 4 percent of current NFL contracts are guaranteed, comparing unfavorably to the 95 percent in the NBA and 50 percent in major-league baseball. The players want the percentage of guaranteed contracts reflective of the other leagues.

Pension plan — The players point to a superior pension program in baseball in asking that owners greatly increase their contributions to the NFL players pension fund. The owners of baseball's 26 teams contributed $33 million last year to its players pension, next to $12.5 by the owners of the 28 NFL teams.

Protection for player representatives — The union claims some NFL teams harass and cut player representatives because of their union activity, which the league disputes.

Others — Streamlined grievance arbitration system, removal of artificial turf and expanding roster size.

Owners' Demands
Drug testing — This is management's hardest stand. Owners want mandatory random urinalysis of all players during preseason, regular season and postseason in an effort to rid the league of street drugs and anabolic steroids, which promote muscle-bulk. Testing complemented by league-wide anti-drug education plan.

Wage scale — In an effort to hold down spiraling rookie salaries, the owners devised an entry level wage scale that places a cap on salaries for rookies based on their draft round and the length of the contract and limits signing bonuses and incentives.

Holdouts — Seeking to reduce the ballooning number of contract holdouts, management proposes a deadline after which an unsigned player cannot play or be signed by any club to pressure both sides to bargain realistically. In addition, players under contract who fail to report to preseason training may be placed on reserve.

Fines — Because fines have not increased since 1977, owners want across-the-board increases in all club disciplinary fines against players. In addition, owners want to add fines for failure to follow a rehabilitation program and scaling tickets.

Others — Allow teams to hold unlimited number of off-season training camps, add provisions for exhibition games overseas, extend college draft to 15 rounds.

the National Labor Relations Board and the league's 28 teams on July 15, meaning the earliest strike date would be Sept. 15, after the first weekend of the regular season.

The three-year contract sought by both sides would parallel the length of the league's $1.42 billion television contract.

Berthelsen downplayed the significance of the contract expiration.

"It certainly calls your attention to the need to get down to business," he said. "I think that it makes sense for both sides to make a real effort to make a deal before any more serious measures would be considered and if Aug. 31 helps do that, that's fine. But as a practical matter, the expiration of the contract in and of itself doesn't have that much of an effect."

Jack Donlan, the executive director of the NFL Management Council, the league's bargaining arm, is demanding that union executive director Gene Upshaw return to the bargaining table and back off at least some of the NFLPA's demands.

the status of negotiations and I'm sure the subject of a strike deadline will come up. I can't say that there'll be an actual decision on that, but I'm sure it will be considered," Berthelsen said.

The union gave its mandatory 60 days notice of a possible strike to
