WASHINGTON (AP) - The majority of Americans can't find Great Britain, France, Japan or the Persian Gulf on the map and have no idea of what the U.S. population is, according to surveys conducted by the Gallup Organization and the National Geographic Moreover, Americans in the 18 to 24 age group ranked last when their survey results were compared to similar tests conducted in eight other nations, said the society, which sponsored the international testing. Americans of all age groups scored sixth.

"I have a terrible feeling that the American public is not taking education as seriously as they have in the past — and it's not just geography. You are seeing this across the board," said society President Gilbert Grosvenor at a news conference Wednesday.

"What was most alarming was not only that young Americans did worse than all other 18- to Super Bowl in which the San 24-year-olds, but that they were the only ones in that age group, among nine countries, who did worse than the oldest group tested," Grosvenor said.

To combat this, the society has launched a multimillion-dollar public awareness campaign on the problem, he said.

Bunnies judged by set of pearly whites

By Cathy Jackson The Daily Iowan

Marvin Kroening grabs a rabbit by the scruff of its neck and looks into its eyes. He's checking for signs of stress. He opens its mouth, hoping to find a full set of pearly whites and examines its toenails to make sure they're not split.

The rabbit competition at the 1988 Johnson County Fair Wednesday was like a beauty pageant for bunnies, and Kroening was the celebrity judge, looking for signs of meat quality and good breeding as well as beauty.

He's well-known in rabbit breeding circles across the country, and rightfully so. He's been raising purebreds for 40 years and has been judging contests across the country for close to 30 years.

Rabbits are a part of Kroening's life and a part of his diet. "You get some special ones, but when you get a couple hundred rabbits, you've got to start butchering some," Kroening, president of the Wisconsin Rabbit Breeders Association and a member of the American Rabbit Breeders Associa-

He said rabbits are tastiest when barbequed on a charcoal grill.

But many of the 31 children exhibiting 127 rabbits at the fair have never tasted rabbit at all.

"I don't think I could do that with this rabbit," 14-year-old Chad Lympus said. "Once you're around it for a while you get used to its character, and it's like part of the family. It's neat when its nose wiggles. It's neat to watch what it does. It's snoopy - it snoops

Johnson County Fair Rabbit Superintendent Dave Ciha said he learned the secret to slaughtering rabbits from a doctor in the Oregon

State University Rabbit Research Department, the only rabbit research department in the coun-

"Develop and breed an ugly rabbit," Ciha said, "because they're just too cute otherwise.

The children at the fair showed all kinds of rabbits, from a Florida White to a New Zealand White from fat, spotted rabbits to skinny, solid-colored rabbits.

One family even brought a 14-pound French Lop named Roger Rabbit, and although it wasn't in the competition, it attracted plenty of attention.

An egg was strategically placed in Roger's cage as a special effect.

"Roger Rabbit layed an egg," exclaimed one young bunny fan. "He might be the Easter Bunny," Ciha, Roger's owner, responded. But many of the rabbits didn't have names. Rick Rhodes, who won two plagues in the first three categories of the competition, said he had too many rabbits to name. "I don't name my rabbits because I can't come up with 400 names," Rhodes, 14, said.

Rhodes said the secret to producing award-winning rabbits is to find good stock.

"Get good bucks and does, and you'll have good bunnies," he said. Kroening said there are 64 different recognized breeds of rabbits, and one breed has 32 different varieties. He said the most beautiful rabbits are Checkered Giants. "I'm biased about this," he said. "Checkered Giants are what I

Kroening, a native of Wisconsin, said he's traveled to Oregon, Washington, New Mexico and South Carolina to judge rabbits, and will judge in Minnesota today. "I get to see a lot of country," he said. "It's like a paid vacation."

Firefighters injured in Westwinds blaze

By Paula Roesler The Daily Iowan

Two Iowa City firefighters were hospitalized and a dozen residents evacuated following a blaze at Westwinds condominium complex Wednesday night.

Firefighters Larry Khler and John Wyss were treated at Mercy Hospital and released after the building's roof fell on them while they were battling the fire, according to Iowa City Fire Department Lt.

James Giesking. Iowa City Fire Department Batallion Chief T.L. Hansen said the fire was caused by a gas grill left on by residents on the top back porch.

"The people forgot they left it on," Hansen said. "The girl just admitted it. The cause is so obvious." Hansen said the gas from the grill probably spread to the closets of each of the second-floor units in the complex, which in turn spread to other areas of the building.

Firefighters from Iowa City, West Branch and Coralville were brought in to battle the fire.

The fire at Westwinds was another in a series which has plagued the Iowa City area this summer. A fire last week at Burge Residence Hall forced the evacuation of the building, and 17 car fires have been reported in the area since the beginning of July.

County-state law internships offer UI students experience

By Deborah Gluba The Daily Iowan

Twenty-five Iowa law students interested in public service are prosecuting cases in county courtrooms across the state this sum-

The second- and third-year law students from the UI and Drake University are part of an internship program offered through a cooperative effort by the Iowa State Attorney General's Office and several Iowa counties.

Ann McGuire, Johnson County's first assistant district attorney, works with the UI College of Law clinical law programs to supervise the program.

She said the five interns assigned to Johnson County magistrate court prosecute misdemeanor cases - typically traffic offenses, fifthdegree theft and assault - answer legal questions and work with juvenile and mental commitment court cases.

Students go through a week-long certification course and are approved to be a part of the state attorney general's contractual program before they begin the internships. The interns have full power of attorney in the magistrate courses and the county attorneys generally act as advisers, McGuire students to gain practical experience in public sector law. The interns work full-time during the summer and about 10 hours during the academic year and are in court about once every week.

"Research is not the main goal of this program," she said. "The main goal is to get the students exposed to all aspects of prosecution and to give them prosecuting experience."

McGuire said she became involved in public sector law following an internship, adding she feels public sector law offers rewards not achieved in private practice.

"Rather than working on one personal problem at a time, I feel I can have a bigger impact on social problems and issues," she said.

She said public sector law is different from private sector law because it involves working for a government or public agency on behalf of the public interest, adding she hoped the program would generate student interest in public sector law.

"Students appear to be thinking more about a career in public service," she said.

UI third-year law student Jeff DeJoode, an intern at the Johnson County Court House, said the experience has made him more open to a career in public sector

"One thing amazing about the job is that we're given a lot of discretion and responsibility," he said.

He said they are sometimes given cases where the defendant has pleaded not guilty and they may plea bargain with them.

DeJoode said the full time summer internship, at $5 an hour, may not be as lucrative as working as a law clerk in a private firm, but added it is more challenging.

NBC chooses Ames editor to head news department

DES MOINES (AP) - Iowans say NBC is getting an electric leader in choosing newspaper editor Michael Gartner to replace departing news department president Lawrence Grossman.

"He has an electric personality," said James Gannon, the editor of the Des Moines Register. Gannon was hired by Gartner in 1978 and worked with him until Gartner left in 1984.

"He's a brilliant journalist, a great idea person and a very outgoing personality who had good effects on morale in the newsroom," Gannon said. Gartner has most recently been a part-time general news executive with Gannett Co. and is editor and co-owner of the Ames Daily Tribune. He is also former editor of The Courier-Journal of Louisville, Ky., and The Des Moines network's new corporate owners. Dennis Waller, general manager of the Ames newspaper, said Gartner will retain his position with that paper. "He's going to continue to hold the title of editor, although he's obviously going to have other things to do," Waller said.

Waller said Gartner plans to commute on weekends to his home in Des Moines, so he will keep in touch with the Ames newspaper.

"He'll be able to monitor our progress while he's in Des Moines," Waller said.

"It's been strange. He's a little out of his element in a paper this size. We felt fortunate to have him here," Waller said.

While Gartner was editor of the Register, the paper was awarded two Pulitzer prizes, both for national reporting and both awarded to the paper's Washington bureau chief, James Risser.

Gartner "took a good newspaper and made it into a great or near-great newspaper," said Gannon.

Gartner hasn't lost his Midwestern values, said Gannon, who spoke with Gartner while both were at the Democratic National Convention at Atlanta last week.

No justification

Once in a while you read a story so frightening, so awful, that you think to yourself, "This cannot be true." Such is the story of Joan Duede Palma.

In 1982, Duede Palma killed her 3-year-old daughter, Chrissy, after the child wet her pants. According to Duede Palma, she was "real angry" with Chrissy, and she shoved her to the floor. Duede Palma insists that the toddler "seemed fine," so she left the room and drew herself a bath. But when she was finished, she returned to the living room to find Chrissy still lying on the floor, suffering from what an autopsy would later term irreversible brain damage. Chrissy died three days later.

Duede Palma served a 31/2-year prison term for the murder of her child. She was released from the Iowa Correctional Institution for Women in 1985. And on May 18 of this year, she had a baby boy.

But Chrissy's death — as shocking as it seems — did not come as a surprise to many. Neighbors frequently called the Iowa Department of Human Services with reports of Duede Palma's abuses. In light of the evidence, the same department actually separated mother and daughter for a number of months. But Chrissy eventually returned to her home, and five months later she died. Duede Palma says, "She probably should have been removed from my home before all of this happened." Probably. Yes, that probably would have been best. It probably would have been best if Joan Duede Palma had never had children, if the social service system weren't so inept and overworked, if the legal system were a bit more just. But this is no justification for the continued abuse and murder

There are a million Chrissy Duede's in this world. How many more will die as the rule rather than the exception?

Asking for trouble

Congress is currently debating the merits of denying financial aid to students who are convicted of using drugs. Also included in the proposed anti-drug program are plans to withhold financial aid from universities whose employees are found to be using controlled substances. The debate concerning the merits of this plan should be short.

You've got to give the federal government some credit, though. Even when its war on drugs fails miserably at the borders, in foreign policy, in the affluent sectors, in the high schools and in the general population, it demonstrates the persistence of a pit bull — with the intelligence to match. Can you say

If an employee of a university is performing his or her job to the satisfaction of superiors, it's a blatant invasion of privacy and perversion of principle to penalize that person at the workplace for conduct unrelated to his or her job. More absurd is penalizing a university by means of withholding financial aid because one of its employees used a controlled substance sometime, somewhere, and got caught. Imagine the entire student body being penalized, by denial of financial aid, because a janitor, a professor or a teaching assistant was caught lighting up.

Further, to argue from the premise that the threat of financial aid revocation will deter students from experimenting with drugs is simply wishful thinking. Even the threat of heavy fines and imprisonment by civil authorities does not accomplish this goal. Yet, we're supposed to believe that the possibility of denying someone a Guaranteed Student Loan will stop drug use?

Increasing emphasis

In a move prompted by pressure from AIDS patients, the Food and Drug Administration has decided to allow Americans to import small quantities of unapproved drugs from abroad through the mail.

Currently, there is only one approved AIDS treatment available in the United States. But this treatment, called AZT, or azidothymidine, is too toxic for many patients to take for an extended period of time. For this reason, many AIDS patients and their advocates have criticized the government for making such slow progress in the area of testing experimental drugs.

According to FDA Commissioner Frank Young, the agency had approved 178 applications for the testing of drugs and other therapies to treat AIDS as of June 15. Meanwhile, the Centers for Disease Control have enumerated the AIDS death toll at 38,541 Americans, only 56 percent of the total number of reported AIDS cases in the U.S.

The federal government is only now beginning to test dextran sulfate, one of the drugs that AIDS patients will be able to receive through the mail, in human trials as a treatment for hat is a special interest? Arthur H. Miller and Christopher Wlezien answer that question for us in their article, Avoiding the special interest trap" (The Daily Iowan, July 24).

In their desperation, many AIDS victims have looked to foreign shores for relief, hoping to increase their chances of survival and searching for an alternative solution to the problem that their own government seems almost ignorant of, much less capable of solving. The sluggishness of the U.S. government in responding to the AIDS crisis has already cost thousands of lives. This move by the FDA is a good one; however, it would be nicely complemented by a full-scale campaign to find an approved treatment acceptable for all AIDS patients. Thus, the government would not only be temporarily placating the desires of AIDS patients, but saving their lives.

Special interests are those groups newly associated with the Democratic Party which are unpopular with the electorate and cause the party to lose elections. They mention in particular feminists, "militant blacks" and the most unpopular special interest of all, gays and

According to Miller and Wlezien, Mondale lost the 1984 election because he was too closely identified with these unpopular groups and the labor movement. Dukakis has made heroic efforts to distance himself from special interests, but he is likely to fail unless he entirely severs his ties to them.

Political scientists can, of course, adopt any terms they find useful and persuasive. But it is interesting to see how a highly partisan phrase taken from a bitterly contested, ongoing political struggle has become, in the hands of Miller and Wlezien, an apparently neutral term of political analysis. The Miller-Wlezien definition of special interests has a well-known recent history, for it originated in attacks on the Mondale campaign by his political opponents during the 1984 Democratic primaries.

It became an influential line of argument with powerful Democrats like Bob Strauss and former Gov. Robb of Virginia, who persuaded Mondale himself that it was true. By the time of the 1984 convention, Mondale had decided to reverse his primary strategy and run the most conservative Democratic presidential campaign in recent history, conservative in the sense that he was unwilling to advocate any extension of the New Deal-Great Society tradition of social reform for fear of being labeled a tool of special interests. Instead he was persuaded to threaten middle-income people with tax increases in order to reduce the deficit and continue the Reagan military build-up at a

By sleight of hand, the media identified this conservative, procorporate losing strategy with Mondale's very different primary strategy of building coalitions within the party. The decisive rejection by the electorate of Mondale's 1984 campaign was then blamed entirely on the wicked special interests, newly defined as militant blacks, feminists and other undesirables. Journalists have been repeating this analysis parrot-like ever since 1984. Following their line of reasoning, the chairman of the Democratic National Committee, Paul Kirk, adopted a strategy of suppressing special interest groups in the party, such as the Gay and Lesbian caucus.

At the same time he began a very successful campaign of courting wealthy investors and private business interests, the very people who ests before the 1984 election. nothing more than a partisan,

Wealthy investors and business groups are offered influence in the party in the name of broadening the base of the party and getting away from the special interests. But are these new friends of the Democratic Party ever identified as special interests? Do any critical journalists point out that a sophisticated rhetorical strategy of redefining special interests is being used to justify narrowing the base of the party, all in the name of broadening it? No. Media commentators and political consultants marched on and off the television screen during the Democratic National Convention, repeating Kirk's analysis that Democrats must shed their special interests in order to win the election.

Miller and Wliezen accept this argument without modification. Do they investigate the way the term "special interests" is being used in a highly partisan way inside the Democratic Party, to help divorce the party from its supporters and drive it into the hands of wealthy business interests? Do they point out that the phrase "special interests" has rarely been used in discussions of the Republican Party, where George Bush has just promised a small unpopular minority of investors that he will cut their capital gains taxes?

No. Instead we hear from Miller and Wlezien more of the same old media story that has been circulated uncritically since 1984. The used to be abused as special inter- term special interest, which is Under Kirk's leadership, the hostile description of a natural Democratic National Committee constituency of a political party, is

His vice-presidential selection threatened party unity, but his successful reconciliation with Jesse Jackson at the Democratic National Convention reassured his party that he had not capitulated to the Paul Kirk strategy of exclusion. Off the mark To the Editor:

Tom Hunter seems to have completely missed the point in his column, "Shallow traits of our era," (The Daily Iowan, July 25). Reading it, one gets the idea that selfisness and greed originated with the 1980's generation, instead of being part of every age and era.

While I would agree that there seems to be an increase in materialism in today's society, the phenomenon isn't limited to the younger crowd. Legalization defended

John O'Roake's recent column "Legalization is poor solution" same failing as recent Newsweek and Time articles - it is poorly

First of all, O'Roake makes an assumption that proponents of drug legalization expect such a ticizing the hippies who "came to solution to eradicate organized crime. I would dispute this assumption; it is well known that sessing the legacy of the era? number of violent, drug-related crimes will decrease with the legalization of drugs. He doesn't tell us why this would be so; it just is. I think there is an argument that such crimes would decline as a result of decreased drug prices and control of drug distribution by the government. Third, O'Roake implies that although legalization would allow diversion of money from enforcement to education and rehabilitation programs, such programs simply wouldn't work. My response is: If drug education simply doesn't work, how does one explain the change in cigarette smoking habits and laws?

Further, O'Roake argues that we shouldn't legalize drugs because we didn't do it in the '70s; it would harm Nancy Reagan's public persona. It seems to me this excuse comes from a mentality that believes that one should never admit to mistakes. Remember the Vietnam War?

A benefit of drug legalization not mentioned by O'Roake is control of the purity of substances. Drug addicts will use drugs unless rehabilitated. If we are reallly interested in saving lives, one way to do so is to institute some quality control so those people know what and how much they are using. Obviously, the current administration isn't interested in this, as

S. Koreans demonstrate at U.S. Army base

SEOUL, South Korea — Riot police Wednesday arrested about 30 students yelling "Yankee go home" and demonstrating in front of U.S. Army headquarters to demand expulsion of U.S. forces.

Hundreds of riot police in green fatigues and black visored helmets swiftly detained the students as they marched toward the U.S. 8th Army headquarters in southern Seoul. The students, who tried to stage a peaceful sit-down protest, were forced into

The students also demonstrated to mark the 35th anniversary today of the end of the Korean War, begun in 1950 by communist North Korea's invasion of the south.

The students called for removal of the 42,000 U.S. troops still based in South Korea under a defense treaty, and they carried bannows denouncing the American military presence.

"Lto a with the United States, which forced partition of the Korean peninsula," protesters shouted.

Radical students claim the United States is responsible for the continued division of the Korean Peninsula and rules the south as a virtual colony. Radicals have called for immediate reunification with the communist North.

FBI confirms receipt of stolen documents

MIAMI - The FBI acknowledged Wednesday it received documents taken from the home of a reporter who worked for CBS-TV in Costa Rica, but said agents had no indication at the time that the material was stolen.

The files belonged to Tony Avirgan, a free-lance cameraman who was investigating a political bombing in Nicaragua that killed eight people. Avirgan later filed suit here against top U.S. and Contra officials he linked to the incident.

The documents came to the FBI from an individual who "unsolicited, voluntarily provided the items in question to an agent," said a statement issued late Wednesday by Washington FBI spokeswoman Sue Schnitzer.

"This individual gave no indication that the documents were obtained through illegal means," the FBI statement said.

Avirgan's home in Costa Rica was broken into in November 1985 and again a year later, said Lanny Sinkin, an attorney for the Washington-based Christic Institute, which represents Avirgan in the suit. The thefts were reported to Costa Rican police at the time, but no one was ever arrested.

During preparations for the suit, attorneys routinely asked for any documents the FBI Washington office might have on Avirgan, and the agency responded last month.

"As we went through them, it became clear they were stolen from Tony's home," Sinkin said.

The 39 pages included not only memos to CBS, but Avirgan's handwritten notes about the bombing, he said. "It suggests that the break-in was targeted to find out what he

Drowned rats wash onto New York beaches

NEW YORK - Now decomposed rats have washed ashore on New York City beaches, joining medical waste in a bounty of unwanted debris that has closed many East Coast recreation areas this summer. Altogether, 10 of the 14.3 miles of beaches administered by the city Parks Department were closed because of debris Wednesday. In addition, most of the beaches in the Gateway National Recreation Area remained closed. "It's very disappointing to us," said Parks Commissioner Henry Stern, who added that he hoped investigators would find who was responsible for the illegal dumping "and send them away for a

While officials in New York said they were baffled by the seaborne invasion of debris, authorities in Rhode Island said they had traced medical waste that washed ashore in that state to New York-area hospitals, drug stores and ambulances. Nine rats were among the 246 pieces of waste that were found at Rockaway Beach on Tuesday, according to Health Department spokesman Barry Adkins. At least 24 more pieces of debris were found Wednesday. Most of the items were syringes, Adkins said.

Stocks suffer broad setback on low volume

NEW YORK — Stock prices declined broadly in quiet trading Wednesday as traders found little encouragement in the latest statistics on economic growth.

The Dow Jones average dropped 20.27 to 2,053.70, its lowest close since it stood at 2,052.45 on June 2.

Volume on the floor of the Big Board came to 135.89 million shares, against 121.96 million in the previous session.

Attack on Noriega getsmixedreaction

WASHINGTON (AP) - As the Reagan administration reportedly embarked on a new plan for ousting Panamanian leader Manuel Antonio Noriega, a Panamanian opposition leader on Wednesday expressed enthusiastic support for the continuing U.S. effort to isolate

Ambassador Juan Sosa, who broke with the Noriega-led government in February, said in an interview he is pleased that the administration has maintained a nonegotiations policy toward Noriega since the collapse of a U.S. bid in May to encourage him to surrender

But Sosa, who shares the U.S. view that ousted Panamanian President Eric Arturo Delvalle is the legitimate authority in Panama, said he had not been briefed on the covert action plan reportedly approved by President Ronald Reagan.

This contradicted a source quoted in Wednesday's editions of The Washington Post, which along with the Los Angeles Times reported the new anti-Noriega plan.

Contrary to the accounts in the Post and the Times, Sosa also said he doubted that Reagan had informed Delvalle of the plan during a telephone conversation on

"As far as I know, the conversation did not touch on that," said Sosa, who continues to serve at Panama's embassy here in defiance of the Panamanian government's efforts to appoint its own envoy.

The administration has frozen Panamanian government assets in the United States as part of broad policy of economic denial against Panama. When the May negotiations broke down, the administration withdrew its proposals and said it would not take part in further negotiations.

Manuel Noriega

Offers by Guatemalan President Vinicio Cerezo and former Venezuelan President Carlos Andres Perez to start up an alternate negotiating process have not borne Noriega, who is under federal drug smuggling indictments, has refused to discuss Panama's political future since the collapse of the U.S. initiative.

The sources quoted by the Post and the Times declined to discuss details of the alleged covert action plan. One source told the Post that the activities fall short of a paramilitary operation, such as kidnaping Noriega.

On Capitol Hill, Sen. Alphonse D'Amato, R-N.Y., suggested that the leak originated in the White House "during this political season" to create the impression that the United States is doing something about Noriega and drug trafficking in Panama.

Rep. Patricia Schroeder, D-Colo., said that Reagan authorized the activity to give the appearance of stepping up his campaign against

Forest fires continue destruction in 8 states

By The Associated Press

Crews set backfires with flame throwers Wednesday to protect Old Faithful from the worst forest fire outbreak at Yellowstone National Park this century, while wildfires forced hundreds of people from their homes in South Dakota and Idaho.

In Alaska, about 1,200 firefighters battled blazes that burned about 1.3 million acres, an area larger than the state of Delaware, and strong winds fanned two of the largest fires, officials said.

Large fires also burned in Arizona, Oregon, Utah and Washington

An 1,800-acre fire west of Rapid City, S.D., prompted the evacuation of more than 500 people, destroyed four homes and damaged another four, said fire information officer Corbin Newman. It also burned four vehicles and 15 outbuildings, including garages, sheds and barns.

An estimated 575 firefighters had the blaze 70 percent contained

Wednesday. One firefighter suffered a burned neck and a resident suffered smoke inhalation. Another person was hurt in a smoke-caused traffic accident.

The fire in Rapid City was reported Tuesday afternoon, and swept across forest and meadow in the southwestern South Dakota area that's home to 90,000 people.

Interior Secretary Donald Hodel flew by helicopter over 10,000 charred acres in Yellowstone's southern areas and told 500 firefighters that he supports the policy of letting wildfires burn unchecked in wilderness areas unless they endanger buildings, people or

"We aren't going to waste our resources where fires aren't doing harm to the park," he said. "There is a long-term beneficial effect from

Crews took an active role against a 9,700-acre fire burning within six miles of Old Faithful, the park's most famous attraction.

U.S. still negotiating for hostages as Iran, Iraq continue to battle

Here, at a glance, are Wednesday's developments involving Iran, Iraq and the United States:

WASHINGTON - An offer by a senior Iranian official to help free American hostages in Lebanon was dismissed Wednesday by the Reagan administration. Freeing the nine American hostages is "a humanitarian issue" and not subject to bartering with Iran over releasing Iranian assets frozen in the United States, said State Department spokesman Charles

BAGHDAD, Iraq — Iranian rebels said they held the cities well inside Iran, had killed or wounded thousands of Iranian soldiers and had shot down two Iranian warplanes and a helicopter gunship Wednesday. The claims could not be independently verified. Iran complained that Iraqi planes dropped chemical bombs near Bakhtaran, an Iranian provincial

UNITED NATIONS — Foreign Minister Tariq Aziz of Iraq said his country will not be "stampeded" into a settlement and insists on direct cease-fire negotiations with Iran. Ambassador Mohammad Ja'afar Mahallati of Iran accused Iraq of stalling and sabotaging U.N. efforts to end the war. Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar urged both governments to "help me in finding a solution through compromise.'

"Kiss Me Deadly" (1955) - Adapted from a Mickey Spillane novel, the film centers on a slightly seedy private eye, Mike Hammer, who investigates a nasty series of murders, only to find that the evil force behind them is too powerful to approach, much less apprehend. 7 p.m.

"The Man Who Shot Liberty Valance" (1962) - In John Ford's nostalgic, bittersweet farewell to the Westerner and his vanishing ideals, John Wayne plays a charismatic local rancher who mediates between a naive Eastern-bred lawyer, played by Jimmy Stewart, and the archetypal Western villain, played by Lee Marvin.

"Cactus" (1986) - A beautiful

French woman visiting Australia is involved in an automobile accident that forces her to choose between losing her eyesight and having an infected eye removed. The ultimate decision is not as crucial as the feelings engendered by her falling in love with a young blind man. 7 p.m.

"The Black Cannon Incident" (1985) - Admired for its political daring and subtle satire, this film concerns a hapless engineer who gets caught in a political wringer and emerges with his ego flattened. In Mandarin. 7 p.m.

Manley placed on suspension

NEW YORK (AP) - Dexter Manley of the Washington Redskins was suspended for 30 days by Commissioner Pete Rozelle Wednesday for violating the NFL's substance abuse

While the league did not characterize the move as a suspension, league spokesman Joe Browne said that Manley had been notified that he had involuntarily been placed on the team's non-football injury list for 30 days.

"I have instructed Dexter Manley to remain out of the Redskins' training camp until Aug. 26," Rozelle said in a statement issued through Browne. That would make Manley eligible to play in the Super Bowl champions' regular-season opener Sept. 5 against the New York Giants.

Manley, who in 1987 underwent treatment for alcohol abuse at the Hazelden Institute in Minnesota, met with Rozelle last Friday after reports that an illegal substance turned up in a drug test. The substance has never specifically been identified.

Traditions and habits are difficult to break. With the Summer Olympics nearing, it's interesting to talk to athletes in sports like soccer which are not as popular in this country to find out why the United States is not the best in a particular sport.

Field hockey, for example, is Holland's national sport. Children grow up with the sport and learn the fundamentals at a tender age. It's tough to compete against tradition. Even so, it's amazing how many people I know who say they love soccer and their child thoroughly likes playing the game. I've still yet to figure out what is so appealing about soccer.

However, a lot of foreigners are still trying to figure out the appeal of American football and baseball.

John Jones, spokesman for the management council, said its attorneys were reviewing the decision and would issue a statement later.

The lawsuit focused on the interpretation of a clause in the contract that said pension contributions will be paid by the owners if the contributions are tax deductible. The union said contributions should be made if they were tax deductible the year the contributions were due or in subsequent years. The owners, however, said they were not required to make the payments unless the contributions were fully tax deductible in the year the money was due. Murray ruled that the owners must pay almost $18 million in contributions for the 1984-86 seasons and about $1.5 million in The league has maintained that the the benefits are guaranteed and that the pension fund was overfunded. Anything beyond adequate funding is taxable, the league said.

Catching the wave of soccer

occer has long been an important sport in the world, something that causes riots and deep splits between the countries of the

Without regret, I must admit soccer, which is commonly called football in most other countries, has hardly been my favorite sport. It's not the greatest spectator sport, but neither is golf, and that's a sport I enjoy.

Soccer certainly has worldwide appeal, and it should be intriguing to have the world's eyes focusing on the 1994 World Cup soccer tournament, a four-week exercise.

The United States will be in the middle of the most important event in 1994, bar none, as countries parade in the cause of nationalism cheering for the home team.

This is serious business for the world's No. 1 most-played game. So why isn't soccer a popular sport

Soccer is taught at an early age in America. There are great numbers of soccer leagues for grade schoolers and teen-agers. In many places, it's competition for Little League

While there are probably more reasons, there seems to be three major ones for soccer's demise after the high school level.

First, there's a lack of money in the sport. Professional soccer has managed little luck in this country.

Pele brought some appeal when he played in New York several years back, but the North American Soccer League, the last outdoor league to play in the United States, eventually felt its demise.

The Major Indoor Soccer League has provided several United States cities with an Astroturf, speeded-up version of the game which has reaked havoc with lawyers filling out Chapter 11 bankruptcy papers.

Secondly, soccer has never been the sport in which the whole family takes an evening break to sharpen the soccer skills.

Honestly, how many times have you seen a family out in their yard kicking a soccer ball around?

It's usually a parent tossing a football around or throwing a baseball to give their child a little batting practice, hoping, of course, not to break the next door neigh-Don't forget the late-night urges to

Fitzpatrick's holds off comeback bid

By Brent D. Woods The Daily Iowan

Incoming Iowa freshman Troy Skinner got a chance to redeem himself in Prime Time Basketball League action Wednesday night. And he took advantage of it.

Iowa City, Iowa — Thursday, July 28, 1988 — Page 8

Skinner sank two clutch free throws with nine seconds remaining in the contest to give Fitzpatrick's a three-point cushion and squelch an Athlete's Foot comeback in a 101-98 victory at Iowa City High School.

"I was nervous, especially after I choked off the first ones," Skinner said, referring to his previous miss at the line late in the game.

Skinner's free throws were all that stood between Fitzpatrick's and a hard-fought Athlete's Foot come-Fitzpatrick's held a narrow 52-49 lead at the half mostly on the strength of hot shooting by Greg McDermott.

Fitzpatrick's standout Michael Ingram had spent nearly 10 minutes of the first stanza on the bench in foul trouble, and when Ingram returned in the second half, he made his presence felt. He scored seven points in the first 21/2 minutes and helped his team stretch out its lead to 85-76 with seven minutes remaining.

At the 6:04 mark, Fitzpatrick's held its biggest lead of the game, 90-76, but The Athlete's Foot wasn't up for a blowout.

Led by Les Jepsen and Kent Pollpeter, The Athlete's Foot chipped away at the 14-point margin and pulled the score to 97-94 vith 1:06 left.

Incoming Iowa freshman Wade Lookingbill then made one of two free throws for Fitzpatrick's to make the score 98-94, but Pollpeter answered with a 14-foot bank shot to close the margin to 98-96.

Northern Iowa's Nick Nurse made one free throw for Fitzpatrick's and Jepsen hit a 10-foot turnaround jumper to make the score 99-98 and set up Skinner's free throws.

onds remaining to launch a gametying three-point shot, but Pollpeter's attempt with two seconds left wouldn't fall.

Skinner, a 5-foot-10 guard from Palmer, Iowa, said he thinks the Prime Time competition has continued to help his game.

"I'm still not playing as well as I'd like to, but playing with this type of competition really helps," Skinner said. "I'm trying to work a lot on my ball-handling. My shooting has been pretty good, but it kind of left me again tonight.'

Jepsen scored 30 points and grabbed 15 rebounds in a losing cause for The Athlete's Foot. Todd Hutchenson tallied 25 and Pollpeter added 23.

Fitzpatrick's was led by McDermott's 28 points. Nurse and

In the other early garage of a National Bank took advange of a sparse Southgate Development team to win 116-104.

Ed Horton led the way for the winners with 31 points. Kevin Drahozal had 26 for Southgate.

Iowa Coach Tom Davis was again watching the action and said the league games give him a good chance to monitor the progress of his players.

"It's interesting. You get a chance to see who is improving," Davis said. "It's hard to tell how much, but they're all improving." Like Les (Jepsen) — he's trying very hard."

In the late matchups, Hargrave, McEleney faced Iowa State Bank and Hills Bank played Eby's Athle tic Company.

NFLowners ordered to pay $19 million

BALTIMORE (AP) - A court ruling that National Football League team owners owe the play. ers' pension fund more than $19 million in overdue payments deprives the owners of a bargaining ploy, a union attorney said.

U.S. District Judge Herbert Murray ruled Tuesday in a lawsuit filed by the NFL Players Association that the owners must pay $19.3 million to the fund in a dispute dating to 1984. Dick Berthelsen, the union's general counsel, said the ruling was a significant legal victory for the players in more ways than one. "Ever since the contributions were due but not paid, management has been trying to use the unpaid sums as leverage in bargaining. The Clients can also purchase owners tried to make us bargain twice for the same pension benefits, but this pension money belongs to the players and always has," Berthelsen said.

The NFLPA, which administers the pension fund with the league's Management Council, had sought to force the owners to make the payments of $12.5 million annually under the five-year collective bargaining agreement that expired last year.

Teary Spinks announces retirement

NEW YORK (AP) - Michael have to admit it's been fun." Spinks, the only light heavyweight ever to dethrone a heavyweight champion, tearfully announced his retirement Wednesday, a month to the day after Mike Tyson ended in 91-seconds his quest to regain the

"I've never retired from anything except selling newspapers," the 32-year old Spinks said, breaking into sobs between words, then wiping away the tears with napkins handed him by his promotermanager, Butch Lewis.

"It's been a tough 12 years, but I

Spinks, whose loss to Tyson in Atlantic City, N.J., June 27 was the only one in his 32 professional fights, said he will join Lewis as an agent-advisor to young athletes.

An Olympic middleweight champion in 1976, Spinks turned pro six months later and won eight straight fights before taking time off to help his brother Leon win the world heavyweight title from Muhammad Ali.

He won his first pro title in 1981 when he defeated Eddie Mustafa

Muhammad to capture the World Boxing Association lightheavyweight title, then beat Dwight Muhammad Qawi on March 18, 1983 to unify the championship in the division.

Then, on Sept. 22, 1985, having beefed up from 175 pounds to more than 200, he became the first light heavyweight to take away the title from a heavyweight champ when he outpointed Larry Holmes in 15 rounds at Las Vegas, Nev., for the

"Twelve years is a lot of time for getting run at and having to duck a lot of punches," said Spinks, who said Lewis had advised him to quit while he still had his health and, he said, $25 million in the bank.

"But I look at some of the older guys - Jersey Joe Walcott, Smokin' Joe Frazier, Archie Moore, Muhammad Ali. They made 12 years look like six months."

"We're doing it our way," Lewis said. "He's got his money, he's got International Boxing Federation his health. I just thought it was
