Minorities show slight rise in average ACT performance:

By Mike Holmes

The average college-bound student in Iowa again had a slight raise in average ACT scores in 1989, according to a new study released by the University of Iowa in late October. Students from families with higher income, black or white, showed an increase in average scores.

The data for the 1989 study was compiled by the University of Iowa's Department of Education, which has been collecting the data since 1978. The study is based on the ACT scores of more than 90,000 students who completed the test during the 1988-89 school year.

The study showed that the average ACT scores for minority groups continued to increase. However, there were some exceptions to this trend.

Despite the increase, minorities still lag behind white students in average ACT scores, according to the study. The average ACT score of minority students was 15.9, compared to 17.3 for white students.

The study also showed that the gap between minority and white students has narrowed. In 1978, the average ACT score for minority students was 10.8, compared to 15.8 for white students.

The study found that the average ACT score for minority students has increased by 5.1 points since 1978, compared to an increase of 5.7 points for white students.

Local woman struggles with lupus

Metro/Iowa

For years, Donna Willard thought she was just a little achy, but for years she didn't give it much thought, she had personal insurance and she was covered. When she was finally driven to seek treatment, she was shocked when she gained about 40 pounds only weeks after starting to take medication for a disease of the blood, body systems. Erythema nodosum, or a chronic inflammatory disease which often results in skin eruptions and muscle pain, is often caused by lupus.

"You lose a lot of pride because it affects everything, you know," Willard said. "It was a very long, long time before I could change my ways of life to help self." Willard believes that the disease has been a blessing in disguise.

Willard and her entire family have a history of lupus. Her brothers, her father, her mother and aunts and uncles also have the disease.

For the past year, Willard has been working to unseat incumbent State Auditor Tom Homan. Willard is a member of a large labor organization. She is running for the Nov. 8 election is 5 p.m.

The decision, made at a special meeting of the State Auditor's Office, said the cards were distributed to county auditors to accept the cards, and re-register them would be themselves to be qualified electors of the state," the panel said in a statement.

"We cannot accept the fact that I have lupus," Willard said. "I keep up my job in the office, and do not have any type of diseases do not have the regularity that is needed to understand," she said.

Willard said that yesterday her hands had been burning and she had a high fever. People may question what type of diseases do not have the regularity that is needed to understand, she said.

Then-Congressman Harkin was badly hampered by revelations of US foreign policy mistakes.

by saying this, I think they're not alone.

The subject has been one of the major issues in the campaign, and is a hot button topic in the debate. But how much time and effort is being spent on this issue?

In this article, I discuss the significance of the subject in the campaign, and the impact it has on the voters.

And why, I ask you, does the media not give the readers the whole story? Does it not give the readers the full story, or is it only giving them a partial story, or is it only giving them a story that is biased?

Dukakis showed anger last summer at the suggestion he was treading on territory of others.

"This is the big one," he said, "The one they do not want me to talk about."

The debate was his, according to the meeting's moderator, Rev. Harold H. Helm.

"But it is a perfect storm," he said, "The perfect storm to bring this to the public."
Algerian death toll rises following week of rioting

ALGERIA. Algeria (AP) - President Chadli Benjedid said Wednesday that he had endorsed a proposal by the warring parties to set up a committee of five officials from the European Community to mediate negotiations.

The committee would be responsible for proposing a settlement to the parties and would be composed of three representatives of the European Community plus two representatives of the United States. The American representatives would include a high-ranking diplomat and a private negotiator.

The proposal was backed by the United States, which has been mediating the conflict for the past two weeks.

The committee is expected to meet within six months of its establishment to discuss the progress of the negotiations.

In separate developments, the U.S. government announced it would resume military aid to Algeria after a four-month suspension, as a result of its efforts to end the conflict.

The U.S. decision is expected to be welcomed by the Algerian government, which has been seeking assistance to end the fighting.

Despite the progress, however, the situation remains fragile, with both sides continuing to accuse each other of violations of the cease-fire agreement.

The United Nations is monitoring the situation and has called for a renewal of the truce.

WASHINGTON—The Congress, finally convinced that it has the sacred power of life and death over the Pentagon to close two-thirds of its bases as it sees fit, is expected to give the Pentagon to close one-third of its bases as a start at closing 200 bases a year.

The Senate, meeting Tuesday, and the House followed shortly afterward with a 270-to-170 vote that was straight down the lines of the leadership.

Ronald Reagan. He is expected to sign it.

The Senate and House, with the backing of the Arms Services panel, and they have talked with conservative senators and the Senate has a list of bases not to be closed. The White House has told the Pentagon not to close bases in the short run, and we know that reflects itself here in the Congress.

The bill, which is supported by both the Senate and House, now has one of the most powerful political figures in the country, the incoming president…

The bill endorses a Pentagon-appointed commission which has been working recently, trying to put together a list of bases to be closed. It has expanded to 12 members of the bill.

Irish-Miami game tops weekend schedule

In his book, there’s just another game. Not quite. Not anymore. "It may be, as a Dodgers fan," he says, "but it’s a lot more important than that."

For enthusiastic fans, no game is more meaningful than the one that sets the tone for the rest of the season. In this case, it’s the game between the Los Angeles Dodgers and the Miami Marlins. The team from Florida has been a thorn in the side of the Dodgers for years, and this season, the rivalry is heating up.

The game is scheduled for next week, and the entire city is buzzing with anticipation. Fans are already planning their outfits, gathering their friends, and making plans to watch the game at home, in the stands, or on the big screen.

But the game isn’t just about the two teams. It’s about the entire city. The Dodgers are a part of Los Angeles, and the Marlins are a part of Miami. Both cities have a rich baseball history, and this game is just another chapter in that story.

So, mark your calendars, grab your tickets, and get ready for an unforgettable weekend. This game is going to be the talk of the town, and you don’t want to miss it.
