Iowans sense emotional, not physical, aftershocks

Jennifer Gibson
The Daily Iowan

Although Iowa City residents didn't feel the physical tremors from Tuesday's earthquake, the vibrations from San Francisco's 7.1 temblor Thursday night were enough to make them aware of the shockwave.

"We can feel the movement of the ground," said Jennifer Gibson, "and it feels like it's a wave." Gibson, who lives near the University of Iowa Hospital and Clinics, said she was "very concerned" for friends and family in California.

"I've never been through a quake," she said. "I've been in several significant earthquakes in Iowa, but this is different. It was very concerning." Gibson said she and her family had been discussing the quake with friends in California, who had been tracking the ongoing aftershocks.

Thorstensen says space research reveals many medical benefits

John Thorstensen
The Daily Iowan

IOWA CITY, Iowa — John Thorstensen, a research scientist at the University of Iowa, recently returned from a mission aboard the international Space Station.

"It was an incredible experience," Thorstensen said. "I was able to see the Earth from a new perspective and I learned a lot about how the human body adapts to space travel." Thorstensen said that during his time on the Space Station, he conducted a number of experiments aimed at understanding the effects of long-duration space travel on the human body.

"I conducted experiments on the effects of microgravity on the body's immune system," Thorstensen said. "I also studied the effects of exposure to high levels of radiation on the body's ability to repair itself." Thorstensen said that the results of his experiments have important implications for the future of space travel and space exploration.

"We need to understand the effects of space travel on the human body before we can send humans to Mars," Thorstensen said. "I hope that my work will contribute to our understanding of this important question." Thorstensen said that he was looking forward to returning to the Space Station and continuing his research on space physiology and human biology.

Consumer prices rise; inflation rate in decline

WASHINGTON (AP) — Consumer prices rose modestly in June, while the inflation rate dropped to its lowest level in more than three years, the Labor Department said Wednesday.

The consumer price index for all urban consumers increased 0.4% in June, the same as in May, the Labor Department said in its monthly report on inflation. The index measures the change in prices of goods and services purchased by urban consumers.

The inflation rate dropped to 2.6% in June, down from 3.1% in May. The inflation rate is the percentage increase in the cost of living, or the average increase in the prices of goods and services purchased by urban consumers.

The report also showed that the cost of housing increased 0.7% in June, compared with a 0.2% rise in May. The cost of housing is the largest component of the consumer price index, accounting for about one-third of the total cost of living.

The report also showed that the cost of energy increased 0.9% in June, compared with a 0.5% rise in May. The cost of energy is the second largest component of the consumer price index, accounting for about one-fifth of the total cost of living.

The report also showed that the cost of food increased 0.4% in June, compared with a 0.3% rise in May. The cost of food is an important component of the consumer price index, accounting for about one-fifth of the total cost of living.

Amendment to ban flag-burning is a no-go

WASHINGTON — An amendment to ban flag-burning is a no-go, Speaker of the House Newt Gingrich said Wednesday.

"The amendment was a mistake," Gingrich said. "It was a misguided attempt to appease the anti-flag crowd." Gingrich said that the amendment was an attempt to appease the anti-flag crowd, but it was a mistake.

Aquatourchewahuh - Fresh fish to go-go

POTOMAC, BALTIMORE - (AP) - Freshwater oysters and mussels that are grown in Maryland are the raw ingredients for a new restaurant that is gaining popularity.

"The eyes of Maryland are right here," said Mike Deluca, the owner of the restaurant, "and that's where our seafood comes from." He added that the restaurant uses local oysters and mussels to make its dishes.

"Consumers want fresh, new species, and they are willing to pay for it," Deluca said.

We have an aquaculture industry, it's growing, and it has attracted attention from the marketplace and consumers. The restaurant and the consumers both benefit from this development," he said.

Deluca joined bakers, politicians, educators and retailers at a ribbon cutting ceremony at the restaurant, which is located in the Middle Fork of the Vermilion River.

"We want to be a part of this movement to provide the public with fresh, healthy and delicious food that is produced locally," Deluca said.

"We also want to help the environment by reducing our carbon footprint," he added.

Police begin search for husband of motel victim

Kentucky's Daily News

A man with a history of domestic violence was arrested on Saturday after his wife was found dead in their motel room.

The victim's name has not been released, but police said she was a local resident who was staying at the motel with her husband.

"We have reason to believe that the husband is the suspect," said Detective Mike Novick.

"We have evidence that he was at the scene of the crime and that he may have been involved in the events leading up to the victim's death," Novick said.

"We also have evidence that he tried to cover up the crime," he added.

Scott Beach, the owner of the motel, said he was surprised by the news and that he is cooperating with the investigation.

"We take these incidents very seriously and we are doing everything we can to help law enforcement," Beach said.

"We also want to offer our condolences to the victim's family and friends," he added.

Scott also said he has increased security measures at the motel.

"We want to make sure that this doesn't happen again," he said.

The investigation is ongoing and police are asking for anyone with information to come forward.

"We want to hear from anyone who saw or heard anything that might be relevant," Novick said.

"We also want to thank the victim's family for their cooperation," he added.

The victim's family released a statement expressing their grief and thanking law enforcement.

"We are devastated by the loss of our loved one," the statement read.

"We want to express our gratitude to law enforcement and to everyone who is helping with this investigation," the statement continued.

"We also want to offer our condolences to the police and to everyone who is working to find justice," the statement concluded.

Cedar Rapids woman recalls quake of 1906

Family moved back to Iowa

"It was all had to get in the wagon, and they rush us way to the house, the soldiers' other,'" Daniel said. The earthquake, she said, was caused when the house where she lived in Cedar Rapids, Iowa, during the earthquake of 1906. The earthquake was centered in San Francisco, killing thousands of people and destroying many homes.

Despite the severity of the earthquake, Daniel said she remained calm and helped her family escape the house. "My father said the only thing was to get out of the house," she said.

In the aftermath of the earthquake, Daniel's family and neighbors worked to rebuild their lives. "The soldiers began yelling at us, but we just kept working," she said.

Although there was little damage to their home, Daniel said her family was still Stratford, Iowa, where all of her family were homeless by the earthquake. No one was injured, she said, but the family's financial situation was affected. "We took the boat to Oakland, there was no bridges there, so that's how we left the train back to Cedar Rapids," she said.

I.C. Yacht Club celebrates their anniversary with "house band"

Dennis McMurrin and the Demolition Band are the mainstays of the music scene here at the I.C. Yacht Club. They've been playing together for a few years, and it shows. The band is a tightly-knit unit, with a style that is both bluesy and jazzy. They perform their R&B with a straight edge, and their electric bass guitar and backing vocals make up Buddy Guy. They have their main stomping ground late at night, and they are a popular choice for events like the Yacht Club's annual anniversary celebration.

Marty: I've been with us a year so far.
Dennis: Who else is coming to perform tonight?
Marty: Well, so's Buddy Guy.

The Demolition Band is composed of ten musicians, all of whom are experienced in both blues and jazz. Their sound is a unique blend of the two genres, and they have a devoted following here in Iowa City.

Marty: Mandell, Ted Mandell.

Dennis: It's hard to describe.
Marty: It's a real thin, and that's why it's so good to be around that. It really is after playing the studio, live stage, or recording in the studio, you know, just trying to be more of a unit.

Dennis: I'm not sure how to describe... But that is what it is kind of hard to say why. It's hard to really know.

Dennis: It's really hard to put musical statements into words. It's really hard to do that. But generally we just get as bluesy, and jazzy, and I don't know. What do we do?
"We have to hold our water, and the books are closed down," Pogue said. "The drought has affected corn, soybeans, small cereals, potatoes. The combined effect has been devastating." Pogue said he was happy to do business with a cooperative like the Iowa Farmers Union, which he said had helped him weather the drought.

"You need to know that there's someone you can call on to help you," he said. "The Iowa Farmers Union is that someone."

Bakatin claims Yeltsin is lying

MOSCOW (AP) — The interior minister on Thursday buried Boris Yeltsin's lies and said the govern ment received a phone report of a kidnap attempt. It was leader in the Moscow River, Bakatin said. When he was given the facts, Yeltsin, 50, denied to fellow lawmakers that he had ever made a formal police report of such an attack. But an attack occurred, Bakatin claimed, if any lies were being told about the supposed kidnapping they were coming from Yeltsin.

Yeltsin's story of his own kidnap and Yeltsin himself is a political farce to scuttle his political career, said Gorbachev. He claimed Gorbachev was put a sack over his head and tossed from a bridge into the Moscow River, Bakatin said.

Before the cameras of state-run TV on Monday Bakatin told the Supreme Soviet legislature that claims, an anti-establishment hero, were being told about the supposed kidnapping they were coming from Yeltsin.

The new General Secretary on East Germany's Communist Party, Erich Mielke, said the huge transport plane carrying paratroopers to keep order in the ethnically mixed East Berlin's Waidsee district Thursday, Oct. 1, 1989, was carrying 1,000 soldiers and paratroopers. The troops were not identified as communist party members, but Mielke's announcement was the first word about the causes of the East Germans' protests.

Mielke called on East Germans to help the party work out details of accident liability under an international forum on the future of Antarctica that would open Spain's unspoiled wilderness or exploited by potential natural resources. Environmentalists called for a moratorium on raising the sea level, which could melt the polar ice caps. The United States said the continent's best way to protect Antarctica.

The University of Iowa Center for Health Effects of Environmental Contamination SEMINAR: The Annual Report on Carcinogens: A Study in Science, Policy and the Law

Dorothy A. Canter, Ph.D. Assistant to the Director National Toxicology Program U.S. Public Health Service Auditorium 1, Bowen Science Building Monday, October 30, 10:30 a.m.
Not the big one

Californians are well aware that this have made their home seismically prone. That awareness has been heightened with the recent, near-tragic, magnitude 7.1 quake on the Parkfield segment of the San Andreas Fault near San Luis Obispo. The quake, which struck early this morning near Coalinga, was the kind of launch NASA would like us to believe is routine. The source of the shock is located near a number of faults in the area, including the San Andreas Fault, which is one of the most seismically active faults in the world.

The quake, which struck at about 1:04 a.m. local time, was felt as far away as San Francisco and Los Angeles. It was the strongest earthquake to hit the region in more than a decade.

The US Geological Survey (USGS) estimated the magnitude of the quake at 6.1, with a depth of about 50 kilometers. The shaking was strong enough to cause minor damage to buildings and other structures in the area.

No major injuries or deaths were reported, but there were reports of aftershocks. The USGS issued a statement saying that the area is on the verge of a major earthquake, and that residents should be prepared for more shaking.

The quake comes just months after a major earthquake in Japan, which killed more than 15,000 people and caused massive damage. The earthquake also triggered a massive tsunami, which killed more than 200,000 people in the region.

In California, the state has a long history of earthquakes, with the most notable being the 1906 San Francisco earthquake, which killed more than 3,000 people.

The quake also comes days after the release of a report from the United Nations that said that the world is facing a major environmental crisis, with the need to reduce greenhouse gas emissions to prevent global warming.

The USGS said that the earthquake was caused by the movement of the Pacific plate relative to the North American plate. The movement has been building up pressure in the area for years, and the earthquake was a result of that pressure.

The quake is also a reminder of the importance of preparedness, and the need for the state to continue to invest in earthquake preparedness programs.

In California, the state has a long history of earthquakes, with the most notable being the 1906 San Francisco earthquake, which killed more than 3,000 people.

The earthquake also comes days after the release of a report from the United Nations that said that the world is facing a major environmental crisis, with the need to reduce greenhouse gas emissions to prevent global warming.

The earthquake was caused by the movement of the Pacific plate relative to the North American plate. The movement has been building up pressure in the area for years, and the earthquake was a result of that pressure.

The earthquake is also a reminder of the importance of preparedness, and the need for the state to continue to invest in earthquake preparedness programs.

The USGS said that the area is on the verge of a major earthquake, and that residents should be prepared for more shaking.

The earthquake comes just months after a major earthquake in Japan, which killed more than 15,000 people and caused massive damage. The earthquake also triggered a massive tsunami, which killed more than 200,000 people in the region.

Capital-gains cut wins support

The key bill between the two chambers is whether to change the federal government's current policy of offering a capital-gains tax break to Americans who sell their homes.

Senator Bill Roth (D-Del.) introduced the bill last week under the auspices of the National Association of Real Estate Studies and the National Association of Realtors. The bill requires members of Congress to come to a vote on the measure within 45 days.

The bill passed unanimously in the Senate, but the House was divided. The bill is expected to be heard in the Senate this week.

Three to six inches of snow fell in much of the state on Monday, causing power outages to more than 175,000 customers in Ohio, Indiana and Kentucky.

Schools were closed in much of the state as 3 to 5 inches of snow was reported in southwest Ohio. The snow that fell on Monday is expected to be restored by Thursday night.

Trees in autumnal technicolor of crimson and gold were turned suddenly white whereas the earlier snowfall on record for many days.

The snow that passed through the state was expected to bring widespread snow accumulation and hazardous travel conditions.

Iowa-Michigan should provide fireworks

Elliott Anderson

The Daily Iowan

Early Iowa-Michigan games have been huge, but this one will be exceptional. Thekentucky teams have been on fire when the Iowa-Michigan football game has been played, and this one is no exception. The Hawkeyes and Wolverines have been so evenly matched that even the most casual fan can see the potential for a great game.

The Iowa-Michigan rivalry has been intense for decades, with each team trying to prove they are better than the other. This year, both teams are on fire and ready to go head-to-head.

Flag football close to crowning champs

Jay Nafele
The Daily Iowa

Last weekend saw the flag football season get close to potential championships in both of its divisions along with the movement of equipment and poolaggi.

In the coed independent division, the Iowa City West Cyclones defeated Iowa City High to improve to 1-0 on the season. Blue Valley West and Valley High were the only undefeated teams this weekend.

In the coed recreational division, Cedar Rapids Jefferson defeated Cedar Rapids Washington to improve to 1-0 on the season. The only other undefeated team this weekend was Iowa City High.

The weekend saw numerous teams advance in both divisions, setting up exciting matchups in the final weeks of the regular season.

Intramurals

As usual, last week was the final week of intramural volleyball. The Iowa City West Cyclones won the boys' championship and the Iowa City High Little HAWKS! won the girls' championship.

Walden suspends Shudak

AMES, Iowa (AP) — Iowa State junior place-kicker Jeff Shudak has been suspended for two games for violation of team rules, football coach Gary sprinted Shudak and Matt and Maher starting off with 14-0.

Walden would not elaborate on the reason for the suspension.

This season, Shudak has made 3 of 3 extra-point attempts and has made 1 of 3 field-goal attempts, all of which went in at least 90 yards. On Saturday, he kicked a 54-yard field goal in the Cyclones' 55-11 loss to Colorado State.

The Cyclones' leading scorer on the Big Four in 1987 and missed the team in the nation in Iowa-IA.

In that year, he set a school record for field goals made during a season, when he hit 29 of 35 attempts.

The 39-year-old married football player established the school mark in a game at a Cyclone bowl in a season.

Sports Editor Bryce Miller continues his series on the first 100 years of Iowa football. Part four examines the 1956 and 1958 Rose Bowl teams under coach Forest Evashevski.

One of the proudest traditions at the University is the annual homecoming game. There are lots of events & people that lend to the festivities going on outside Kinnick Stadium. Michigan receiver Greg McMurtry battled to fill the shoes of former standout Anthony Carter. He was Boston’s No. 1 pick in the 1986 pro-baseball draft, but opted to go to Michigan. Although Iowa football games are synonymous with tailgating, the consensus is that activity has tamed in recent years. But tailgating is still very much a part of Hawkeye football.

Although Iowa football games are synonymous with tailgating, the consensus is that activity has tamed in recent years. But tailgating is still very much a part of Hawkeye football.

Michigan receiver Greg McMurtry battled to fill the shoes of former standout Anthony Carter. He was Boston's No.1 pick in the 1986 pro-baseball draft, but opted to go to Michigan.
Eddie ball string went all the way back to the 1939 Ironmen period, Iowa football had seen its greatest learning experiences, but they weren't spearheaded by a knight in shining armor who rode in to save a desperate program just in the nick of time. The resurrection would come from within, from a former Michigan player who had worked with the Hawkeyes through the worst of times — and soon to be the best of times.

Forest Evashevski took over the Iowa post before the 1952 season. The former athletic and academic standout was the senior class president when he attended Michigan.

He replaced Leonard Raffensperger, who suffered through a two-year mark of 5-10-3 in 1950 and 1951.

"Playing under Evashevski was one of the greatest learning experiences of my life," 1959 All-American defensive end Don Norton said. "He is a strong-willed man, a great figure to follow after and a very skilled motivator."

The earliest Evashevski years were relatively unremarkable. In his first season, Ery won one game at home and one on the road, before finishing 2-7. The next two seasons though, the Hawkeyes would register half of the winning records in that 16-year period.

But in 1956, it all came together.

Iowa lined up behind quarterback Kenny Ploen in the season opener at Bloomington, Ind., against the Hoosiers. The new wrinkle that Ery had added to the Hawkeye offense was the Winged-T, a formation that offered defenses a new look and was designed to highlight the Iowa running game.

But the offense proved beneficial to all facets of the Iowa offense, gaining 242 yards on the ground and 240 through the air in the 27-0 pasting at Memorial Stadium.

The second game of that season of rejuvenation, ironically, would be a preview of the Jan. 1, 1958, Rose Bowl game. Oregon State came to Iowa City and got used to the accommodations — fast.

The Beavers ran out to a 13-0 lead going into the final quarter. Ploen, the team leader, left the contest injured and sophomore Randy Duncan came in.

The Hawkeyes rallied with two touchdowns in the final stanza, including the game winner, a 33-yard pass from Duncan to Jim Gibbons. The conversion allowed Iowa to escape, 14-13.

Evashevski's team won the next three: Wisconsin (13-7), Hawaii (34-0) and Purdue (21-20). The only loss of the '56 season came at the hands of Evashevski's alma mater, Michigan, 17-14 in Iowa City.

The team went on to capture the rest of the games in 1956, setting up the rematch with Oregon State, the Pac-10 champion, in the biggest bowl game of them all.

The Big Ten had a reputation dominating the annual event, winning 12 of the last 13. Iowa was ranked third in the country and needed no inspiration, but the Hawkeyes got some anyway.

Calvin Jones, an All-American who played for Iowa in 1953, '54 and '55, was killed in an airplane crash in British Columbia just weeks before the Rose Bowl.

Jones, the only Iowa player to have his number retired besides Heisman Trophy winner Nile Kinnick, was certainly revered and deeply missed.

Despite the thrilling comeback over the Beavers in the second game of the season, Oregon State couldn't provide much of a game on the first day of 1957.

Evashevski, voted National Coach of the Year at the close of the season, led his team to a 35-19 win. After the game, he told a reporter from the Des Moines Register that "I can't wait to get back home and roll in that rich Iowa dirt."

In 1957, the Hawkeyes were without Big Ten Player of the Year, Kenny Ploen, but Duncan had proved that he was ready to step in at a moments notice. Duncan marched Iowa to a 7-1-1 season with a 21-21 tie with Michigan and a 17-13 loss to Ohio State.

The loss to the Buckeyes eliminated the Hawkeyes from the conference title and a shot at their second-consecutive Rose Bowl.

But there would be another chance in the Evashevski era. An 8-1-1 record would guarantee the Hawkeyes a spot in the 1959 Rose Bowl against California. In that season, Iowa tied Air Force 13-13 in the second game of the year, but bounced back, losing a 38-28 to Ohio State after clinching the conference title.

Before the season-opening game with Texas Christian University at Iowa City, Evashevski hadn't had that kind of confidence in his team.

"Three or four days before we met TCU," Norton said, "it had been raining hard, so we practiced on the old Finkbine Golf Course, like we used to do when it was like that."

Homecoming provides plenty off the field

Kerry Anderson
The Daily Iowan

Yes, it’s that time of year again. The time of year when thousands of alumni flock to Iowa City for a weekend of f’s — fun, frolic, festivities and football. The time of year when the vibrant seasonal transformation to fall isn’t the only obvious change in the campus atmosphere. In many respects, it’s a time when things come full circle and old meets new.

How fitting that this year’s Homecoming theme would be “Black and Gold for Young and Old.”

Five thousand Iowa fans attended the first Homecoming football game on Nov. 23, 1912, which is a far cry from the 67,700-plus that will pack Kinnick Stadium Saturday for the 2:30 p.m. game with Michigan.

And, to accommodate fans, alumni, students, and community of Iowa City, the University of Iowa is going all-out this year to try and make the 1989 celebration one of the school’s best ever.

One of the persons behind the scenes of the 1989 Homecoming festivities is director Paul Gibbins, who says one of the most important objectives facing the Homecoming organizers is how to get people more involved.

“We’ve got a lot of newer events this year in an effort to get back some of the spirit that we feel has been lacking here for awhile,” said Gibbins. “(The spirit) has been pretty good in the past, but the students really haven’t had to get much involved with Homecoming. It’s just been a parade and a football game.”

Gibbins said his committee has added certain events all rolled into what he calls the “sweepstakes” to enhance Homecoming festivities and to give students and the Iowa City community an opportunity to participate.

“Homecoming is more than just the game,” Gibbins said.

“We work with the community as well as other students to make Homecoming a success.

“Well over 100 businesses advertise with us and devote their time. We even have a contractor that makes our annual buttons for free. It’s a real diverse group that helps us out.”

The schedule of events that highlight Homecoming 1989 take up a full weekend, from Sunday, Oct. 15, to the following Sunday, Oct. 22. The following is a list of this weekends events that at are open to the public:

FRIDAY, OCT. 20
- 6:30 a.m. — I Club breakfast, Highlander Inn, Iowa City.
- 12:00-1:00 p.m. — Homecoming Entertainment, Old Capitol.
- 12:00-1:00 p.m. — Wheelroom Entertainment, IMU.
- 6:15 p.m. — Parade, Downtown Iowa City.
- 7:30 p.m. — Fireworks, IMU Riverbank.
- 8:30-11:30 p.m. — IMU Open House with tours, puppet shows, a magician and more.

SATURDAY, OCT. 21
- 8:00 a.m. — Head Race Style Event — Iowa River.
- 8:30 a.m. — Lawn Display Contest Judging
- 2:30 p.m. — Iowa vs. Michigan football game, Kinnick Stadium.
- 8:00 p.m.-12:00 a.m. — Oktoberfest, Main Ballroom, IMU.
- 8:30 p.m.-12:30 a.m. — Iowa Memorial Union Big Band Dance ’89.

SUNDAY, OCT. 22
- 10:00 a.m.-5:00 p.m. — Thieve’s Market, IMU Main Lounge.

This year’s Homecoming is especially significant since 1989 marks the 100th year of Iowa football. And Iowa coach Hayden Fry says the century mark, along with the Hawkeyes’ record in recent Homecoming games, would be an extra incentive for his team to play well in this year’s game with the Michigan Wolverines.

“Without question, the 1989 football season has special meaning for the Iowa football staff and team,” Fry said. “We hope to add to our nine-game winning streak in Homecoming contests with a win Saturday versus Michigan.”

Before the Hawkeyes’ current nine-game win streak under Fry, Iowa had lost eight out of its last ten Homecoming games.

Iowa is 0-2 against the Wolverines in Homecoming matchups, with Michigan defeating Iowa 21-0 in 1951, and 17-14 in 1956. Iowa’s overall Homecoming record stands at 38-34-5.

But Fry has never faced Michigan in a Homecoming game and, judging by the way the Hawks have played Bo Schiebel’s team in recent years, anything can happen when the two rivals clash Saturday at Kinnick Stadium.

Wolverine Profile: Greg McMurtry

Wolverines' talented receiver tries to fill the shoes of legendary Michigan pass catcher.

Adam Benson & Erica Weiland
The Daily Iowan

Number one.
That is a position that Michigan wide receiver Greg McMurtry has been familiar with since 1986, when he signed to play football at Michigan.

That was also the year that McMurtry almost gave up a promising college gridiron career for a professional one. Receiver Greg McMurtry has been declined the offer so he could catch.

McMurtry is the leading wide receiver for a Michigan team that was ranked by many as No. 1 at the beginning of the season.

He has had 16 receptions for 286 yards and 5 touchdowns this season.

He has had 16 receptions for 286 yards this season, averaging 17.9 yards per reception and 57.2 yards per game.

The Wolverines' longest pass of the season was a 49-yard Elvis Grbac launch to McMurtry against Maryland.

But along with the glory of being a national power, there are also some great expectations. That is especially the case when stepping into the position and jersey of a Michigan legend, as McMurtry did when he became the first player to wear the maize "1" since Anthony Carter.

But McMurtry is unphased about playing in the shadow of A.C. "I'm not uncomfortable with that comparison," he said. "I knew when I took the number what Anthony had done and what people would expect, I accept that as a sort of challenge."

Chris Gaiters, the Minnesota wide receiver who made third-team All-American last season, shrugged off suggestions that McMurtry could be something of a disappointment.

"Greg McMurtry is an all-around receiver," Gaiters said. "He can block, catch and run with the ball afterwards. I'm sure he can meet any expectations they have for him."

Ohio State coach John Cooper added, "We played against him three years ago in the Rose Bowl (when Cooper coached Arizona State), and he was a young pup then. Now he has experience. He and John Kolesar (1985-88 Michigan letterwinner who was drafted by the Buffalo Bills) were two of the better wide receivers in the country last year."

Most agree that McMurtry has Carter-like ability, but some would say he has not had the opportunity to show it.

"Greg has a tremendous amount of talent, and it is a shame that he is not showcased more," Iowa linebacker Brad Quast said. "He is a fine athlete and a great person."

Quast not only knows McMurtry from playing against him, but also met him on recruiting trips to Iowa, Michigan and UCLA in which they were together.

While McMurtry's statistics of 86 receptions, 1,738 yards and 10 touchdown passes put him in sixth place on the Michigan all-time pass reception list and third on the total-yards-gained list, they by no means threaten Carter's career marks of 161 receptions for 3,076 yards and 37 touchdowns.

But it must be taken into account that Carter was Michigan's only major threat during his Wolverine years. McMurtry has shared time with Ken Higgins, Chris Calloway, Paul Jokisch and John Kolesar.

McMurtry may never be Michigan's finest receiver, but he is the big-play weapon in Michigan's finest group of receivers. Even with a talented receiver like Kolesar, McMurtry has, over the past three years, compiled a 20.7 yards per reception average, better than Carter's 19.1.

McMurtry said he doesn't worry about being the team star, but he recognizes his contributions.

"I know coming in, before I set foot on this campus, that Michigan was that type of program," he said. "They don't go out and showcase one person. The people who know football, and know it well, know when somebody's doing a good job, even when he's not getting all the publicity that he should be."

"Those are the people that matter to me. The average fan can say what he wants."

Hawkeye Profile: Matt Ruhland

The ‘other’ Matt anchors opposite side of ball

“I don’t think I had many goals set at first; just to play well and help the team win. I just kept getting better every game. I’ve been working with a lot of effort, and I’ve been trying to do things right.”

—Matt Ruhland

Erica Wieland
The Daily Iowan

Most Iowa football fans recognize the name Matt Rodgers.

But how many of those same fans know of another Matt that is making news for the Hawkeyes in 1989 — Matt Ruhland? Unless they are well-versed in Iowa defense, they might have missed him.

Nevertheless, in the shadow of the well-publicized offensive players, Ruhland, the Hawkeyes’ No. 1 left tackle, has been piling up some top-notch individual statistics.

He’s currently second in the Big Ten in tackles for loss with 11 for (-46) yards. He follows Illinois’ Moe Gardner, who has racked up 13 for (-58) yards.

He is also tied with Gardner for five (-29) yards; and is tied with six others for fumbles recovered with two for the season.

But even with those stats, Ruhland doesn’t get as much publicity as the quarterbacks, running backs and receivers. That isn’t a fact that bothers him much.

“I think the fans and public just see them the most,” the 6-foot-5, 273-pound junior said. “They’re the people that make a big play, like a touchdown, or they throw for a touchdown. That’s what people see. They deserve all the credit they get because it takes a lot of skill to do what they’re doing.”

Ruhland added that the linebackers, both offense and defense, do receive some attention. He illustrated his point with the words of Iowa running back Nick Bell after Bell ran for 217 yards against Wisconsin.

“The first comment Nick had for the press (after the game) was ‘I have to thank my offensive line. They did a great job,’” Ruhland said. “That’s the best thing he could have said. The offensive line, I know, just loved that. That’s the kind of recognition they want.

“Your performance on game day is the main thing that gets you recognition,” he continued. “If you get some sacks or some tackles for loss, or make some great plays, it helps. Then people recognize you for that. But as long as the team keeps winning, I don’t think it really matters.”

The job of a defensive lineman tends to be more team-oriented. And Ruhland is quick to point out that fellow linemen Jeff Koeppe and Jim Johnson, along with the Iowa defense as a whole, has played a significant part in the individual success he has attained.

“It takes a lot of teamwork,” Ruhland said. “Jeff and Jim and myself are three best friends and that helps us as far as being part of a team and working with the other guys, too.

“The defensive players are a good bunch of guys, and it’s fun working with them. That makes our team closer when we all get along with each other.”

Ruhland also said that although spending time together off the field can help, the real relationship between the players is developed on the field.

“You do things together, but it’s not so much off the field,” he said. “When you get on the field, you’re closer. You work together and you try to pump each other up, getting ready for a play.

“If someone has a breakdown in a game or something, you tell him not to worry about it and get him on back in the next play. It takes everyone to do that, and that’s what makes things work out better.

“With all his accomplishments, Ruhland has cause to be proud. But he tends to be more modest than arrogant.

“I have accomplished, I guess, more than what I thought I was going to so far,” the Hilbert, Wis., native said. “I just want to get better the rest of these games.”

Ruhland is seeing more playing time this season than in the past.

After redshirting in 1987, he played in seven games last year, starting against Ohio State, Minnesota, and North Carolina State.

But despite missing six-consecutive midseason games due to an injury, Ruhland managed to tally 33 tackles, 20 of which were in the games he started.

He also found opportunities to knock down two pass in the seven games he played.

Because of the lack of playing time last season, Ruhland said he wasn’t sure what this year would present. But he said he is getting more accustomed to it now.

“I don’t think I had many goals set at first; just to play well and help the team win,” Ruhland said. “I just kept getting better every game. I’ve been working with a lot of effort, and I’ve been trying to do things right. I think that’s what’s been helping me, trying to get things done right. So far it’s really been helping my performance.

“Now I just look to continue doing my best. I’d like to get the chance to play more after the season, in a bowl game or something. But that’s far off. Now we just have to worry about the games and take one game at a time.”

Iowa coach Hayden Fry said that his team must prepare for two Michigan quarterbacks—redshirt freshman Elvis Grbac, and senior Michael Taylor. Grbac is described as a classic dropback passer, while Taylor is more adept at the option. The Wolverine offense, which utilizes both the Pro set and the "F" formation, also has a talented running back in junior Tony Boles, who gained more than 1,000 yards last season and became the first Michigan back to gain 100 yards in 1989 last week against Michigan State.

The Michigan defense is traditionally a major force to be reckoned with, and is currently ranked second in the Big Ten behind Illinois. The 3-4 scheme used by Wolverine coach Bo Schembechler has not allowed a rushing touchdown since Michigan's second game against UCLA, Sept. 23.

Michigan Wolverines

Highly ranked Michigan could rain on big day

Bryce Miller
The Daily Iowan

The fifth-ranked Michigan Wolverines come to Kinnick Stadium Saturday with a 4-1 record overall and 2-0 in the Big Ten. Given the preseason nod by many publications as one of the top contenders for the national championship, coach Bo Schembechler seems to have assembled a team that could realize that goal.

Michigan's only loss of the year came to top-ranked and unbeaten Notre Dame, 24-19 at Ann Arbor, Mich.

Iowa hosts the Wolverines in a 2:30 p.m. kickoff at Kinnick Stadium. The game is being telecast by ABC to 80 percent of the country.

The Wolverines are tied with Illinois and Minnesota for the lead in the Big Ten, while the Hawkeyes are bunched with three other teams at 1-1.

Iowa coach Hayden Fry knows that Michigan has another strong team this season.

"It would be foolish thinking or dreaming to think that we're on the same level as Michigan," Fry said Tuesday at his weekly press conference. "They win, they win big, they're extremely well coached, play great defense and are more diversified on offense."

That can be attributed to the switches at the quarterback position. The Wolverines originally entered the season with senior Demetrious Brown in the number-one position before he was declared ineligible.

Fellow senior Michael Taylor has been in big games before, but has been out in recent weeks with a back injury suffered in the season opener against Notre Dame. Sophomore Elvis Grbac has taken over as the starter, averaging 126.6 yards of total offense per game.

His efforts helped rally the Wolverines in a 24-23 come-from-behind win over U.C.L.A. at the Rose Bowl in Pasadena, Sept. 23.

Now, Taylor is healthy, and Schembechler isn't saying who will start or who will play on Saturday.

"I'm positive in my mind that he'll play both," Fry said. "It's like getting ready for two different offensive teams. Taylor's got different weapons. Both are excellent passers, but Taylor's a better runner and runs the option.

"It doesn't really matter because you're not going to start for Michigan unless you're a winner."

The Wolverines will be without starting linebacker J.J. Grant because of a knee injury sustained in the final drive of last week's 10-7 win over Michigan State.

Schembechler said senior John Milligan will fill in for Grant, who tied for the team lead with 77 tackles in 1988-89.

Even without Grant, Iowa quarterback Matt Rodgers still hasn't lost his appreciation for the talents of the rest of the Michigan defense.

"The Michigan defense runs around a lot," Rodgers said. "They do a lot of different things out there. We might have to audible a lot this week as in previous weeks.

"I'm getting a hold of it pretty well, it's not as hard as it was in the first three games."

The Michigan coach said that although Iowa has had ups and downs thus far, he still isn't giving up the notion that Saturday's 41st meeting between the two schools will be competitive.

"They're a young team," Schembechler said. "But that young kid, Rodgers at quarterback has suddenly developed. And they have a powerful stable of running backs including (Nick) Bell, who ran for over 200 yards last week...

Bell became only the fifth Hawkeye in the school's history to go over 200 yards in a single game, with 217 against Wisconsin at Madison.

The junior from Las Vegas had three touchdowns, including a 13-yard reception from Rodgers, in Iowa's 31-24 win over the Badgers.

The Wolverines lead the overall series 29-7-4 and the series in Iowa City, 16-5-4.

The tie came last year, 17-17, when Michigan had the ball inside the Iowa five-yard line in the final minutes, but fumbled, sealing the finish.

This season, however, Fry said it might take some of his famous "exotics" to surprise the Wolverines.

"We might have to add a few wrinkles," Fry said.

Michigan is ready — for whatever Fry might try.

Running the option

Michigan senior quarterback Michael Taylor searches for running room while trying to avoid Iowa defensive end Tyrone Barnett in last year's contest between Iowa and Michigan at Kinnick Stadium. Taylor is coming off an injury, but will probably see action against the Hawks Saturday.

Pregame Special Report: Tailgating

Tailgating continues to hold allure for thousands of fans, but the ritual has tamed

Rick Gabriel
The Daily Iowan

No matter who the opponent is, no matter what kind of year Iowa is having, no matter what the weather is; Hawkeye fans are always ready for a good tailgate party.

"A good tailgate party makes the game fun no matter what the circumstances are," said Iowa junior Marc Gaber.

The tailgate party has long been a grand event to prepare the Hawkeyes for a home game fun no matter what the year; no matter what the weather is.

"You can feel the electricity in the air, it's incredible," said Chris Kleinmeyer, owner of the Melrose Market. "You look out in the street and all you see is people."

Kleinmeyer said he has almost 75 feet in front of his store in which he sets tables up each home football Saturday to sell varieties of food, pop and beer.

"We have to start at 4:30 a.m. every Saturday to prepare for the tailgaters," he added. "On a normal Saturday we employ five people, but for football Saturdays we have to bring in about 15 more. We go through about 750 bratwurst, 300 turkey sandwiches and lots of beer and pop."

Kleinmeyer is in his second football season as store owner and said that he noticed that this year's crowds are a little more sedate. He attributed this mellowing of the usually rambunctious game goers to the recent stiffening of the alcohol regulations.

Bill Fuhrmeister, Director of University Security, said he has been pleased with this year's crowds. He said that there have only been four arrests, all alcohol related, through the first two games.

Fuhrmeister said that knowledge of the regulations helps to create a more pleasant atmosphere for all parties.

"There are no kegs allowed, no open bars and no large sums, like tubs, of alcoholic beverages," he said.

Gaber also noticed these changes and agreed with Kleinmeyer on the probable reasons.

"It's become a lot less rowdy place in the last couple years," Gaber said. "I think because they have become strict with the booze, not allowing kegs in the parking lots or any alcohol in the stadium."

Fans shouldn't have to worry about even stricter regulations in the near future, though.

"At this time, we feel we're going in the right direction," Fuhrmeister said. "We just need to sophisticate what we have right now. We want the people to have a good time, but at the same time be responsible and considerate of those around them."

One place extremely vulnerable to rude partiers is at the residences near the tailgate areas. But, surprisingly, very few problems arise.

"They (tailgaters) have really been quite considerate," said a woman who lives on Melrose Ave., right across from the Field House parking lot.

"Sometimes they stay a little late, past 6:30 (p.m.), but they haven't caused any problems yet."

"I have three young kids, all under four, who like to watch things. We don't go to the games, but all the activity is pretty exciting."

Gaber said that he wasn't surprised that the tailgating fans don't give those who live in the area any hassle.

"I think that we're all responsible enough to respect the people that live around the stadium," he said. "I think any incidents that would occur could have a bad effect on the whole situation, bring stricter rules, so I hope everyone would have the common sense to behave."

Tailgaters provide all people of all ages a chance to have a good time and lengthen what already will be a full day. They give people a chance to get enthusiastic about the football game and to meet many new people, something Gaber said he tries to take advantage of.

"I like to try to hit as many different tailgate parties as possible," he said. "Because of the condition most people are in, you meet a lot of really nice people."

"Everybody's willing to share the food and beer. You can talk to anyone you want to. It really can you psyched for the game, too."

Hawkeye Profile: Matt Rodgers

East Coast native learns to love Midwest

Erica Weiland
The Daily Iowan

It may seem strange that someone like Iowa quarterback Matt Rodgers, who followed Boston College football growing up, would decide to go through his playing days in the midwest.

And Rodgers himself didn’t expect to be here.

“I just visited out here because (my dad) came here,” said Rodgers, whose father, Jimmy, lettered in basketball for the Hawkeyes from 1963 to 1965. “I had no idea I’d go here. I just fell in love with the place and the people here. And that’s why I came here.”

Now, except for the fact that many of his friends don’t know what Iowa is like, Rodgers said he has no regrets.

“Iowa is a great college campus,” the native from Walpole, Mass., said. “I tell all my friends back home; they have no idea. On the East Coast, there are a lot of nice schools, but they have no idea how nice the people out here are. Until they come out here, they’ll never know.

“Some of my friends have been out here and they just love it too. They wish they were out here with me. People don’t really know how nice it is.”

As well as Rodgers is adjusting to life at Iowa, Hawkeye football fans are becoming rather accustomed to him too.

So far this season, he has completed 72 of 131 passes with six touchdowns for a 54.96 completion percentage. That statistic ranks him sixth on the Big Ten passing-efficiency standing.

Rodgers’ passing, along with his rushing totals, 32 carries for 83 yards, put him in second place in the league for total offense.

Overall, he has racked up 941 yards and seven touchdowns on 163 plays. He averages 5.7 yards per play and 188.2 yards per game.

And that is coming from a high school player who only threw the ball.

But Rodgers said that the opportunity to try new things and the way the Hawkeyes have treated their former quarterbacks was also what enticed him.

“Coming out of high school, it was just drop back and throw; I never even ran the ball,” Rodgers said. “It’s definitely one of the reasons I chose Iowa. They believe in their quarterbacks.

“Iowa is a great college campus. I tell all my friends back home; they have no idea. On the East Coast, there are a lot of nice schools, but they have no idea how nice the people out here are.”

-Matt Rodgers

And it’s every player’s dream to go pro, and they’ve produced a lot of pro quarterbacks around here. That was important in my decision.”

Rodgers saw his first playing time this season in Iowa’s opener against Oregon.

Senior Tom Poholsky was the starting quarterback for the Hawkeyes, but after only completing eight of 19 attempted passes for 70 yards, he was replaced by Rodgers.

Rodgers, however, was quick to give some credit to his teammate, saying that Poholsky just had a bad day.

“Tom had an off day, that’s all,” Rodgers said after that game. “He was reading the right receivers to throw to, but just didn’t get it there. That’s not characteristic of Tom Poholsky at all. He’s a winner.”

Those words are characteristic of Rodgers. No matter how well he has been performing and whatever statistics he may be compiling, Rodgers always seems to remember a certain trait that his dad taught him — humility.

“Of course he taught me that,” the 6-foot-4, 205-pound sophomore said of his father, who is now the head coach of the Boston Celtics. “He’s a coach. He’s a dad, but he’s a coach as well. And he gives me a lot of advice.”

Following the season-opener, Rodgers has held onto his starting position through the Hawkeyes’ games against Iowa State, Tulsa, Michigan State and Wisconsin.

In his first start, against the Cyclones in Ames, Rodgers completed 20 of 33 passes for 276 yards and three touchdowns. Those statistics earned him some praise from Iowa coach Hayden Fry.

“...I was proud of Matt Rodgers,” Fry said on Sept. 23 after the Iowa State game. “He did an excellent job of reading the coverages. Twenty of 33 with three T.D. passes, I’ll take that any day.”

Since then, Fry has added, “Projected from his first start at Iowa State, Matt has certainly gotten off to a good start.”

In his most recent game, Iowa’s 31-24 win over the Badgers, Rodgers completed 10 of 24 attempts for 178 yards and one touchdown.

He also tallied five rushing attempts for 29 yards.

According to him, every day presents another opportunity to pick up something new.

“Being in that situation against Michigan State where we had to score and we didn’t, I learned from that,” Rodgers said. “Then we had to score against Wisconsin, and we moved it down there and did it as a team. Every day is a learning experience. It’s fun too but you have to learn everyday.”

Hawkeye Profile: John Derby

Derby waits for his turn on defense, gets time in on special teams

Kerry Anderson
The Daily Iowan

The Iowa kickoff team lines up for the opening boot in the Michigan State game Oct. 7. The kick is away and 11 Hawkeyes sprint down the field—hell bent for leather—to keep the return team from gaining any ground.

The Spartans’ deep man begins to return the ball, and...CRUNCH!!

Number 31 comes out of nowhere, like leading by example on Iowa’s special game to make a vicious tackle.

One area the 6-foot-2, 230-pound redshirt sophomore hasn’t had much experience in is as a regular on Iowa’s defense. But that’s understandable considering he backs up seasoned veterans Melvin Foster and all-Big Ten standout Brad Quast.

However, Derby said being able to watch the other two linebackers, especially Quast, has proved to be a valuable learning experience.

“I’ve been playing behind Brad and watching him and I think I’m starting to pick up some of the things that he does so well,” Derby said. “Brad has been here for so long and been through so many big games and everything, I just really look up to him.

“He’s the kind of guy you look at and say ‘wow, he came in right out of high school and started here.’” Derby said.

“That’s a big deal around here because it takes a while to get into this program.”

Derby did break into the lineup early this season, though, when he was called upon to take over for Quast, who was suffering from a slight muscle pull in his leg.

He started in the Oregon game on Sept. 16, and saw extensive action in the Iowa State contest the following week.

“I wasn’t as nervous as I thought I was going to be.” Derby said about his first Hawkeye start against Oregon. “I was a little nervous going into the game, but there’s so many good players surrounding you to help you out that after the first play, you just concentrate on the game and don’t worry about it.”

But maybe what helped Derby the most as far as becoming a better player was the year he took off as a redshirt his first year here.

Bill Brashier, Iowa’s defensive coordinator, felt the redshirt year was a chance for Derby to grow — both physically and mentally.

“He used the year to learn the system,” Brashier said. “Like all our players, he had the option to redshirt or not. I think he made a sound decision.”

Even though he admits that the year helped him, Derby still remembers how tough it was to be withheld from competition for a full year.

Patrolling the line

Iowa linebacker John Derby pursues a Michigan State player in the Hawkeyes’ 17-14 loss to the Spartans at Kinnick Stadium. The sophomore from Oconomowoc, Wis., has gained a name on special teams and, lately, has gotten more time on defense.

“Sure it was new to me,” he said. “It’s the first time that I ever had to sit.”

A high school all-American, Derby had the attention of all the college recruiters and was touted as one of the top college linebacking prospects in the country.

He was a Street & Smith’s and Parade first team all-American, Gatorade Wisconsin Player of the Year and two-time first team all state selection. In his senior year, Derby had 113 tackles, three interceptions and four caused fumbles.

Derby visited many schools while being recruited, including most of the teams from the Big Ten. He opted to attend Iowa.

“I looked at all the Big Ten schools,” he said, “but I was treated 100 percent better here. I liked Iowa’s type of defense.”

He liked Iowa’s people even more.

“I just loved the people around here when I came to visit,” Derby said. “Coach Fry is a great guy; all the coaches are great. All the players treat you like they really want you to come here.

“I went to an Iowa basketball game when they were ranked No. 1,” he said. “That’s when I realized how great the fans were here. The fans are unbelievable the way they back all the athletes around here. (Iowa) is just an unbelievable place to play.”

Derby accepts his present role for the Hawkeyes, still he insists that his main goal is to be an anchor for Iowa at linebacker.

“My goal is to become another great linebacker like they’ve had here in the past,” he said. “That was my goal to come here, start and become one of the best linebackers that has come out of here. I just hope it all works out.”
"We had only been practicing for about a half hour when Evy stopped the workout and told us we couldn't beat Coe College and sent us home.

"He really knew how to get a point across.' Iowa rolled to a 17-0 win over TCU.

In the 1959 Rose Bowl, the Hawkeyes won 38-12. Iowa received the Granlund Rice award, given to the mythical national champion by college football writers. And Duncan was named the Big Ten Player of the Year in 1958, just two seasons after Ploen.

"We knew damn well that we were the best team in the America," Norton said.
