Jones announced Thursday in Baghdad that he had asked Saddam to come to U.S. envoy James Jones for talks on Iraq.

Voter registration drive starts today on Pentacrest

By Kevin Foot

The Daily Iowan

Iowa State Senate Majority Leader Evan Chervenak will kick off this year’s drive at 11:30 a.m. today in the Union’s Senate Room.

Chervenak will introduce the statewide VOTER (Voluntary Organized Team Effort) Voter Registration Drive, an initiative that aims to help ensure voter turnout in Iowa.

The voter registration campaign is a critical part of our efforts to improve voter turnout. The drive will run from September 21 to October 10, and volunteers are expected to reach out to voters in all 99 counties.

Chervenak said that the drive is important because it will increase the number of registered voters, which is crucial for the democracy.

"The goal of this drive is to increase voter participation and ensure that every eligible voter has the opportunity to cast their vote," Chervenak said.

The drive will be supplemented by phone banks, door-to-door outreach, and social media campaigns.

In addition to Chervenak, the drive will be led by the Iowa Secretary of State, the Iowa Democratic Party, and the Iowa Republican Party.

"The Iowa Democratic Party is committed to increasing voter turnout, and we believe that the VOTER Voter Registration Drive is a key component of our efforts," said Iowa Democratic Party Chair Tom Offerman.

The drive will also be supported by the Iowa Republican Party, which has been working to increase voter participation for years.

"The Iowa Republican Party is committed to increasing voter turnout, and we believe that the VOTER Voter Registration Drive is a necessary part of our efforts," said Iowa Republican Party Chair Brad slater.

The campaign is expected to reach 250,000 voters in the first week alone.

Birnbach book provides inside look at universities

By Brian Stimpson

The Daily Iowan

Freshman Orientation Coordinator Lisa Birnbach's biannual "College Book" provides insight for incoming students. The book is released just before fall semester and comes out in June the following year. It is written from a college hangout with a lot of things that can't be seen in a classroom. It's kind of a weird mix of people who already attend the college, Birnbach said, "It's a weird mix of liberals, conservatives, minorities and students from all over the country." The book, which is written from a college hangout with a lot of things that can't be seen in a classroom, is based on interviews with freshmen and seniors at 18 colleges.

Should U.S. military be used in gulf? New poll shows Iowans evenly split

The Associated Press

DES MOINES — A new Iowa Poll shows Iowans evenly split over whether the American military should be used in the Gulf, with a margin of 79 to 1 percent that they would support using military force, and 45 percent of those surveyed said the force should be used against Iraq. By far the most-read part of the book will be the introduction to the sequal to her book, "New and Improved College Book."

In her book, "Lisa Birnbach's College Book," Birnbach talked about the ranking of favorite drinking games and favorite hangouts on campus. She explained that some readers like college administrators — they know what students have to say about their college or university. Birnbach writes in the book, "Don't let the college sex appeal fool you. People supply the term of convenience that may not really be characterized. It signals that they're giving serious thought to a topic or band.

Students, employers don’t connect on jobs

By Chris Petersen
The Daily Iowan

With 300 on-campus jobs still unfilled, one might think UI students aren’t interested in finding work.

But Cindy Seyler, assistant director of the Financial Aid Office, said she’s not sure if this is the case. Seyler and said she has been getting a steady flow of students interested in finding work, but this year’s it’s bigger than ever.

Although she thought there could be a number of reasons for the decline, Seyler said it probably stems from the fact that many students may be unfamiliar with the new job advertising system.

Employment opportunities are currently being advertised on Iowa Student Information Services (ISIS), an interactive computer system that offers off-campus, on-campus and alternative services as a job network. The program, called Adept, was implemented last February, a time when financial aid wasn’t being advertised.

Another reason for the decline could be the drop in UI enrollment. She added. But she said the past two years have included lack of students interested in finding work.

The students who are interested in finding work are those interested in the students, but they don’t seem to have jobs. Kory Ward, UI employee relations coordinator, said Seyler to discuss ways to address the problem.

"We’re trying to present three opportunities in a way that seems interesting," Ward said, "and maybe publicizing the shortage and trying to be more connected with businesses is the key.

Twelve employers representing the most problems in finding student employees are the College of Medicine and the Hospitals and Clinics.

Robert Bailey, director of student relations and development at the hospital, said the difficulty in finding student workers begins last year.

"The hospital advertised the decrease in student applications on lower reimbursement and more competition from local businesses," Bailey said.

Richard Schwartz, assistant in the dean of the College of Medicine, said that his office received no student applications during a recent six-week period. This is the first time this has happened.

"We’re not saying there’s an automatic shortage, he added. "We’re just seeing a problem finding students in many of our departments."

Bailey said, noting that the school has been "desperate" in finding students.

"The UI on-campus employers depend on students to fill the positions, said Bailey. Last year close to 1,100 students had jobs, earning a total of around $1.5 million.

Although these positions are essential to the UI, students also benefit from the employment. Students interested in attending the College of Medicine, the Student Employment Office, Career Hall, Room 215.

Harkin wants latest TAUKE TV ad pulled

By Mike Glover
The Associated Press

DES MOINES — Democratic Rep. Tom Harkin took to the television screen Monday to run an attack ad against his Republican challenger.

The Iowa law professor has been running the ad since last week, but the TV station pulled it from the air Monday night without commenting on why.

It’s unclear whether the station was acting on its own or under orders from the station’s parent company, which owns the TV station.

"It’s not clear whether the ad was pulled because of legal or other concerns," said Tom Harkin’s campaign manager, Bill Clinton.

"We’re not sure," he added, "but it seems likely that the station is not comfortable with the ad."

Liberal group opposes Souter nomination

WASHINGTON — Action on Thursday called for Senators to oppose the Supreme Court nomination of Robert H. Souter, a federal judge, adding to the list of judges that liberals say could limit civil rights and other programs. The American Civil Liberties Union called for a three-year moratorium on any court nominations, even those that might be favorable to the liberal position. There was also a call to consider abolishing the practice of nomination of judges, as favored by Senator Daniel Patrick Moynihan.

The ACLU said that Souter’s nomination would limit civil rights and other programs, including those that had been expanded in recent years. The group said the nomination was a result of the intense pressure on Republicans to nominate judges who would be more favorable to civil rights and other programs. The group also said that Souter’s nomination was a result of the intense pressure on Democrats to nominate judges who would be more favorable to civil rights and other programs.

New York archdiocese bans less-than-reverential drama

The Associated Press

New York's archdiocese on Friday threatened to sue any theater company that performs "The Collected Last Days of Jesus," a stage play that says the biblical narratives are no more than "myths." The archdiocese has filed a lawsuit against the Archdiocese of New York, which produces the play, and the Roman Catholic Archdiocese of Cincinnati, which is producing the same play in Cincinnati. The archdiocese's lawsuit claims that the play is a "blasphemous" and "blasphemous" version of the lives of Jesus and Mary Magdalene.

Novelist homes seek 'everyday surrealism'

The New York Times Book Review

"My House," the latest novel by William Gass, is a love story and a meditation on the nature of art, the vanity of expectations and the nature of the self. It is a book about the search for the true center of oneself, the true center of art, and the search for that center is the true challenge of life.

What do Jesus Helms and Brett Beemyn have in common? No, this is not a joke — although in a twisted way it’s kind of humorous.

Brett Beemyn is the man who recently filed a human rights lawsuit against the City of Iowa City over Campus Review because of a cartoon displayed in the Union. The cartoon was deemed “offensive,” and the ACLU decided to wage a-suit against Iowa City, saying “Brett’s right.”

In effect, Beemyn is the equivalent of former “America First” chairwoman Annita("

First, it is absolutely true that the Review’s display was “offensive, insinuating, and defaming” and also true that it “violates the [Beemyn’s] right to present images that others find offensive, insulting, and degrading.” And it was right.

Second, the claim that the display “injures” people is absurd as an excuse for removing a cartoon that might irk a few people out there. Anyone deserving enough to be moved by a cartoon is clearly in need of some inner psychological development, and it probably isn’t fair to blame the Review for the mentality of the mentally ill. In fact, if the Review can be used to incite violence against anyone, itself, its offi is trying to maintain order in a violent world.

Third, I do not believe that Beemyn’s argument is that it is always the right thing to take down any cartoon that “injures” people. Hence the argument seems like a quick way to avoid the hard work of trying to actually evaluate cartoons.

Therefore, you can’t blame Beemyn for having been right in saying that Review’s display was “offensive, insulting, and degrading.” And it was right.

Cystic fibrosis patients have new hope for cure

Scientists Thursday announced they have made major progress in treatment of cystic fibrosis through gene therapy. They have successfully fed a defect in cells from cystic fibrosis patients by using a normal gene.

The work carried the American Society for Microbiology, Dr. Greenberg said. But it also confirmed the safety of gene therapy, he said in an interview.

"We're not talking decades, we're talking years," he said.

WASHINGTON — The Senate Minority Leader Bob Dole has signaled he’s prepared to remove the cap on individual contributions to political action committees, which would give wealthy contributors yet another way to circumvent campaign finance laws. The move would likely increase the total amount of money that can be spent on elections, with wealthy donors able to give more money directly to candidates or indirectly through PACs.

concentrated Iraqi authorities still had to devise alternative ways to transmit the message to the American population through the American television stations. The problem seemed insoluble, until the advent of a new technique known as “injection.” The system was simple: the satellite beam was directed at a particular area of the country, and a self-contained transmitter was placed on a nearby building. The transmitter emitted a strong signal that could be picked up by the American television stations.

Reducing Keating’s bail

By E. Scott Reardon

The Associated Press

LOS ANGELES - The $8 million bail for Charles Keating Jr., a retired financier in the savings and loan industry, should be reduced because he is a broker and won’t flee criminal charges, his attorneys argued Wednesday.

The ex-private banker’s lawyers sought to have bail reduced by $7 million, to $1 million. The prosecution opposed any reduction, saying observers of the Keating investigation were numerous.

If his bail is reduced, Keating was to appear before a judge and be released on $1 million bond, to remain on house arrest.

The Immigration and Naturalization Service also would be notified to prevent Keating from leaving the country.

The Keating case involves the savings and loan industry’s collapse in 1988, and the investigation into the $890 million burial of S&Ls in Latin America.

S&Ls were insolvent and were reported to have dumped millions of dollars in Latin American currency. Some observers have speculated that the former S&L regulators accepted bribes.

McKeon's future with Padres uncertain

SAN DIEGO — Jack McKeon might be best known these days as the manager of the Texas Rangers, but he's also been a professor at the University of Florida, a minor league manager and a baseball writer. McKeon, who starred at Villanova before a successful coaching career, now finds himself in the midst of a rebuilding project.

The Padres have lost 10 of their last 14 games, and McKeon is under pressure to turn things around. He is scheduled to meet with team officials on Friday to discuss the team's performance this season.

McKeon said he is confident the team can turn things around, but he also acknowledged there is a need for improvements in certain areas.

McKeon has been with the Padres since 1988 and has seen the team go through some tough times. He has been praised for his management skills and ability to motivate players.

McKeon's job is secure for now, but the pressure is on for him to lead the Padres to success in the future. He knows he has a tough job ahead of him, but he is determined to make it work.

TOKYO — Changes in the International Olympic Committee are causing concern as they may have upset the men who formed it.

The break came from a watershed annual meeting Thursday, the year's final session. The pre-teen IOC was shown a view of itself that would have been unthinkable just a decade ago.

The latest major defection to the presidency, Juan Antonio Samaranch, when he showed a vision over sentiments and gave the centennial ceremony in 1992 almost a decade.

It showed that, while it's now well insulated from the 1992 Games, it handled a rare defeat to its president, Juan Antonio Samaranch, of Spain.

The shock was showing a sense of the IOC, Japan, and leave the American South with a sense of the new IOC, now that it's become an unchallenged position as a world force.

Hammer turns the mutha out

house that rocks for only 90 minutes? That was the theme of last night's battle of the bands held at the State. Regardless of the rules, it was clear that the Hammer had become the victor. After all, Hammer is used to showing up with its fans having had a few drinks, as opposed to just a few hours before the concert begins.

On Thursday night, Hammer arrived at the State around 8:00 p.m. looking like a group ofchedules had been cancelled due to bad weather. As the band arrived, they were met with cheers from the crowd who was already there.

The band played several songs from their album, including "Til the Cows Come Home," "The Last Day of Our Lives," and "I'm a Bullfighter." The crowd went wild as they played, and many people were seen dancing and singing along.

As the night went on, Hammer continued to wow the crowd with their energetic performance. They played several more songs, including "You Can't Do That on Stage Anymore," "Hot Tub," and "Locomotive." The crowd continued to dance and sing along as the band played, creating a lively atmosphere.

In the end, Hammer emerged as the winners of the battle of the bands, proving once again that they are one of the best bands in the area. Their performance was a testament to their skill and talent, and they truly put on a show that will be remembered for years to come.

Three bands – It's almost too much
by John Kanay

The Daily Iowan - Friday, September 21, 1990

The sights and sounds of Iowa City's downtown were alive with music and activity as three bands took the stage at the State on Thursday night.

The first band to take the stage was the student-run band, The Missing Seat. The band consists of four seniors: Greg Verheijen, Todd Rieke, Matt Garner, and Mike Patnode. They played an eclectic mix of rock, reggae, and funk.

The second band to perform was the student-run band, The Funky Monkees. The band is made up of five seniors: Kurt Goetches, Jeff Ayers, Brian Smalley, Mark Draughn, and Brian Kruis. They played a variety of rock and funk, including covers of classic rock songs.

The third and final band to play was the student-run band, The Arrows. The band is made up of four seniors: Rich Meier, Dave Wagoner, John Tull, and Tom Hull. They played a mix of rock and country, including covers of classic country songs.

The bands played on stage for over an hour and a half, with each band taking turns in the spotlight. The crowd was enthusiastic and active, with many people dancing and singing along.

Overall, it was a successful night of music. The bands did an excellent job of entertaining the crowd, and the atmosphere was lively and fun. It was a great way to end the week and get ready for the weekend.

Blaise down? Johnson doesn’t think so

"They say (Iowa State tailback Blaise Bryant) is not going to play," Iowa defensive tackle Jim Johnson said. "I don’t believe that at all. Bruised shoulder. Man, I’ve had bruised knees, bruised ankles, everything and I still find a way to make it out there Saturday.

"It’s just a matter of being tough enough and sucking it up and getting out there. He’s probably having flashbacks of the second half (of last year’s game)."

No pain, no gain
Iowa linebacker Melvin Foster about Iowa State freshman quarterback Bob Utter: "If he can maintain his confidence and his composure and read defenses all afternoon and know when a certain linebacker will be at a certain spot at a certain time, then more power to him. But it not, it’s going to be an awfully long afternoon for him."

"Are planning to make long afternoon?" a reporter asked.

"I certainly am.
"Do you think it will be a learning experience for the true freshman?"

"I think it will be a painful experience for the true freshman."

Surprise touchdown
Iowa quarterback Jim Hartlieb after Iowa’s win over Cincinnati: "I’ve been coming here for six or seven years now watching games, and I just dreamed about scoring. I never thought it would happen for me."

"When reporters questioned the status of Pedersen and Bryant: "It is with all my honesty and integrity that when I release an injury report, it is, in fact, the way I think it’s going to be. I do not play games with young people’s lives when they’re hurt. If a young man hurts himself on Thursday afternoon and I choose not to let you know about it, that’s my business."

Don’t be angry
Walden on last season’s game with the Hawkeyes: "Last year we said we didn’t have a good day. And they bring in a kid named Duckett who’s a freshman and all he does is run for 175 yards against us."

One thing that’s perfectly clear
Iowa State coach Jim Walden when reporters questioned the status of Pedersen and Bryant: "It is with all my honesty and integrity that when I release an injury report, it is, in fact, the way I think it’s going to be. I do not play games with young people’s lives when they’re hurt. If a young man hurts himself on Thursday afternoon and I choose not to let you know about it, that’s my business."

Don’t be angry
Walden on last season’s game with the Hawkeyes: "Last year we said we thought we had a chance and I understand that made them all mad down there. So maybe if I say we don’t have a chance, they won’t be so mad."

More motivated?
Iowa coach Hayden Fry on the injuries to Cyclone quarterback Chris Pedersen and tailback Blaise Bryant: "It may not necessarily take a lot of production from an Iowa State standpoint. We went into a ball game (last year) where the No. 1 running back and maybe the No. 2 running back from Michigan State were missing. And we were kind of licking our chops (that) we were going to have a good day. And they bring in a kid named Duckett who’s a freshman and all he does is run for 175 yards against us."

Rain or rain
Fry: "The long range projection is for rain Saturday. I would think it would favor us. Right now we don’t anticipate throwing the ball as much as Iowa State. I know what we’re going to do. We have a rain offense and if you go back and check the records, through the years when it’s raining or rain they don’t have a chance, they won’t be..."

Best friends?
Fry on Walden’s antics: "I probably get as much of a kick out of Jim as you guys do. You just have to know Jim, he’s got a very outgoing personality and he says exactly what he believes. If we’re ever going to see any tricks from Iowa State, we’ll see them this week. Onion kickoffs, throw-backs, you name it, because he’s that kind of fellow."

That’s just Jim. If you know Jim, you don’t get upset with him. I don’t. I think he’s funny. I don’t have any hard feelings, particularly if we keep winning."

Hanks changes character for final season

By Brian Gaul
The Daily Iowan

It was a strange reaction by Iowa cornerback Merton Hanks, one that seemed out of character.

With the score tied at seven in the second quarter of Iowa’s 63-10 rout of Cincinnati last Saturday, the senior defensive back intercepted a pass by Cincinnati quarterback Tom Andercon and returned it 23 yards to the Bearcats 24.

The Hawkeyes would score the go-ahead touchdown three plays later, but Hanks didn’t look excited. He simply got up from the tackle, congratulated the teammates who surrounded him and trotted back to the Iowa sideline — without fanfare.

It was an odd reaction from a man whose first three years as a Hawkeye have been filled with much with big celebrations as with big plays.

During those three years, Hanks developed a reputation for his on-field theatrics — jumping in the air after an interception or raising his hands to incite the crowd at a crucial point in the game.

Hanks called it enthusiasm, “having fun.” But others called it selfishness and showboating.

Hanks heard those criticisms, and they disturbed him.

“That aspect — you know, just having fun — I think people took it the wrong way,” he said. “A lot of people thought I was being a selfish, showboaty, ‘look at me’ type person. That’s not me.”

Merton Hanks

“I’m definitely involved with special teams,” he said. “I want the whole perception to go out. We’re a team here and there’s no person who’s better than anybody else.”

So, with some difficulty, Hanks held back after the interception.

“My first reaction (after the interception) was to hop up,” he said. “I really had to control myself. Some of my teammates were saying, ‘What are you doing, man?’ They were wondering why I didn’t celebrate.

“But in the end, I want to be known as a good defensive back who made his fair share of interceptions and did what he had to do to help his team win. If I have to eliminate that part of my personality while I’m playing that game, that’s just something I’ll have to do.”

Getting a “fair share of interceptions” is also something Hanks is emphasizing this season. The 6-foot-2, 180-pound defensive back, who has picked off only six passes in his first three seasons as a starter, said he wants to improve that statistic this year.

“I’m more focusing on going after the ball and catching it instead of batting it down,” Hanks said. “Hopefully, those totals will pile up and that will be a bonus as far as defensive play overall. I think it makes you a more aggressive. It’s a little harder to go after the ball then just to bat it down.”

But the other aspects of his game haven’t been lacking. The senior, who has started 37 of 38 Iowa games since his redshirt year, has made 202 tackles overall. Last year, Hanks recorded a team-leading 14 passes defended, which ranked him second in the Big Ten.

Hanks also blocked two kicks last season and has made a habit of that during his career. In the 1987 Holiday Bowl, he blocked a punt which was recovered by Iowa’s Jay Hess for touchdown and later preserved the Hawkeyes’ 20-19 victory over Wyoming by blocking a field goal with 48 seconds remaining.

Although the Dallas, Tex., native hasn’t blocked a kick since Iowa’s loss to Michigan State last season, he says there is a simple reason why.

“I think, at times, I get picked on to get blocked,” Hanks said. “But I’m definitely involved with special teams. I love special teams — it’s an integral part of the game. Hopefully, as the year progresses, I’ll be able to get a couple of kicks.”

The senior earned second team all-Big Ten honors from The Associated Press for his play last year, but Hanks said a lack of preseason attention this year has motivated him.

“I want to prove that I’m one of the better defensive backs in the country,” he said. “I thought as far as preseason was concerned, I was really overlooked. I’m just going out and trying to play the best that I can and just let that take care of itself.”

But Hanks’ teammates didn’t overlook him when they selected the team captains. Hanks joins defensive tackle Jim Johnson, guard Greg Aegerter and running back Tony Stewart as one of the Iowa co-captains.

“I always try to be a leader and bring my teammates with me as far as emotion, playing over our heads at times, whatever we have to do to win,” Hanks said. “I think that the fact that your teammates have given you that type of honor … entails more than just performing well on the field.”

According to his teammates, Hanks has been particularly helpful to the younger players in Iowa’s secondary.

“When you think of Merton Hanks, you think of a leader — on and off the field,” said junior safety Phil Bradley. “Especially off the field, he’s always willing to help you and talk to you. He’s a pleasure to work with.”

“(Hanks) ranks right up there with the best cornerbacks coming out of college,” said second-team cornerback Scott Plate, a redshirt freshman. “He gives us advice and shows us it’s one whole secondary — not just one man, but a group.”

Hanks said he doesn’t mind being a role model.

“Everyone — athletes especially — has to readjust when they first get here,” he said. “Any helpful hint you can give — on and off the field.”

Hawkeye Profile: Lew Montgomery

Montgomery cheered on as Iowa fullback

By Erica Weiland
The Daily Iowan

"Lew! Lew! Lew!"
Iowa fullback Lew Montgomery was confused. The Hawkeyes were stomping on Cincinnati, so why was the crowd booing them?

Then Iowa running back Tony Stewart filled him in on the situation: The crowd was yelling for Lew.

"It was a big surprise to me," Montgomery said. "I really didn't know what was going on. Tony and I were in the huddle and I was like, 'What's going on? What are they saying?' I thought they were booing at first, then (the Iowa players) said, 'No they're saying Lew, Lew, Lew.'"

"It really made me feel good. It made me play just that much harder and I appreciate the fans, showing that much support and having that much confidence in me."

Montgomery, who is from Waterloo, started his first game as a Hawkeye against the Bearcats last Saturday. And in the process of rushing for 45 yards on seven carries, the 6-foot, 212-pound sophomore became a crowd favorite.

Part of that could be because he is an Iowa native. At Waterloo East High School, Montgomery was named USA Today state Player of the Year, Super Prep honorable mention all-American on offense and defense, two-time USA Today honorable mention all-American, Big Eight conference MVP and first-team all-state.

And because he is from the Hawkeye state, this weekend's matchup with Iowa State means a lot to him.

"I'm a native of Iowa, playing for the University of Iowa is really an exciting thing for me," Montgomery said. "And Iowa and Iowa State for years been battling. It's a big game for us, and we're going to go out and play smart football."

(Iowa State) recruited me but I didn't even take a visit to them because I've always wanted to be a Hawkeye. I think their staff got a little upset at first when I told them I was going to Iowa but I think it was a good decision for me."

Hawkeye coach Hayden Fry also seems pleased with Montgomery's choice, and said that he appreciates the fullback's versatility in the backfield.

"The best thing about Lew Montgomery is that he's diversified," Fry said. "He's not a 'pure' fullback type. He's got excellent hands as a receiver, and he's got breakaway speed like a running back if he clears the line of scrimmage."

"Most fullbacks are thought of as a glorified guard. They're going to run the short yardage, and they're going to be utilized 90 percent of the time as a blocker."

"I played fullback my junior year in high school but my senior year I played tailback," Montgomery said. "I think I'm versatile enough to play both, but right now I'm staying with fullback."

"My being a tailback in the past helps me out because it has a lot of versatility. The typical Iowa fullback is really a good blocker but it's a lot different now. I feel like it's a blessing almost I can maneuver and get some things going."

Some people try to compare Montgomery with Richard Bass, the starting fullback on the 1989 Iowa squad. But both Fry and Montgomery agree the two are totally different players.

"I'm not as good a blocker as Richard or (former Hawkeye) David (Hudson) were, but I think I can do some other things that those guys can't," Montgomery said. "(In high school) I ran the ball a lot and I really didn't do too much blocking. But here you're forced to block when you're playing fullback. It's something that I had to learn."

"I have confidence in myself that I can get the job done and the coaches thought I could get the job done. I think that they thought that I could catch the ball and run the ball a lot differently than those two could. So it's not really a concern at all."

"(Lew) is a completely different type than Richard Bass," Fry said. "He's a more elusive, quick runner than Richard and he has better hands. He's not as good a blocker as Richard. Richard was the best blocking fullback we've ever had here."

Despite his lack of blocking experience, Montgomery said he feels confident with his position on the team.

"(My job) is mainly blocking and running the ball," Montgomery said. "It's getting the job done as a fullback. By me blocking and opening holes for Nick (Bell) and Tony, that's as good as me making a long run. I get as much joy out of blocking as I do running the ball."

According to Montgomery, now that he is a crowd favorite, his teammates won't let him forget it.

"Merton (Hanks) and Melvin (Foster) and all those guys are always on me about that," he said. "It's a good feeling. Hopefully I can continue to do some good things here and keep them yelling Lew instead of boo."

Men's cross country moves to 3-0

By Scott Garringer
The Daily Iowan

The Hawkeye fall sports season is in full swing now — with most teams having successful beginnings. The following is a composite of these fall sports results and what to look for this weekend.

Men's Cross Country

Thrillers have become the norm for Coach Larry Wieczorek's runners, as the Hawkeyes pulled out two one-point wins over Minnesota and Northern Iowa.

Iowa took the top three places — mathematically assuring victory — in defeating the Gophers and Panthers by identical 29-30 tallies. Including a 27-28 victory over Augustana the previous week, the Hawkeyes are now 3-0 for the season.

Sophomore Kevin Herd again was the pace-setter for Iowa, breaking the tape in 25 minutes, 19 seconds. Seniors David Brown (25:43) and L.J. Allbrecht (25:51) were close behind to give Iowa the 1-2-3 finish.

"Hopefully this will encourage us to develop more quickly," Wieczorek said. "With three strong runners, the desire to develop into a good team is definitely there."

Iowa runs again in two weeks at the Central Collegiate Meet in Normal, Ill., which Wieczorek describes as "very important," as five Big Ten teams will be there.

"We'll need to make a good effort," the coach said. "At a large meet like that, we'll need our support runners more than ever."

Women's Cross Country

Coach Jerry Hassard leads his squad into the Purdue Invitational in West Lafayette, Ind., today, after a week off from competition.

The Hawkeyes opened their season with a victory at home over Northeast Missouri State in the Hawkeye Open, Saturday, Sept. 8.

Field Hockey

The Hawkeyes boosted their record to 7-0 with shutout wins over conference foes Ohio State (4-0) and Michigan State (3-0) last weekend, but the real tests come starting today.

Iowa travels to Norfolk, Va., to face top-ranked Old Dominion today and No. 2 North Carolina on Sunday.

Coach Beth Beglin kept her team from looking ahead, as showed by strong, aggressive play by the Hawkeyes. Iowa outshot the Buckeyes and Spartans by a total of 57-5.

Iowa's defense deserves much of the credit for the success. The Hawkeyes have outscored their opponents this season to the tune of 25-26 and have allowed only 21 shots.

Iowa pulled out the victories despite tornado warnings forcing indoor play and Ohio State's aggressive style. Junior forward Kris Fillat, who leads the team with 11 goals and 23 points, spoke of the physical play.

"They were really tough," said Fillat. "They kept putting their sticks in our chests. They're not that skilled."

Volleyball

Acting head coach Mauren Marek, filling in for Ruth Nelson, has seen a lot of good play by the Hawkeyes this season during the nonconference portion of their schedule.

Due to the strength of that schedule, however, the Hawkeyes have only a 2-5 record to show for it.

Iowa opened the season with three straight losses to nationally-ranked teams and haven't been able to pull it up since. Last Sunday, it wasn't any easier as Iowa lost to fourth-ranked Texas 15-11, 15-4, 15-8. The loss spoiled Saturday's victory over Southwest Texas State, 6-15, 15-12, 6-15, 15-8, 15-10.

Marek said she was pleased with her team's performance despite the split.

"I think, in preparation for the coming weekend, it was a good trip," said Marek. "Everybody got some experience for Big Ten matches."

Marek also said she was happy about the Southwest Texas State match where the Hawkeyes took control of the fifth game in late stages.

"In the last part of the fifth game, we really played well," Marek said. "We played our style of offense and took control of the game."

Senior Jenny Rees led the Hawkeyes in hitting with 20 kills and an attack percentage of .310, while Barb Willis recorded 14 kills, 22 digs and seven block assists in the contest.

Iowa opens Big Ten play today against Indiana in Bloomington, Ind., and will continue Saturday at Ohio State — the defending league champions.

Women's Golf

Senior Stacey Arnold took medalist honors Sunday at the Minnesota Open, but Iowa lost the meet due to a tiebreaker with Minnesota.

Arnold's 75-77-76-228 redeemed her performance on this same Boldstad Golf Course where she fell to 18th at last year's Big Ten Meet.

The Hawkeyes and Gophers both shot 968 during the two-day tournament. Iowa lost the tiebreaker because Minnesota's fifth golfer outscored Iowa's 85-90 on the final day.

Arnold said she was disappointed despite her medalist honors.

"I was glad to hold on to the lead I had," said Arnold. "But I would have been satisfied with a little better play from myself."

Thompson's squad will travel to Madison, Wis., for the Lady Northern Tournament this weekend.

Women's Tennis

There was no doubt that the women's tennis team was going to pick up where it left off as Coach Micki Schillig saw her players Lori Hash and Tracey Peyton reach the finals of the All-Iowa Invite last weekend in Des Moines.

Last season, Schillig was named Big Ten Coach of the Year as Iowa posted a 16-4 record.

Neither Hash nor Peyton was tested beyond 6-4 by any of Iowa State, Northern Iowa, or Drake players in reaching the final.

"This was an experimental-type meet, but we have the potential to be really good," Schillig said. "Every meet we play from now on will be tougher, and this was a good one to look at where we are early in the season."

The coach said she was happy with the performance, especially considering that this was Iowa's first match of the season.

"I would say that we dominated, but it took some tough matches to get there," said Schillig. "It was good to get the first match out of our system, because it was kind of a nerves thing for the new players, coming in and playing their first match for Iowa."

Next up for Schillig's squad is its home opener with Nebraska today at 2 p.m.

Men's Tennis

Coach Steve Houghton also saw his team dominate against quality teams last weekend, as Iowa won 23 of the 30 matches played during the Iowa State Invitational.

"This was a very impressive performance by the team," Houghton said. "I'm very pleased with the way we played."

Hawkeye battling Hawkeyes were everywhere. Senior Tommy Heiting defeated teammate Neil Denahan 6-4, 6-4 in the No. 2 singles flight final.

In the No. 2 doubles final Denahan and Thomas Adler beat teammates Eric Schulman and Greg Hebard 6-3, 3-6, 6-3.

"I treated it as just another match," Heiting said about playing against his teammate. "You want to take it seriously, like any other opponent. I wanted to win."

Iowa will play amongst themselves for a few more weeks, as they do not compete again until Oct. 5-6 at the Ball State Invitational in Muncie, Ind.

On offense the Cyclones are attempting to make up for injuries to Hesman Trophy candidate Baise Bryan at running back and starting quarterback Chris Pedersen. Taking Pedersen's place will be freshman Bob Utter, while sophomore Sherman Williams will try to fill Bryan's shoes.

On the other side of the ball, the secondary seems to be Iowa State's main strength with 1989 first-team all-Big Eight pick Marcus Robertson at left corner and sophomore Shawn Walker, Robertson's back-up last season, at right corner.

CHICAGO (AP) — Michigan State coach George Perles insisted Tuesday he isn’t kicking his chaps to have his Spartans run against top-ranked Notre Dame.

"It won’t be that easy. They’ll make adjustments," said Perles during the weekly Big Ten teleconference.

The Irish — who had yielded 253 yards in their 38-24 season-opening victory over Michigan — and No. 24 Michigan State renew their 93-year-old nonconference rivalry Saturday at East Lansing, Mich.

“We’re privileged to play them when they are No. 1 and we are playing them at home. They are a team loaded with great talent," said Perles. "We’re going to try to run the ball. We try to run the ball against everyone. But we’ll try to pass the ball, too," he said.

Michigan coach Gary Moeller said that after the loss to Notre Dame, "Our kids are down, our coaches are somewhat down. But I expected that. It was a tough fourth quarter."

The Irish outscored Michigan 14-0 in the final quarter.

"It was concerned with our kicking game and with the offense moving the ball. Maybe we should have put more emphasis on defense," said Moeller, whose seventh-ranked Wolverines prepare for UCLA Saturday.

In other games involving Big Ten teams this Saturday, Southern Illinois is at No. 18 Illinois, Northwestern at Rice, Missouri at Indiana, Minnesota at eighth-ranked Nebraska, Indiana State at Purdue and Temple at Wisconsin.

No. 16 Ohio State is idle.

Week coach John Mackovic said he is pleased with the way Jason Verduco has stepped in at quarterback to replace Jeff George, the NFL’s top draft choice and now a rookie with the Indianapolis Colts.

"I think the team is getting a feel for him and what he can do. He can’t do all of the things that Jeff George could do, but the team has adjusted," said Mackovic, whose Illini beat Colorado 23-22

The Iowa Hawkeyes will enter Saturday's game with Iowa State having finished its first mission of the season: Defeating the Cincinnati Bearcats in their opener, 63-10.

"We accomplished what we wanted to accomplish," Iowa football coach Hayden Fry said. "We wanted to win the game and look good doing it."

Saying his Hawkeyes looked good against Cincinnati is already likely to be Fry's understatement of the year. His football team completely dominated the struggling Bearcats (0-3) in every facet of the game. From the onset, and despite the fact that Cincinnati led briefly 7-0 after an 83-yard interception return, last Saturday's game was a contest between men and boys.

Iowa rolled up a school-record nine rushing touchdowns en route to outgaining Cincinnati in total yardage 626-69. The defense allowed only four first downs and forced six turnovers as Iowa scored more points than it had since its 1985 59-0 drubbing of Illinois.

However, this was an opponent who had lost its second game of the season 34-0 to Bowling Green - a school known more for soccer than football.

"Without being critical of Cincinnati," Fry said, "we realize they didn't have the best team that we are always-intense rivalry between Iowa's intrastate rivalries.

Iowa State certainly looked good and remains to be seen. Regardless of Cincinnati's credentials, the fact is that Iowa hasn't been 1-0 since 1986, when they beat Iowa State in their opener, 43-7.

"This week we obviously have a much tougher football team, an improved Iowa State football team," said Fry. "As I've said many times, I think their senior running back rushed for 177 yards and scored four touchdowns.

"They say (Iowa State tailback Blaise Bryant) is not going to play. Bruised shoulder. Man, I've had bruised knees, bruised ankles, everything and I still find a way to make it out there Saturday. It's just a matter of being tough enough and sucking it up and getting out there. He's probably having flashbacks of the second half (of last year's game)."

Jim Johnson

always-intense rivalry between Iowa's biggest football programs.

"(Bryant's) absence certainly takes a lot of lustre from the ball game," Fry said. "But it may not necessarily take away a lot of the production from an Iowa State standpoint. That remains to be seen.

"They have a very diversified offense; it's not going to come to a half just because they're missing a couple people."

As far as Fry is concerned, Bryant and Pederson are playing, because that's the attitude he and his team will have in preparing for the Cyclones.

"Our game plan will be to go into the game exactly as if Blaise Bryant and Chris Pederson are playing the game," said Fry. "All Coach Walden can do is condemn some of the things he would normally do had his big guns been healthy. It will still be the same style of attack."

"Jim's a very innovative type of guy so he's on cloud nine at the chalk board getting those things ready!"

Senior defensive tackle Jim Johnson isn't buying the Bryant injury report offered by Walden.

"I don't believe that at all," said the Forest City, Iowa, native. "They say he's not going to play. Bruised shoulder. Man, I've had bruised knees, bruised ankles, everything and I still find a way to make it out there Saturday. It's just a matter of being tough enough and sucking it up and getting out there.

"He's probably having flashbacks of the second half (of last year's game)."

Last year the Iowa defense held Bryant to negative yards rushing in the second half of the Hawkeye's 31-21 win at Ames after Bryant and the Cyclones had taken a 21-14 halftime lead.

"We're gonna prepare for him (Bryant) and as far as everybody's concerned he's gonna be out there," added Johnson. "We hope he is because it's just going to be another added incentive to play harder when we see him back there."

Iowa State will need all the help it can get Saturday. The Cyclones haven't beaten the Hawkeyes since a 1982 19-7 victory in Iowa City and Iowa's seven straight wins is the longest winning streak of the series, in which Iowa holds an overall 25-12 advantage.

For many fans, the Iowa-Iowa State matchup is the biggest game of the year. But for the seasoned Coach Fry, Iowa State is just another team on the schedule the Hawkeyes want to beat.

"I learned early in my career not to put too much emphasis on any ballgame, one way or the other," he said. "Because if you do it and you win, then everything else is anti-climactic. If you do it and you lose, then the guys are down so from a moral standpoint that it's hard to play the remainder of the games.

But for the players, particularly those of the home-grown variety, the Iowa State game means a whole lot more.

For Johnson, who comes from 'up north in Clone territory," the Iowa State game is an early zenith.

"This is the most important ball game of my career," said the 1989 consensus All-Big Ten selection. "It's always nice to go to a bowl, but the bowl comes early for me... against Iowa State."

Hawkeye Profile: Sean Smith

Smith returns to share wide receiver duties

By Jay Nanda
The Daily Iowan

Inglewood, Ca., may play host to the Los Angeles Lakers, but it is also home for another former champion — Hawkeye wide receiver Sean Smith.

Smith, a senior, is in his second season as a member of Coach Hayden Fry's football team, after playing at El Camino Junior College in California his first two years. While there, he set a school record with 15 catches for 225 yards in one game and hauled in 39 catches for 354 yards for his 1987 undefeated Pony Bowl championship team.

Even though the 6-foot-1, 195-pound Smith feels like he's stepped up even higher numbers for Iowa this year, he knows that sharing the wide receiver duties may not give him those fortunes. But that's just fine with him.

"Everyone knows what I can do, I know what they can do and we all know what each other can do," Smith said of teammates Jon Filloon, Danan Hughes and Mike Saunders. "Some games you catch 10 or 15 passes and the next game you might only catch two. That doesn't bother me at all. We're not going to fight amongst each other for time because we all can make the play."

After his two years at El Camino, there was a slight chance that Smith would be making the plays somewhere other than Iowa. But that's when the Hawkeyes' rich football tradition came into focus.

"At the junior college I went to, we threw the ball a lot," Smith said. "I got recruited by Illinois and Miami and some other schools, but Iowa threw the ball too."

"And Hayden Fry's always going to bowl games and I want to go to the Rose Bowl. I can't go to the Rose Bowl playing for a non-Big Ten or Pac-Ten school so Iowa was the most appealing to me. It's turned out pretty good."

Smith, who caught two passes for 24 yards last week against Cincinnati, did not participate on the Hawkeye squad last year. But if it weren't for his uncle, he may never have played football anywhere.

"When I was younger, I used to want to play baseball," the sociology major said. "And my uncle said, 'Sean you have to try out for other sports' and I said 'No, I'm playing baseball.' Then when I was in fifth grade, I signed up for Pop Warner football and ever since then it's been in my heart."

For Smith, however, family bonding doesn't stop with his uncle.

"My mother and my grandparents were the most influential because they raised me and they taught me what was wrong and what was right," he said. "They gave me advice but they always left it up to me to make my decisions. My family is behind me 100 percent."

"I love my mom to death. Every time I go on the field, I dedicate the game to her and my grandparents. I have the best grandparents in the world."

And while some people may perceive most football players to be rough and tough off the field as well as on it, Smith is living proof that some guys with shoulder pads can still have a soft spot within them.

"I want to go into real estate and then I want to work with kids," Smith said about his plans after Iowa. "I like to work with kids, maybe even as a coach. That looks like it would be fun."

The Daily Iowan

It's not just a game, it's a rivalry. Or is it?
Bitter, intense, divisive — these are the words people once used to describe Iowa-Iowa State games. This still seems accurate as far as the coaches are concerned. But the fans just seem glad that this game is a little bit special.

"I think it's good that they brought (the game) back," said Glenda Skallerud of Iowa City. "It's good for the state of Iowa. It draws spectators? With Heisman quarterback Chris Pedersen playing, it seems to have lost some

"It's a lot of cheap rivalry business. It's not like whoever wins this goes on to the National Championship game."

Joe Bartenhagen

...not like whoever wins this goes on to the National Championship game."

"It doesn't mean much in the standings," Mauro agreed. "But it's a big mental thing. If they lose, it puts a damper on the whole season."

"I think it means a lot to (the fans)," said Skallerud. "Last week wasn't really a challenge, especially considering the rest of the schedule."

The game, of course, hasn't been played yet but everyone seems quite certain that Iowa will cruise to victory.

"Probably, Iowa (will win)," said Brian Lazear, a sophomore from Iowa City, "since we have a couple guys hurt."

Lazear is coming to Iowa City with a group from his fraternity, Sigma Phi Epsilon.

"We're coming to Iowa City to party and watch Iowa State maybe pull off an upset."

"We'll win for sure," said Glenda Skallerud, who works at UI Hospitals and Clinics.

Her prediction? "28-14," she said hesitantly.

Another confident fan — albeit about a different game — is Mauro of Beta Theta Pi.

His fraternity gets together with the Beta house from ISU and play a football game of their own before the real game. And the call it, that's right, "Beta Bowl." They even made T-shirts modeled on the "Bad Bowl" animated promotional game.

"Last year, the Iowa State Betas beat us," he said. "But I don't see that happening this year."

They started their own rivalry last year so the UI Betas are behind in their series. Fortunately, Hayden Fry doesn't have that problem.

The Hawkeyes lead the series 9-4 since the teams resumed competition in 1977; The Hawkeyes also enjoy a seven-game winning streak. On top of that, Iowa State coach Jim Walden has an 0-3 record against Iowa.

If the fans seem less than intense about the rivalry, it may have something to do with the biased series. But Walden seems worried and this year much of the talk about the game has been about game films, the exchange of films, and the fact that it's not happening this year.

The film flap hasn't escaped the fans, but most don't seem too riled about it.

"It's no biggie," said Lazear. "(Iowa State's) going to lose anyway."

According to Bartenhagen, the whole thing is being blown out of proportion. "They're both kind of being weenies," he said.

Columnist Bartenhagen has the last word on the film flap — and the rivalry for that matter. "Being from Iowa State, I'd say Hayden Fry's a punk."

"But I suppose if I was from Iowa, I'd say it was Walden's fault."

Laughing it off

Johnson: "I just kind of laugh at him (Walden) and go with the flow, but I don't think I'll be smiling too much on Saturday. He gets my motor running."

"I think he's blowing smoke, actually. He likes to play the hot head sometimes, but it doesn't bother us at all because we just watch him and laugh and shake our heads and show up Saturday. That's all we care about."

Not my state, but ...

Iowa receiver Danan Hughes: "Some of the guys from Iowa get so worked up about the (Iowa State) game. I guess that's a little extra incentive for them. If I were playing Rutgers or something since I'm from New Jersey, I would just be hyper."

Merton Hanks

"We have good chemistry (in the secondary) because we've got Merton Hanks as a leader," Fry said. "I would love to have a football team where all of them emulated Merton Hanks as a person, as a Christian, as a football player, having the enthusiasm and the energy that he has. He's just really an exceptional human being."
