NATIONAL

Deere workers approve contract

PEORIA, Ill. (AP) — Deere & Co. factory workers at plants in six states overwhelmingly approved a three-year contract, a United Auto Workers union official said Sunday.

In voting this weekend, 87.5 percent of union members favored ratification. The pact covers about 13,800 factory workers in Illinois, Iowa, Colorado, Georgia, Kansas and Minnesota.

The union hopes the contract will be a precedent for its demands from Caterpillar Inc., with 17,000 blue-collar workers in Illinois, Pennsylvania, Colorado and Tennessee.

New York man shoots family, takes hostages

NEW YORK (AP) — An unemployed man opened fire in a house early Sunday, killing his father and three other people and critically wounding two more before taking two hostages in a home two miles away, police said.

One hostage later was released and another escaped, police said. Both were unharmed. The gunman stayed in the home alone Sunday evening.

Andrew Brooks, 47, began firing a shotgun inside the house in the Little Neck section of the Queens borough about 2:20 a.m., police Inspector James Courtney said.

INTERNATIONAL

Iraq builds up forces against Kurds

ANKARA, Turkey (AP) — A Kurdish rebel spokesman said Sunday that Iraq has strengthened its military force in northern Iraq, reviving fears Saddam Hussein will launch another attack against the Kurds there.

Baghdad has dispatched two divisions of Iraqi Republican Guards — about 30,000 troops — to Zumar township, 30 miles south of the Turkish border, said Serchil Kazaz. Kazaz is the Ankara representative of the Patriotic Union of Kurdistan, an Iraqi Kurdish group.

Kazaz also said Iraqi aircraft, including 14 Mirage jets, arrived recently at airports in Mosul and Tall Afar in northern Iraq.

Pope John Paul II pleads for return to Christian values

NATAL, Brazil (AP) — Pope John Paul II on Sunday called on Brazil, the world's most populous Catholic nation, to return to the values of Christianity amid a decade-long decline in church membership.

Speaking on the first full day of a 10-day visit, the pontiff accused evangelical and African sects of sowing confusion while wooing away an estimated 15 million Roman Catholics.

He decried violence, consumerism and pro-abortion movements, and said there must be a return "to the moral values of Christian traditions."

EC warns Yugoslavian army to obey agreement

VINKOVCI, Yugoslavia (AP) — A relief convoy was allowed into a besieged Croat stronghold Sunday, and the European Community warned the Yugoslav army to abide by an agreement to pull out of the secessionist republic.

As talks continued, fighting was reported near Pakrac in Central Croatia. Artillery shells also fell around Vinkovci and Vukovar in the republic's east, home to many ethnic Serbs who oppose being part of an independent Croatia.

Committee hears Hill, Thomas supporters

Associated Press

Four friends of Anita Hill testify before the Senate Judiciary Committee on Capitol Hill Sunday. The four testified that Hill said Clarence Thomas had made unwanted sexual advances toward her in the 1980s.

James Rowley
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Four friends of Anita Hill solemnly testified Sunday she told them in the 1980s that Clarence Thomas had made unwanted sexual advances toward her. But former associates of the Supreme Court nominee vouched for him, one of them saying, "I know he did no such thing."

Offstage, a polygraph expert said Hill had passed a lie detector test, which her supporters said boosted her credibility.

In a long day and night under the television lights, the Senate Judiciary Committee heard sharply conflicting testimony about Hill and Thomas, accuser and accused in a drama that captivated the nation.

"He wouldn't take no for an answer," Susan Hoerchner quoted Hill as saying about Thomas in the early 1980s. Hill added that Thomas said, "You know if you had witnesses, you'd have a perfect case against me." Hoerchner told the panel, which is probing Hill's allegations of sexual advances and Thomas' unequivocal denials.

The lie detector test added an element of controversy. "Hill is truthful," said Paul Minor, administrator of the test and the head of a private security firm in Virginia, in comments that sent consternation through the ranks of Thomas' defenders.

Sen. Orrin Hatch, R-Utah, called the development "highly offensive and highly political, too pat, too slick, exactly what a two-bit, slick lawyer" would do. Sen. Joseph Biden, the Delaware Democrat who chairs the committee, ruled the results legally inadmissible.

The Senate is scheduled to vote Tuesday on confirming Thomas, a 43-year-old black federal appeals judge whose nomination has turned into a tale of sex and politics unlike any other. Sen. Dennis DeConcini, D-Ariz., predicted that most of Thomas' previously announced 13 Democratic supporters would stand by him unless something "really heavy" came up before the end of the hearings.

Biden held out the prospect of an all-night session to hear from each of the numerous witnesses scheduled to testify, and said Hill and Thomas would be invited back to close out the proceedings today.

Far from the crowded committee room, President Bush issued a fresh defense of his embattled nominee. "I believe he will make it," the president said before heading off to the golf course.

Thomas and Hill aside, the day's drama demonstrated that sexual harassment knows no favorites. One witness for him and one for

Professor considers hearings 'unfair'

Eric Detwiler

UI law Professor Adrien Wing said Sunday that the recent confirmation hearings of Judge Clarence Thomas are biased and unfair.

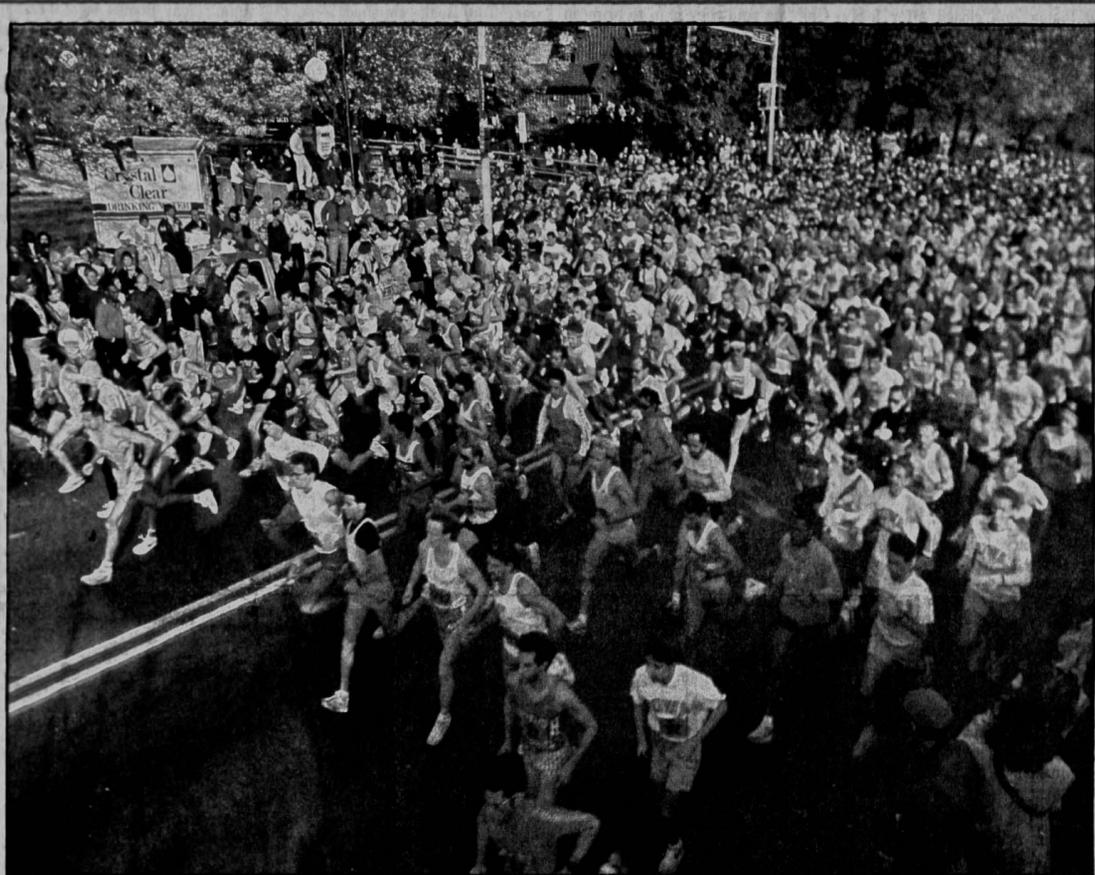

Wing said the concept of sexual harassment is foreign ground for the all-male Judiciary Committee and added that the senators have no idea how victims of sexual harassment react.

"There's a gender gap between those who have experienced harassment and those who haven't," Wing said. "A lot of senators just can't get it through their thick skulls that women who have been harassed by their employers often stay in contact with the person who harassed them."

Another of the many problems Wing said she saw with the confirmation hearings was that all of the senators had already come to a decision on the Thomas nomination.

"Each person asking questions has already taken a position for or

VIGIL

Regents, student leaders to meet Wednesday

Leslie Yazel
Daily Iowan

The candle will travel to the Iowa state Board of Regents meeting in Cedar Falls Wednesday to continue the constant vigil kept by students for the "sick" regents universities.

Student government leaders from the three regents institutions are scheduled to address the board again on the proposed 9.4 percent tuition increase. Student presentations at September's meeting were marked by heated words and fears that the increase would limit student access to higher education.

Advocates stress that the increase will not alter the regents institutions' status as the cheapest Big Ten education, but it will add $5.596 million to subsidize the UI's severely limited state appropriations. The final vote on the proposed increase is scheduled for the Nov. 20 meeting.

If passed at the November meeting, students will also see an increase in mandatory student fees — a $10 increase to $30 per semester for health fees. The regents have proposed no change to the $40 undergraduate computer fee approved last spring.

The UI College of Liberal Arts gained 25 courses since spring 1990 by adding 176 courses and deleting 151, according to the Interinstitutional Committee on Educational Coordination, which is recommending approval of the changes to the board.

The UI as a whole added 61 courses by eliminating 226 courses and adding 287. Changes are a result of "student educational needs, faculty vitality and disciplinary emphases." The College of Business Administration is prop-

TRADITION

Homecoming celebrations include old, new events

Kim Dykshorn
Daily Iowan

Don the black and gold! The Hawkeye homecoming tradition continues this week on the UI campus as students, faculty, alumni and the community gather to celebrate a week of old and new traditions alike.

This year's homecoming theme is "Showdown With a Chief Opponent," and the '91 Homecoming Council, at work since February, assures it will be an exciting, event-filled week.

This 79-year tradition began Sunday with a volleyball tournament, the first of the Sweepstakes Events in which university organizations, sororities and fraternities compete for the first-place title.

A new Sweepstakes Event this year is the Hawkeye relays, a competition of "goofy relays and surprise races," said Jennifer Reagan, executive director.

"We wanted something that everyone can participate in, something in which you don't have to be athletic to have fun," Reagan said.

Also new to this year's schedule is the Homecoming Pep Rally, an old tradition that for some reason, Reagan said, has not been held at the UI for a long time. The Iowa pompon squad and cheerleaders and Herky the Hawk will lead this spirit-rousing event Friday after the parade. A dazzling fireworks display will immediately follow the rally on the banks of the Iowa River.

Two other new homecoming events are the Karaoke contest on Friday afternoon and the frankfurter-eating contest on Saturday before the football game. According to Reagan, econofoods has donated 600 hot dogs and will be cooking

COLUMBUS DAY

Professor: explorer's feats should be re-evaluated

Jude Sunderbruch
Daily Iowan

Today on Columbus Day, one year from a planned celebration honoring the 500th anniversary of the "discovery of the New World," a UI professor believes that Christopher Columbus should be viewed in a different light.

"We need to present history as it happened," said Eneida Vasquez, a UI assistant professor in the English as a second language and the school psychology programs.

"We need to provide both the positive and negative characteristics of an individual," she said.

Columbus is under growing scrutiny by historians, the media and the public in his position as the fabled discoverer of America. Many feel that the admiration for Columbus in American history texts is undeserved because of the way he treated the native population upon his arrival.

Although there is little dispute that Columbus was brutal in many respects, some historians have said that a 15th-century man should not be held to the standards of today. Vasquez does not agree.

"Just because he was a product of his age does not mean he's right," she said.

Vasquez does not feel that the story of Columbus' voyages should be blotted from the pages of history altogether, though. Rather, she hopes that he will be recognized together with all those who made journeys of discovery to this continent during that period of time. In addition, Vasquez said that respect should be given to the native population that was already here.

"I don't think there should be one person who gets the credit," she

PLACES & PEOPLE

New renters reveal plans for former club

Jessica Davidson
Daily Iowan

The building which housed the former College Street and New Sensations clubs has been rented out again, and the new owners are out to change its image.

"We want to get away from the dance club idea," Toni Boales said. She and her husband, Steve, took possession of the building at 121 E. College St. Saturday.

Steve Boales said the new restaurant/bar — whose name is still a secret — will be a "step in the opposite direction" from bars like The Airliner or The Fieldhouse.

"We figured the only way to get into the market was to go with something that doesn't exist," he said.

"We're not sure exactly what we're going to do yet," Steve Boales said, "but the building needs a huge personality change."

"It needs a face lift," Toni Boales agreed.

The building's history has been less than fortunate. The owners of the College Street Club were convicted of possession and trafficking of cocaine in December 1990, and New Sensations closed after less than a year.

"I guess the reputation from the first just followed to the second," Toni Boales said.

"We want to create somewhere where you aren't afraid to go," she continued. "Someplace that's comfortable for everybody, students and businesspeople."

The building, which has two floors (46 feet by 150 feet each), has gone more than 15 years without major remodeling, Steve Boales said. The couple plans to tear down the DJ booth but leave an area for dancing. Also, they plan to remodel the upstairs area — formerly a pool table area — into a banquet room that will seat more than 100 people and to build a kitchen.

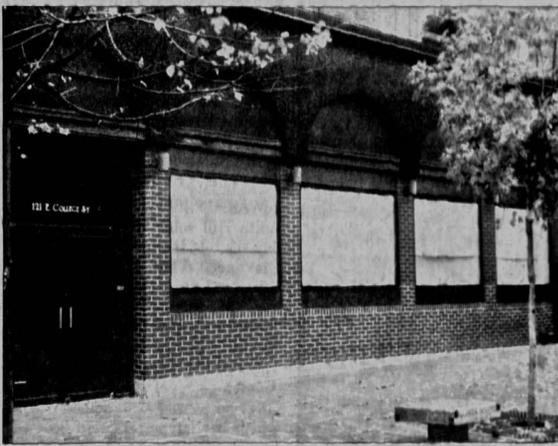

Toni Boales said there will be a more contemporary interior, with vibrant colors and starker black and white.

The couple hopes to open sometime in middle to late November. Although their plans are not concrete, they want to bring live entertainment to the establishment.

"With all this space, you pretty much have to have live entertainment," Steve Boales said. "We'll have everything from jazz to alternative music to comedy — whatever the community wants."

The building is the largest restaurant/bar facility in Iowa City, Steve Boales said. Like a larger Gabe's or Iowa City Yacht Club, he said they plan to bring in bigger-name entertainment like Smashing Pumpkins and the Pixies, as well as jazz and comedy.

"We're not catering to the college crowd or the older crowd," Steve Boales said. "We hope to get something that everyone can like." They also plan to run a serious kitchen.

"There'll be a lot of good food," Steve Boales said. "Everything from burger baskets..."

"To prime rib dinners, if you want one," Toni Boales finished.

Food will be served from lunchtime to 1 or 2 a.m.

"We'll be an alternative to the street vendor and Burger King," Steve Boales said, laughing.

The couple is originally from Des Moines and has lived in Coralville for about two years. Steve Boales has 10 years of experience in restaurant and bar management and has worked several years with the Marriott corporation.

"We've wanted to do this for some time," Toni Boales said. "This is just another step toward the ultimate goal of owning our own restaurant and bar."

"We're career restaurant and bar managers," she added. "We want to be here for a long time."

SURROGATE BIRTHS

Grandmother gives birth to her daughter's twins

Marilynn Wheeler
Associated Press

ABERDEEN, S.D. — Surrogate twins born to their grandmother were doing well Sunday, according to a hospital spokeswoman.

Chad Daniel Uchtyl and Chelsea Arlette Uchtyl were delivered early Saturday to Arlette Schweitzer, who was implanted with her daughter's fertilized eggs. The daughter, 22-year-old Christa Uchtyl, was born without a uterus.

The babies, born five weeks premature, will likely remain in the hospital for another two weeks, said Patty Kirkpatrick, public relations director at St. Luke's Midland Hospital.

"That's par for the course with twins or preemies (premature babies)," said Kirkpatrick.

Chad was on oxygen briefly Saturday. Kirkpatrick said, "Again, that's not unusual for twins or preemies."

Rory King, the family's attorney and a personal friend, said the mother and daughter were extremely close. Christa, who lived about 300 miles away in Sioux City, Iowa, had spent a lot of time with her mother during the pregnancy. The Uchtyls recently moved to Rapid City, about 250 miles southwest of Aberdeen.

Christa had been especially watchful since her mother was confined to bed two weeks ago and was with her mother when she went into labor, King said.

King said they had asked his legal advice after the eggs were implanted in Arlette's womb, and they wanted to know how to handle the many media requests, some of them accompanied by handsome financial offers.

"There was a lot of interest from the television networks and magazines," he said. "We even got calls from some of the producers of television miniseries."

After the birth was announced Saturday, King said he was deluged by requests for news conferences, photo opportunities and television satellite hookups.

"We just can't accommodate them all," he said.

The family and the hospital were well-prepared for the publicity, and they kept the press at bay. Extra security guards were on duty, and other women on the maternity ward were asked to furnish lists of authorized visitors to prevent any intrusion from the media.

"This is a sacred and joyful time for them," King said Saturday. "They want others to treat it as they do, not to cheapen or fictionalize it."

HEALTH CARE

Allan Bloom to speak at medical conference at UI

Diana Wallace
Daily Iowan

Allan Bloom, controversial author of "The Closing of the American Mind," will speak on campus Oct. 31 during a symposium about the future of medical care.

Bloom's best-selling book caused a stir on college campuses which he criticized for not maintaining a traditional curriculum. He will lecture on education, national leadership and the future of medical training during an annual UI College of Medicine symposium called

"Assuring Quality Medical Care: Toward the Year 2000."

Other big names on the symposium's agenda include George Lundberg, editor of the Journal of the American Medical Association, and Charles Rosenberg, an expert medical historian whose book, "The Care of Strangers," was nominated for a Pulitzer Prize in 1987.

The symposium will address scientific, political, economic and ethical issues surrounding the problems and future of health care worldwide.

Richard Wenzel, UI professor of internal medicine and coordinator of the conference, said developments such as the AIDS epidemic and technological advances that prolong the lives of terminally ill patients have forced the medical professions to redefine health-care priorities.

Wenzel acknowledged that there has been criticism of this year's symposium because no women will be lecturing.

Wenzel said that the conference wasn't designed to exclude women and that two women — the editor of a medical journal and a leading epidemiologist — turned down invitations to speak.

The symposium, a two-day event to be held Oct. 31 and Nov. 1, is intended for clinicians, epidemiologists, educators, administrators and others concerned with assuring quality health care. Participation fees range from $50 to $125, and registration forms can be obtained by calling the Continuing Medical Education office at 335-8598.

Wenzel said Bloom's speech would not be open to the general public, but that arrangements might be made to broadcast the presentation if there was a large demand.

MANDATORY FEES

UI employees call policy unfair

Jessica Davidson
Daily Iowan

Several UI employees in the physics department who are covered under UI health insurance and work with UI computers are wondering why they should have to pay mandatory student fees when they take a class at the UI.

Mark Burdette, a full-time electrical engineer with the UI plasma wave physics group, said there are about a dozen employees in the physics department, including some "big wigs," who are not happy with paying health and computer fees just because they take a class at the UI.

Glen Fesson, also a full-time engineer in the physics department, said the discussions among employees have been informal.

"It's just a lot of us talking," he said. "There's a lot of flak going around, and we were surprised no one has complained before."

Fesson said some people in the physics department don't feel the UI has practiced "truth in advertising."

"They're raising tuition," he said. "Why don't they just say it? Why don't they just say, 'We're gonna stick it to ya?'"

Fesson said people understand the need for more money, and the UI should just admit it is asking for more.

Burdette said as a full-time employee he already receives full health benefits from the UI, but because he is taking one class he is required to pay the health fee as well.

"When I called the staff benefits office and asked the secretary why I had to pay, she said she didn't know, but she said I should call her back because she was interested why, too," he said.

Although staff benefits personnel were unavailable for comment Friday, secretary Teresa Watson said she has fielded "a lot of calls" from UI employees asking why they should have to pay the mandatory health fee if they decide to take a class when they are already paying for health insurance through the UI.

"Why don't they just say, 'We're gonna stick it to ya?'"

Glen Fesson, engineer

"We can't do much for them," she said. "We don't have any control over fees."

Fesson said the mandatory fees raise a lot of questions.

"For instance, does my insurance through the university cover the cost of Student Health?" he asked.

UI Vice President for University Affairs Ann Rhodes said UI employees who take classes and have to pay mandatory fees are no different from students who are covered by their parents' health insurance and who have to pay also.

"It's not possible to distinguish between who has alternative health coverage and who doesn't," she said. "It's just administratively too hard to do."

Watson said she and other employees should not have to pay mandatory fees.

"I only take one or two classes a semester for my own education," she said. "I don't really consider myself a student per se."

She said other infrequent class-takers do not consider themselves students either and don't use the support services regular students do.

"I've been going to the same family practice doctor since I was 10 years old," Watson said. "I have access to Student Health, but why would I go there?"

Burdette said the group at the physics department have discussed some alternatives to the mandatory fees.

He said the policy which gives students $100 of free computer time every semester should be reconsidered.

"Why don't they get rid of that," Burdette asked. "Charge the people using it."

Another alternative is a pro-rated system where students would pay a set fee for the hours they used computers. When they reached the current fee, they would stop paying.

"It just seems kind of unfair that even though I don't use these things I have to pay for them," Burdette said.

COMPUTER CHARGES

Students may be paying for unneeded services

Loren Keller
Daily Iowan

Several UI students who have purchased personal computers through the university are wondering why they are required to pay the $40 mandatory computer fee as well.

"Buying a $1,500 computer should take care of your $40 computer fee," said UI junior Mark Palmberg, who is appealing the fee. Palmberg bought a computer through Weeg his freshman year and said he has never had to use the university computers for purposes other than registration.

"I don't know how the university is justifying that fee while they're still selling computers to students," he added.

Computers for personal use can be purchased through Weeg by degree-seeking UI students who are enrolled in a minimum of six credit hours. Refunds or a discounted rate of the fee are not available to students who buy computers through the UI.

Lee Shope, assistant director of UI computer services, said students who have purchased computers may still have reason to use the UI facilities.

"Our surveys of student use of the facilities have indicated that even students who have their own computers use the facilities, particularly during the day when they're not at home," said Shope, who sat on the committee that created the appeals process and criteria.

"There will be resources available in the instructional technology centers, in the form of information resources that students wouldn't have access to on their home computers. That's the rationale for the fee," he added.

Porne Cavan, a UI engineering student who bought a computer through Weeg and will be paying $100 a semester, said the only reason he uses Weeg is for the paper.

Cavan said he has all of the programs he needs but tries to compensate for the fee by sending his documents by modem to Weeg for printing.

"The fee is useless; it's just a hundred dollars going for nothing," he said.

However, Cavan does not plan to appeal the fee and said that filling out an appeal form would be "a waste of time."

UI sophomore Rodney Alber also bought a computer through the center and said he has no use for the university facilities.

"I can do all of my homework from home so I don't see any cause for me to have to pay the $40 fee," he said.

The university does not make a profit from the computers it sells and is therefore able to offer lower than retail prices to students, Shope said.

The price mark-up on computers covers the UI computer service's cost of operation, which includes paying a staff that provides computer demonstrations, the cost of warehouse storage and clerical support.

A $75 support fee that was charged with the purchase of each computer was discontinued in June before the mandatory computer fee was instituted, Shope said. The support fee covered the consulting support and training Weeg provided for students buying computers.

Students who paid the support fee must still pay the mandatory $40 fee, Shope said.

UI junior Jimmy Su, who bought his computer prior to the discontinuation of the support fee, believes he shouldn't be charged both ways.

"Those that have bought computers and already have paid the support fee shouldn't have to pay the $40 fee, or should at least get some sort of discount," he said.

"I think part of the fee may be justified, but $40 a semester is too high," he added.

The Iowa state Board of Regents authorized the new computer fees last May, charging full-time undergraduates in the College of Engineering $100 a semester and in other colleges $40.

The mandatory fees are expected to generate more than $2 million in the 1992 fiscal year, an increase of $1.5 million over current fees.

Ann Rhodes

sector for several years, said he does not feel he is being treated fairly by the UI.

"I don't know any other place where I've been billed for something I don't use," he said.

Burdette said many UI employees and people from the community pick up an occasional class at the UI. He said mandatory health fees for people with their own insurance and computer fees for people who take an art class for their own pleasure are not fair. These people use facilities outside the UI and do not need the support services funded by mandatory student fees.

Burdette said even if people aren't complaining yet, it is only a matter of time.

"People are being sheep," he said. "They figure, here's another bill and there's nothing I can do about it. But 40 bucks is still 40 bucks."

ABORTION

Protesters will pay costs for blockading clinic entrance

Marcey Bullerman
Daily Iowan

District Court Judge Bruce Goddard ordered four abortion protesters to pay for expenses at the Emma Goldman Clinic for Women from when they blockaded the clinic's entrance on Nov. 26, 1990.

Goddard ruled that Steven Fuerst, William Dix, Renee Downs and Gilbert Copper, who were arrested for criminal trespass, were jointly liable to cover the losses of $257.22. The costs were a result of the blockade, which forced the clinic to stay open one and a half hours past regular closing until all patients were seen. The protesters will also have to pay interest and cover court costs.

Gayle Sand, an associate director of the clinic, said, "We see this as a victory. We feel it's a deterrent because it makes them responsible for their actions."

She added, "It's too bad Iowa City doesn't take these traveling bullies to small claims court to recoup the taxpayers' money to keep health clinics open."

Sand said the clinic will also file suits against seven other anti-abortion demonstrators who were also arrested Nov. 26. Sand said this was the first time the clinic has filed a civil suit against interfering protesters. She added that the clinic will continue to take the same course of action whenever applicable in the future.

The current charges stem from a dramatic scene, shown on tape during the hearing, which involved about 25 abortion protesters, 20 onlookers and 20 police officers with six squad cars. Twelve people were arrested when they refused requests from police to move from the doorway and had to be carried to the police cars.

against Thomas," Wing said. "What we're seeing is senators using their opportunities for questions to make a long speech and attack the credibility of the witnesses for Professor Hill."

Wing added that the actions of the Senate are making a strong statement to the American people about how serious Congress considers the problem of sexual harassment and about the standing of black women.

"There are still people who are trying to discredit her, call her a nut," Wing said. "It's the way America in general looks at black women, and I think if Thomas is confirmed it will send a strong message to women in America. Even if you are a law professor, and even if you have witnesses of this stature and credibility, it's not enough."

Thomas has referred to the last few days of hearings as a "latter-day lynching of an uppity black." Wing disagreed, saying that the charges of racism from the nominee are not relevant to the issue at hand.

"I'm alarmed Judge Thomas talked about charges of racism when it is a black woman accusing him," Wing said. "It has not been mentioned by any of the panelists so far that black women are also victims of racism, and most of the people who victimize black women are black men."

Wing added that the charges of harassment that have been levied against Thomas are not coming from a special interest group or a liberal Democrat but a professional, reserved woman.

"This is a conservative, deeply religious woman," Wing said. "She apparently is not a liberated feminist who would go around talking about porno flicks with her friends so it doesn't surprise me that she would not mention the specific details of the harassment to anybody. She was in pain just listing them before the committee."

How the problem of sexual harassment will be dealt with in the future, according to Wing, may hinge on the outcome of this nomination. She also said that although there are laws against harassment, they are almost never utilized by the victims.

"The system fails in incidents of sexual harassment," Wing said. "You can have a law, but most women will not be able to take advantage of that law whether they're a law professor, a factory worker or a 22-year-old model."

osing changes to emphasize faculty instruction of certain upper-level classes usually taught by TAs.

Also on the docket is approval of the master of law degree in international and comparative law at the UI, which replaced the juris doctor certificate in international and comparative law and the master of comparative law this year.

The change was made in part to attract students to the program who desired a degree, not just a certificate.

The first part of the annual report on enrollment was also released Friday. Total enrollment at the three regents institutions increased 0.4 percent from fall 1990. Although the UI experienced a decrease of 0.6 percent, that was 4 percent higher than predicted fall enrollment.

The UI also experienced a 7.65 percent increase in minority students and increased the Iowa Minority Academic Grants for Economic Success by 27 students over last year.

Representatives from the UI Hospitals and Clinics will make a presentation on the UIHC Eye Institute project, predicted to cost $16.5 million from University Hospitals Building Usage Funds.

The project will be constructed on the current site of the Department of Ophthalmology, and will be designed to accommodate future additions of an Ear, Nose and Throat Institute, a Women's Health Center and a Primary Care Clinic.

In spite of her deep reservations about honoring a man who caused so much unrest and damage wherever he voyaged, she still feels that Columbus deserves note for his initiative in trying to travel east by journeying west.

"I think it was an accomplishment. He had an insight not everyone had, an insight not everyone acted on," she said.

As plans for celebrations of his journey continue amidst the controversy, the question of abolishing Columbus Day has been raised.

"I don't know exactly where I stand," Vasquez said, "I would prefer the true history to come out of both sides. Both the positive and negative contributions need to be raised. Perhaps we need to rethink this and see how we will present this to our children."

Experts: obscenity law unclear

Diana Wallace
Daily Iowan

Statewide furor over a sexually explicit film shown by the UI German department and an investigation of the issue by the Johnson County attorney have raised questions about what constitutes obscenity under Iowa law and in what contexts obscene material is acceptable.

Though the state Legislature stiffened the Iowa obscenity law and expanded the definition of hard-core pornography in 1989, critics say the law remains vague and the definitions subjective.

In response to pressure from anti-pornography groups and from Gov. Terry Branstad, who called the old law "one of the worst obscenity statutes in the country," the Legislature amended the law to include sex acts that were not deemed pornographic before, including intercourse.

While the old law defined obscenity as the depiction of bestiality, sadomasochism and excretory functions, the amended law includes masturbation, lewd exhibition of genitals and oral, anal or vaginal intercourse, whether real or simulated.

Acts of this nature, however, must be further deemed "patently offensive" and have no artistic, scientific, political or literary value in order to be considered obscene.

Obscenity laws have also been strengthened at the national level when the Supreme Court ruled last year that it was constitutional to prosecute those who own or view obscene material in their homes. This effectively gave states the right to enact legislation criminalizing the possession of pornographic material.

How the new definitions of pornography might be applied to "Taxi zum Klo," the film at the center of the controversy that was shown to German students Sept. 25, is unclear.

Though the movie depicts acts that might fall under the definition of hard-core pornography under state law — including scenes of two men urinating on each other, oral sex and a man placing a young boy's hand on his crotch — several First Amendment experts said the film would fall under an "educational purposes" exemption in the law.

This exemption allows public libraries and educational institutions to display obscene materials if they are "appropriate materials for educational purposes."

Herb Strentz, executive secretary of the Iowa Freedom of Information Council, said he was "pretty confident that the exemption for educational institutions might apply."

He further questioned the practicality of any attempts to prosecute the professors who showed the film.

"The point plainly has been made that this was in poor judgment. From a practical standpoint, I don't see what would be gained by any kind of a prosecution, rather than forcing the trial jurors to watch the film again," Strentz said. "I think that justice to a certain extent has already been served because the public debate has been opened and (UI President Hunter) Rawlings and the German department have conceded that it was in poor taste." Strentz called the case "worrisome" because it might force the courts to set strict standards about what is appropriate educational material.

"One troubling thing is all the huffing and puffing from politicians and the regents that shows their insensitivity to issues of free expression," he said. "People are reacting the way they typically do, but university administrators have to be made of sterner stuff and take some of the heat. Universities are traditionally thin-skinned places that overreact in the other direction."

Cryss Farley, executive director of the Iowa Civil Liberties Union, said she thought prosecution of the professors might be possible under Iowa law, which she called "censorship."

Farley echoed Strentz's fear that curricular decisions could be placed in the hands of the Legislature.

"Who are you going to trust to make these decisions, trained professionals or politicians with political motivations?" she said.

The UI wrangled with the issue of sexually explicit material on campus four years ago when the UI Printing Service decided not to print the June 1987 issue of Common Lives / Lesbian Lives, a quarterly journal of lesbian culture, because it contained sexually explicit photographs.

At that time, UI administrators said there was an unwritten policy against printing such photographs, and the journal sued the university.

The state Board of Regents is expected to discuss the film controversy at its meeting Wednesday in Cedar Falls.

also present the homecoming royalty with the keys to the city.

According to Reagan, approximately 50 students nominated themselves to be Homecoming King and Queen. Unlike past competitions, this year's applicants faced stricter criteria for winning, including a screening and an interview. The winners will be the woman and man who have excelled in scholarship, leadership and service, Reagan said.

Again this year, UI President Hunter Rawlings will serve as Grand Marshal of the Homecoming Parade, which will wind through the streets of downtown Iowa City Friday evening.

Included in the parade are the Hawkeye Marching Band, several area high-school bands, clowns and floats. The 1991 Homecoming Honored Guest, former commissioner of the Big Ten and Big Eight athletic conferences Wayne Duke, will also be a parade attraction.

For the grand finale of homecoming week, the Iowa Hawkeyes take on the University of Illinois Fighting Illini. ABC will televise the game live at 2:30 p.m.

Reagan encourages everyone to get involved in the homecoming events. One way to do this, she said, is to buy homecoming buttons, available at the Union, local businesses and through participating organizations. The buttons, which provide the only support for Homecoming Council-sponsored events, were designed by Shelly Benton, a graphic artist for the Iowa Hawk Shop.

"I'm excited for homecoming this year because this is the one week in which all students and alumni can get together and share the spirit at the UI," Benton said.

Museum receives financial support

Daily Iowan

The UI Museum of Natural History has been awarded a $7,500 special project support grant by the State Historical Resources Development Program.

Museum Director George Schrimper said the funds will be used to develop an exhibit commemorating the achievements of Frank Russell. As a UI graduate student, Russell conducted a perilous expedition from 1892 through 1894 to the Canadian Arctic on behalf of the museum.

The Frank Russell Memorial and Centennial Exhibit will incorporate the musk oxen specimens obtained by Russell during his Far North expedition funded by UI President Charles Schaeffer.

The UI Museum of Natural History, a department within the College of Liberal Arts, supports a museum studies program providing instruction in the history, management, philosophy and operation of museums, and is the oldest museum west of the Mississippi River. The museum contains a 60-exhibit Iowa Hall Gallery that focuses on Iowa's natural heritage, as well as Bird and Mammal halls.

The HRDP project is administered by the Iowa Department of Cultural Affairs.

CAMPAIGN '92

Harkin believes Hill's testimony

Steve Sakson
Associated Press

TIMONIUM, Md. — Anita Hill's testimony has been compelling and convincing, Democratic presidential candidate Sen. Thomas Harkin said Sunday while campaigning for president.

Harkin, D-Iowa, who announced his opposition to Supreme Court nominee Clarence Thomas before Hill's allegations of sexual harassment surfaced, said he still opposed Thomas. The fact that Hill has been a reluctant witness has also lent credibility to her story, he said.

"How do you know who to believe in a situation like this?" Harkin said.

"She didn't come of her own volition. She was asked to come. She said on the stand she didn't want to be there. That's pretty compelling to me."

The Democratic presidential candidate made the comments at a campaign rally in suburban Baltimore, Md.

Harkin also criticized President Bush for sending Congress "stealth nominees" who won't discuss their viewpoints on specific issues.

"The president ought to nominate someone for the Supreme Court who will come to the Senate and say, 'This is what I believe and these are the cases I support,'" he said.

While more nominees would be rejected, the process would be less frustrating, he said.

Harkin pushed his presidential agenda at a Democratic political rally Sunday and demanded that "George Herbert Walker Bush and his fat cat Republican friends" be ousted from the White House.

He pleaded with 1,000 party members to stick to their traditional role as defenders of the middle class and the downtrodden.

"I am not a Democrat who equivocates, apologizes or backs up. I am a proud Democrat and I intend to run as a proud Democrat," he shouted.

Harkin said the Bush administration had no real domestic agenda.

"George Bush and John Sununu, they get together, all they can say is 'Wheels up. Fly around the world. Take care of everybody else's problems,'" he said.

The strongest message to Americans from the Bush White House is one of greed, he said.

"Get what you can in the shortest amount of time. Don't worry about how you get it and when you do get it. The hell with everybody else."

Harkin was the dominant figure at Sunday's $25-a-head rally staged by the state Democratic Party to raise money.

Two other candidates, Sen. Robert Kerrey, D-Neb., and former Sen. Paul Tsongas, D-Mass., failed to show up as promised by state party officials. Kerrey told party officials he wanted to spend the weekend with his family while Tsongas begged off, citing a case of the flu.

A fourth, former Irvine, Calif., Mayor Larry Agrin, pitched a plan to slice the defense budget in half and divert the money to municipalities, schools, health care and family planning.

Plant reopens after blaze; no radiation leaks reported

Wendy Sloane
Associated Press

MOSCOW — Employees resumed work at the Chernobyl nuclear plant on Sunday, two days after a fire destroyed part of the roof but caused no radiation leaks.

The blaze Friday night forced the temporary shutdown of one of three operating reactors. It was the worst accident at the Ukrainian plant since the April 1986 disaster in which an explosion and fire spewed radiation around the world and caused at least 32 deaths.

Vasily Kostitsky, a spokesman for the Ukraine Environmental Protection Ministry, said operations at the two reactors unaffected by Friday's fire were operating normally on Sunday.

The situation is "under control," he said by telephone from Kiev.

Kostitsky said scientists were monitoring radiation levels as a precaution. But they had "found no deviations from the norm," he said, and repeated government statements that no radiation had leaked.

The fire has renewed debate over the safety of reactors nationwide.

Already whether to close the plant quickly or wait for a replacement to be built is a major campaign issue in the Ukraine's first popular presidential election, scheduled for Dec. 1.

Public sentiment against nuclear energy is strong, a legacy of the 1986 disaster, the worst in the history of nuclear power. The disaster involved the No. 4 reactor, now permanently out of commission.

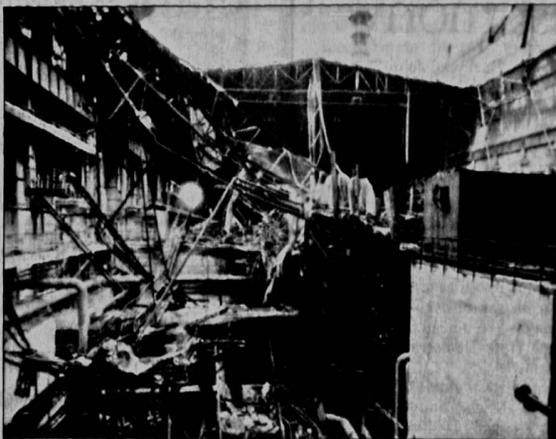

The plant's three other reactors had continued operating, but the Soviet news agency Tass said Friday's fire shut down the No. 2 reactor. Officials said it would remain out of service for a month or more while repairs are made.

On Saturday, the Ministry of the Atomic Power Industry in Moscow said the fire broke out as a turbine driven by the reactor was being idled for repairs.

An "automatic switch turned the reactor on" during the shutdown, producing an electric surge that ignited the insulation on some wiring, Tass said, quoting a ministry statement.

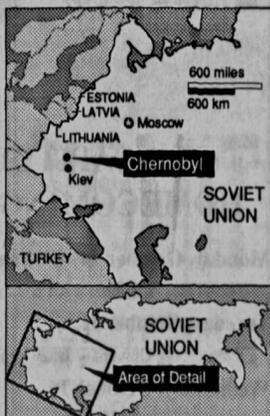

The initial fire was extinguished within a minute but hydrogen leaked into the turbine room and burst into flames, setting the roof ablaze and destroying a support beam, it said. About 390 square feet of roof collapsed.

International experts consider many of the Soviet Union's 15 nuclear plants, including Chernobyl, to be inherently unsafe because of their design. However, officials say that to shut them down would cause great economic hardship.

Paper predicts release of hostage

Neil MacFarquhar
Associated Press

NICOSIA, Cyprus — An influential Iranian newspaper reported Sunday that a Western hostage in Lebanon, possibly an American, may be freed soon. The report came as a U.N. envoy began a new mission seeking the hostages' release.

The English-language Tehran Times did not say which hostage might be freed by pro-Iranian extremists in Lebanon or when this might occur.

The paper, often reflecting the positions of Iranian President Hashemi Rafsanjani, had accurately predicted two earlier releases of hostages, but incorrectly reported that an American might be set free shortly after the release Sept. 24 of Briton Jack Mann.

The story, in the form of an interview with one of the newspaper's Lebanon correspondents, said the Shiite Muslim Party of God, or Hezbollah, was pushing for a release on humanitarian grounds despite Israel's intransigence in releasing Arab prisoners.

"I'm more optimistic than at any time before that one Western hostage, maybe an American, will be freed," the newspaper quoted its unidentified correspondent as saying.

"Maybe one American will go home soon if no unforeseen incidents take place as happened earlier," the correspondent was quoted as saying. But he added, "The slightest mistake or provocative statement from any side" could mar U.N. and Iranian efforts to free the hostages.

The newspaper did not elaborate. Hezbollah, considered the umbrella group for Shiite extremists believed to be holding most of the hostages, has linked the freedom for the at least nine Westerners to Israel's release of up to 300 Lebanese Arabs held by the Israelis or their allied militia in southern Lebanon.

Israel has first demanded information on five Israeli servicemen missing in Lebanon.

The Iranian report came the same day as the special U.N. envoy in hostage negotiations, Giandomenico Picco, arrived in Cyprus en route to Damascus, Syria.

He refused to comment on his mission, but officials from U.N. headquarters in New York said Picco was promoting Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar's intensified efforts to secure the release of all hostages and detainees.

Senior Iranian officials and others have predicted that all the hostages and detainees would be freed before the end of the year. The latest releases started in August with Briton John McCarthy and American Edward Tracy.

Baker hopes for fuller Soviet-Israeli relations

Barry Schweid
Associated Press

SHANNON, Ireland — Secretary of State James Baker, apparently near success in setting up a Middle East peace conference, will meet in Jerusalem, Israel, on Friday with Soviet Foreign Minister Boris Pankin, in the hope that Moscow is ready to establish full diplomatic ties with Israel.

We have been urging that for some time, a U.S. official said as Baker headed for the Middle East early Sunday to begin a four-nation trip to finalize terms for Arab-Israeli negotiations.

After a refueling stop in Ireland, Baker was due first in Cairo, Egypt, followed by Jordan, Syria and Israel.

Palestinians, meanwhile, were expected to announce within the next few days their willingness to attend the conference as part of a joint delegation with Jordan. The latest holdouts, they evidently agreed on a formula with Baker in talks at the State Department on Thursday and Friday.

Baker's scheduling of a meeting with Pankin in Jerusalem signals that the United States and the Soviet Union may finally be ready to announce the date of the peace talks. At the Moscow summit in July, the two nations, serving as co-sponsors, set October as their target.

Even with the progress, the U.S. official told reporters there was still no decision on where the peace conference would be held.

"We have some ideas," said the official, who spoke on condition of anonymity.

Pankin, who will meet Baker Friday, will be making his own swing through the Middle East.

The Soviets in recent years have reversed much of their hostility to Israel. In 1967, upon Israel's victory over Egypt, Jordan and Syria, the Soviets broke relations with Jerusalem. Under President Mikhail Gorbachev, the Soviets gradually renewed diplomatic contacts with Israel, and eventually exchanged diplomats. Full embassies are not yet in operation.

Apart from the diplomatic issues, Baker is keeping an eye out for terrorist incidents.

Referring to what he called "highly classified information," Baker said Thursday that "as we get closer and closer to the end of October, I think . . . that you will see a tendency on the part of rejectionists or extremists across the region to take actions designed to disrupt the possibilities for peace."

G7 nations agree to help economy

Robert H. Reid
Associated Press

BANGKOK, Thailand — The biggest industrial democracies agreed Sunday on what they called a historic plan to help the Soviet Union build a market economy, but they made no specific promises of additional financial aid.

The Group of Seven said deputy finance ministers from their countries would go to Moscow to discuss programs for economic reconstruction. French officials said the visit would begin in a week to 10 days.

The agreement was reached after two days of talks between the Soviets and the finance ministers of the Group of Seven nations — the United States, Japan, Germany, France, Italy, Canada and Britain.

Officials described the meeting as historic because it marked the first time the Soviet Union had sought such broad help in remodeling its economy along Western lines.

"What we are seeing here is really for the first time the Soviet Union engaging the West in a level of detail which is unprecedented," Alan Greenspan, chairman of the U.S. Federal Reserve Board, told reporters. "We are actively engaged in discussions on a range of issues which will shift a cent-ally planned economy to a market economy."

Grigory Yavlinsky, leader of the Soviet delegation, said, "The goals we jointly want to achieve are not far from us."

Greenspan cautioned that the agreement "is not a watershed" but only "the beginning of what is going to be a very long and very detailed process."

U.S. Treasury Secretary Nicholas Brady refused to estimate a timetable for rebuilding the Soviet economy. But he said the United States and the other industrial powers "will be as responsive as we possibly can in the shortest space of time."

Several officials said the economic crisis has been worsened by the Soviets' lack of detailed information on their economy and unfamiliarity with generally accepted economic practices.

Canadian Finance Minister Donald Mazankowski said he was encouraged the Soviets want to establish "the basic fundamentals for a truly market-oriented economy."

Donald LaMont, British chancellor of the exchequer, said he believed Moscow wanted the Group of Seven's financial expertise and international endorsement for stringent economic policies that may not be favorably received by the Soviet public.

In some former Soviet bloc countries, for instance, the shift to market economies has brought inflation, and people have lost jobs because of the shutdown of inefficient businesses.

The Soviets face an immediate problem of ensuring adequate food and medical supplies through the winter. Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev has asked for $10 billion in short-term aid.

Japan has offered $500 million in aid, and the European Community $2.4 billion in loans and shipments of food and medicine. The United States pledged $2.5 billion in loans for food purchases.

Asked if the aid already committed would be enough, Viktor Geraschenko, chairman of the Soviet State Bank, replied, "It depends on how cold the winter will be."

German officials said the Soviets did not make clear how they planned to continue repaying their foreign debt, estimated at $68 billion, but gave assurances that both Moscow and the breakaway republics were aware of their responsibilities.

French Economics Minister Pierre Berezogovoy said the Soviets can meet their debt payments for two more months.

Ships sail west; Spain re-enacts historic voyage

Dennis Doyle
Associated Press

HUELVA, Spain — For the second time in history, Spain on Sunday sent the Nina, the Pinta and the Santa Maria westward from the mouth of the Rio Tinto. This time, however, the seafarers knew where they were headed.

Crown Prince Felipe watched as replicas of the three ships — with 80 crew members aboard — embarked on a state-funded re-enactment of Christopher Columbus' 1492 voyage across the Atlantic.

The replicas are the flagships — literally and figuratively — for Spain's 500th anniversary commemoration of Columbus' journey, which changed both Europe and America forever. The Italian navigator was looking for a new route to the Far East.

The "Discovery Ships" left a day after the 499th anniversary of Columbus' landfall on San Salvador Island in the Bahamas.

They are to lead a procession of tall ships into New York harbor as part of next year's Fourth of July celebration.

Modern tugboats led the ships toward the open sea as a colorful escort of small craft blared salutes. A flamenco artist sang a doleful send-off.

"Unfurl the mainsail in the name of the Holy Trinity!" an officer ordered. "May God protect us!"

The departure was carried live on national television. Felipe, heir to the Spanish throne, watched from a dockside reviewing stand after touring the Santa Maria with Capt. Santiago Bolivar.

Spanish monarchs Ferdinand and Isabella helped finance the Aug. 3, 1492, voyage from Palos de la Frontiera, a few miles upriver from Huelva in southwest Spain.

Like the first flotilla, the modern expedition is to stop over in the Canary Islands off the African coast before heading for the Bahamas.

Spain is investing billions of dollars to prepare for events it hopes will grab the world's attention next year.

Seville, the Spanish empire's former administrative center, is mounting Expo '92. The April 20-Oct. 12 exposition is shaping up to be the biggest ever.

Spain's second city, Barcelona, will host the Summer Olympic Games from July 25 to Aug. 9.

BENNETT DEBATE

Still flinging mud

William Bennett may have left Iowa City, but he hasn't stopped making misleading statements about what happened during his visit here.

In his speech at Hancher last Tuesday, Bennett indicated that he did not think that "political correctness" was a problem at the University of Iowa. However, an article in Friday's Daily Iowan ["Bennett has impression of 'several UIs,'" October 11] reported that after the debate here, which clearly made him uncomfortable, Bennett "complained to the UI administration about the makeup of the panel after the debate and was told that if the specific panelists had not been included, the event would have been disrupted by activists." When Bennett asked, "Why couldn't

The debate was billed as a "shoot-out" between people of drastically opposed political positions. Since the event was intended to generate controversy, there was no reason for the panel to be ideologically balanced.

you have removed them?" he was told, "We don't do that." Bennett's conclusion: "Well then, they're running the university." It is unfortunate that the article did not report who in the administration made these comments to him, and then check with that person as to their accuracy and what they were based on. Be that as it may, the debate was billed from the start as a "shoot-out" between people of drastically opposed political positions. Since the event was intended to generate controversy, there was no reason for the panel to be ideologically balanced. That it was not is not the fault of the debate participants or of sinister "activists" controlling university affairs from the shadows.

Bennett also took advantage of the post-debate phone interview to get in the last word against his opponents. Bennett stated that "Somebody needs to explain to these folks what a debate involves; it doesn't mean you stand up and start calling somebody names." He then proceeded to do just that, referring to his opponents "unsophisticated" and "not ready for prime time."

As the recipient of a Ph.D. in philosophy, Bennett must realize that there is a big difference between characterizing someone's ideas as racist and calling them personally a racist. The former does not constitute a de facto personal attack, nor does it automatically cut off discussion. Moreover, as one of the panelists pointed out, the term "politically correct" itself can also be used as an epithet.

Bennett's reaction to what happened here in Iowa City provides further evidence of his overall strategy: distortion, innuendo, and unfounded assertions.

Vote YES, tomorrow

To the Editor:

Voters in Iowa City will be asked on October 15, 1991, to approve a $11.1 million dollar bond issue. This bond issue is designed to add 10 new classrooms at City High, an 850 seat auditorium at West High, 7 new classrooms at South East Junior High, an 850 seat auditorium at West High, 7 new classrooms at South East Junior High, fine arts classrooms and a new cafeteria at City High, and one new elementary school.

Although this bond issue offers no improvements in district athletic facilities, it does indeed offer voters the opportunity to improve the classroom and fine arts needs of our youngsters for many years to come.

As past presidents of the Iowa City Schools Athletic Booster Club, we want the voters of Iowa City to know that we endorse approval of this bond issue. Perhaps the Latin phrase "a sound mind in a sound body" best describes our feelings. We feel the school district has an obligation to provide youngsters the opportunity to excel both in the classroom and in their pursuit of extra-curricular activities which includes their athletic interest.

The school district has responded to the 1988 Athletic Facilities Issues Committee's recommendations by bringing all district athletic facilities up to minimum standards for existing competition requirements. The district, working jointly with the Iowa City Schools Athletic Booster Club, has just recently constructed a new multi-use athletic facility at West High School. These improvements were all accomplished during very difficult financial times for the district.

We ask that all voters, especially those that support the athletic interest of the district, support approval of the October 15th bond issue. The young people of this district are the greatest resource we have and the extra $60-100 per year that most district homeowners will pay is well worth the needs that will be met with the passage of this bond issue.

KIM PAINTER

UI must maintain academic freedom

This is a sorry admission to make, but after two weeks of media carpet bombing, it must be said: Iowa does nothing so well as climb up on the sagging back of its high horse to play the offended party. Currently, every monkey who owns a suit and can fake a reputation — from Oelwein to Ankeny, from the governor's mansion to Cedar Rapids — is doing just that.

What offended us so grievously? What put the state's citizens at odds with an institution whose graduates — even when they do leave Iowa — bring it national and international renown? A film, ladies and gentlemen. A cinematic rendering of life, a fantasia from Deutschland. "Taxi zum Klo" has done, unintentionally and ironically, what good films were once expected to do. We have cast off our many grave problems for more diverting sport.

"Gay porn film." "Two men urinating on each other." All eyes focus with peculiar greed on a small department at the UI that dared to show the film, and thus offended the tender sensibilities of Iowa's own. It seems to me that, if our sensibilities get any more tender, we will have to seal this state in a giant Zip-loc bag to keep all the offensive particles out.

The film's graphic depictions disturbed many people, myself included. The fact is, however, that "Taxi zum Klo" was well-received in arenas that matter to filmmakers. So have been innumerable films that are considered — even by critics who review and revere cinema — disturbing.

But the Des Moines Register, driven by its fuel of choice lately — a high-octane blend of ethics and sales lust — gave page-one coverage to students who felt coerced into viewing the film. In response, the state is embroiled in an uproar.

Register columnist David Yepsen rolled up his sleeves (though he neglected to reveal whether he wears denim or pinpoint oxford — enquiring minds want to know, big boy) and entered the ring. He threw typical, below-the-belt punches at the chablis-drinking snobs of Iowa City, going so far as to describe the state's outraged masses as "the great unwashed." His piece threatened the German department with extinction and the UI with further budget cuts.

Enter Johnson County Attorney J. Patrick White. Left unattended and bored at Donutland for too long, he decided to launch an inquiry into whether the film's showing violated Iowa state obscenity laws.

A call I received reveals the less-than-aggressive position on obscenity taken by White's office in the recent past. An obscenity complaint was filed during the "gerbil quilt" display on campus in August. This mockery of the AIDS memorial quilt was posted at the IMU along with obscene material defaming gay men. An assistant to White, Susan Wright, responded that it was "the university's business." Interference, she claimed, would create a "freedom of speech" issue.

Considering the revolting nature of the material, which appeared in the most public venue on campus during freshman orientation week, the response is puzzling. White apparently thinks that gay males may be bashed with impunity by numbskulls displaying obscene falsehoods on UI property — under the aegis of free speech. That brand of obscenity is "the university's business." If a film including offbeat sex acts between men is shown, one that does not feature small mammals in supporting roles, it must be investigated for illegal obscenity. This despite the fact that classroom assignments are the most private of the university's business, and despite White's high regard for the First Amendment rights of right-wing hoods.

The question Iowans must answer in the wake of such hysterical public reaction is a simple one. Its importance cannot be overstated: Can Iowans survive being disturbed? Have we become so insular and feeble that we must turn around after every unsettling incident to demand a head on a plate, preferably served up with fanfare by our print media?

President of the state Board of Regents Marvin Pomerantz says no. We won't fire anybody. He explains, "We could find ourselves in the untenable position of being forced to reinstate a professor, grant back pay and full status instead of making the point we'd like to make — that it's in poor taste, poor judgment and not appropriate." Oh. So. If we fire somebody over this, which is perfectly justifiable, we might have to pay for it, which is untenable. Thank you for making your position on academic freedom so clear. Happy faculty recruiting season to all UI deans and DEOs: the controversy made National Public Radio.

If it weren't awful, it would be laughable. The film — tagged by Clark Blaise (director of the UI's International Writing Program) in the October 6th Register as "one campy little film" — could bring a Big Ten University to abjure freedom of expression in such a transparently craven manner is stunning.

This university leaps to defend the right of local hate mongers to publish and post innumerable disgusting, unimaginative lies about homosexuals. "Free speech," they say.

Last October, this university was found guilty in federal court of concealing sexual harassment and collegial tyranny in the case of Dr. Jeag Jew. "Academic freedom," they said.

More recently, many members of the UI community have bought into a collective delusion sweeping the nation that a "stifling ideology of political correctness" is attempting to smother them. On this campus, the threat has taken the form of a measly three-credit diversity requirement. "Tyranny," they cry.

Given all of that, how can we even think of censoring a department for showing this film?

The UI's modified heads-will-roll posture on the showing of "Taxi zum Klo" comes as no shock to the world. Even so, we owe it to our ideals to publicly admit to the economic source of our timidity, acknowledge our inability to finance a truly free environment, and move from there to shore up the blasted morale of our academic units.

Helms makes Senate accountable to voters

Three cheers for Jesse Helms! He made the U.S. senators vote specifically on how they are spending the taxpayers' money. The refrain of an old popular song was probably ringing in their ears: "I didn't wanna do it. I didn't wanna do it."

It wasn't that they didn't wanna spend the money — it was that they didn't wanna take responsibility for precisely how it is being spent. But they did.

By 68 to 28, the Senate passed an amendment offered by Sen. Helms (R-N.C.) to bar the National Endowment for the Arts (NEA) from spending taxpayers' dollars for "patently offensive" art or stage performances depicting sexual or excretory activities. The Helms amendment was based on the Supreme Court guidelines set forth in the case of FCC vs. Pacifica.

The inherent reasonableness and righteousness of the Helms resolution brought into line even such ultra-liberal senators as Barbara Mikulski (D-Md.), Christopher Dodd (D-Conn.), Herbert Kohl (D-Wis.) and presidential hopeful Bob Kerry (D-Neb.). Presidential aspirant Tom Harkin (D-Iowa) was conveniently absent.

Sen. Don Nickles (R-Okla.), who supported the Helms amendment, said, "I do not even know how to talk about what the NEA is funding because it is so filthy, so rotten, so perverse, that it is difficult to convey it without using language that I will not read."

Helms had the same problem in trying to describe what his amendment would prohibit. "The same newspaper that falsely accuse me of censorship," he said, "will not publish the pictures and the rottenness in the papers. The television stations will not carry it on their stations because they know the FCC would knock them off the air first thing tomorrow morning if they did. It is just that bad."

"There is nothing 'arty' about somebody going on the stage and urinating. That is one of the pieces of 'art' that is being subsidized by the National Endowment for the Arts."

We will probably be reading newspaper editorial across the country about how Helms is "censoring" art — even Shakespeare! How primitive can he be! But the liberals who weep crocodile tears about "Shakespeare" being denied taxpayer funds probably will not tell the truth about how an NEA grant is perverting Shakespeare.

The NEA gave $323,000 of taxpayers' money to the New York Shakespeare Festival, which included a presentation of "A Midsummer Night's Dream" by a Portuguese-speaking cast of actors who appear on stage nude, topless or in G-strings. The audiences may not understand Portuguese, but, according to the New York Daily News, "Body language is another thing."

During last year's congressional session, Congress gave the NEA an undeserved raise and, without threatening any cutoff of funds, meekly asked the agency to adhere to "general standards of decency."

To the acclaim of the liberal media, NEA Chairman John Frohnmayer responded that he would not be a "Decency Czar" and then went on to give taxpayers' grants this year to more of the same kind of alleged "art" that Americans find so patently offensive.

The NEA gave a $637,000 grant to the New York State Arts Council, which allocated some of this taxpayers' money to help promote a film called "Jesus Christ Condom."

Shown at the Third Annual New York International Festival of Gay and Lesbian Films, the movie depicts an AIDS activist dressed up as Jesus Christ and wearing a crown of thorns, who carries on a 30-minute tirade against Christianity while standing on the steps of St. Patrick's Cathedral. Sexually explicit lines are recited by the actor portraying Christ while promoting condoms, and later a member of ACT-UP crumbles the Holy Communion and steps on it.

The NEA gave a $12,000 grant to the San Francisco International Lesbian and Gay Film Festival. The NEA could not be surprised as to what it was funding; the NEA gave previous grants to this outfit in 1988, 1989 and 1990.

The NEA gave $250,000 to the PBS-TV "Point of View" series, which included the film "Tongues Untied," plus $5,000 to this film's producer. An advocacy piece promoting homosexuality among blacks, "Tongues Untied" is so offensive that 206 of the 341 PBS stations did not broadcast it, and another 91 delayed it until after 11 p.m.

The NEA gave $25,000 to an explicit, violent and altogether disgusting movie entitled "Poison," which the theaters described as about "deviance" and the producer bragged is about "bashed homocroticism."

Frohnmayer is so out of touch with public opinion outside the Beltway that he held a news conference on Good Friday to assert that "Poison" is "entirely consistent with everything I have always stood for and tried to articulate in the in the agency."

Congressional liberals are threatening to remove the Helms amendment in the Senate-House conference committee. This will be a good test of whether Congress has any respect for the American taxpayer.

THOMAS NOMINATION

Hill passes polygraph, won't submit results

Some Democratic senators find it telling that Hill passed the lie detector test.

William M. Welch
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Anita Hill on Sunday passed a lie detector test on her statements that Supreme Court nominee Clarence Thomas made sexually explicit remarks to her, a polygraph expert said.

Paul Minor, president of American International Security Corp. of Fairfax, Va., told reporters outside the Senate Judiciary Committee hearing room that he had concluded she was telling the truth in her accusations that Thomas sexually harassed her.

Such tests are not universally admissible in court. One of Hill's attorneys, Charles Ogletree, said they would not formally submit the results to the committee.

Minor said he put four questions to Hill, asking if she had lied in her testimony or fabricated remarks that she attributed to Thomas.

"She answered no. There was no indication of deception to any of the relevant questions..." Minor said outside the hearing room. "It's therefore my opinion Hill is truthful."

Hill has testified that when she worked for Thomas at two government jobs in the early 1980s, he pressed her for dates and used graphic sexual language in conversation with her.

Thomas has emphatically denied each of Hill's allegations.

The questions on the polygraph test were:

■ Have you deliberately lied to me about Clarence Thomas?

■ Are you fabricating the allegation that Clarence Thomas discussed pornographic material with you?

■ Are you lying to me about the various topics that Clarence Thomas mentioned to you regarding specific sexual acts?

■ Are you lying to me about Clarence Thomas making references to you about the size of his penis?

Bush, asked earlier in the day whether both Thomas and Hill should take polygraph tests, said, "I think it's a stupid idea."

He said, "If the idea is challenging the word of one over another, to use the lie detector test in that way, I reject it."

Sen. Patrick Leahy, a Vermont Democrat who is on the Judiciary Committee, called the polygraph result a "very significant development."

"It's not important that it be formally entered in the record," said Sen. Herb Kohl, D-Wisc., who also is on the committee. "We all know."

Ogletree, a Harvard law professor, said Hill wanted to take the test in light of the attacks made on her motives and integrity by Republican senators defending Thomas.

"She wanted to face the issue. She would live by the results," Ogletree said.

Bruce Franson of West Newbury, Mass., watches television at a department store as University of Oklahoma law Professor Anita Hill testifies before the Senate Judiciary Committee.

More women than men believe Hill

Associated Press

NEW YORK — In a poll released Sunday, a majority of Americans said they were not inclined to believe the charges against Supreme Court nominee Clarence Thomas. More men than women rejected Anita Hill's sexual harassment allegations against him.

The ABC News-Washington Post poll was taken Saturday, after Hill and Thomas appeared before the Senate Judiciary Committee but before the testimony of two panels of witnesses — one defending Thomas and the other supporting Hill.

Fifty-five percent of those surveyed didn't believe the sexual harassment allegations against Thomas, 34 percent accepted Hill's allegations as true and 12 percent had no opinion.

Men said they believed Thomas' denials by 56 percent to 20 percent, with 24 percent undecided. Among women, 38 percent believed Thomas, 28 percent supported Hill and 33 percent were undecided.

The poll's analysts said about half of those questioned said Thomas should be confirmed, a percentage roughly unchanged from previous polls. But for the first time a "statistically meaningful split" along gender lines has developed on this question, they said.

Among men, those who believe Thomas should be confirmed rose from 51 percent to 59 percent and opposition rose from 23 percent to 28 percent since Wednesday. The percentage of women who believe Thomas should be confirmed remained at 43 percent, with opposition rising from 23 percent to 31 percent.

Women were twice as likely to be undecided on whether he should be confirmed, at 26 percent compared with 13 percent of men.

Kennedy argues charge of racism

William M. Welch
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Clarence Thomas' charge of racial stereotypes and racism against his accusers drew answers Sunday in the views of a black woman and a response from one Democratic senator who had been silent for much of the Senate Judiciary Committee proceedings.

"The issue isn't racism; it's about sexual harassment," said Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., in one of the most gripping moments of Sunday's hearing.

Thomas a day earlier had taken up racism as a line of defense, raging that Anita Hill's detailed allegations of sexual harassment "play into racist, bigoted stereotypes."

The embattled Supreme Court nominee had told the Senate Judiciary Committee that charges of sexual impropriety by a black man such as himself evoke more than a century of ugly racial history and were being played out in what amounted to "a high-tech lynching," televised before the nation.

His remarks had come as Thomas' Republican partisans attacked her credibility. But on Sunday, as Hill's friends vouched for her credibility, Kennedy lashed out at the Republican assault and at Thomas' use of racism as a defense.

He noted that both the accuser and the accused were black and said there was no basis to suggest racial motivation against another black. He linked the racism charge to "unsubstantiated" attacks on Hill's credibility by Republican senators.

"They're unworthy, and quite frankly I hope we're not going to hear a lot more about racism as we consider this nominee," Kennedy said. "The fact is these points of sexual harassment are by an Afro-American, against an Afro-American."

"The issue isn't discrimination and racism," Kennedy said. "It's about sexual harassment, and I hope we can keep our eye on that particular issue."

THOMAS

her disclosed that they, too, had been victimized.

"Being a black woman you know you have to put up with a lot," Elgin Wells told the committee of 14 white male senators. "So you put your teeth and you do it," she said, adding that she had been "abused in the workplace" more than once.

The contrast in testimony was striking.

Hill said that Clarence Thomas had repeatedly asked her out, Hirschner said. "She told me that of course she had refused, but he wouldn't take no for an answer."

Hirschner said Hill told her that Thomas repeated his entreaties, saying "I'm your type, I'm your kind of man and you refuse to admit it."

More than six hours later came an entirely different story, one depicting Thomas as a man completely incapable of such action — and Hill as anything but a meek victim.

"I know he did no such thing," said Nancy Elizabeth Fitch, a former assistant to him at the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission. "I trust Judge Thomas completely."

J.C. Alvarez, another former aide to Thomas, called Hill opinionated, arrogant and aloof, and said her former boss was being "mugged in broad daylight."

Said Phyllis Berry Myers, another aide, "Never has anyone raised allegations such as Anita has."

Several senators asked if Hill had a romantic interest in Thomas. Fitch said no, but Myers said yes. Sen. Alan Simpson, R-Wyo., stressed that although Hill made numerous calls to Thomas after the alleged harassment, they stopped when she learned in the fall of 1987 that he had gotten married.

The testimony led, as well, to attempts by Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., to shield Hill from further attack. He said the panel should be "sensitive to the attempts of character assassination of Professor Hill." Later, he and Simpson exchanged barbs about whether supporters of Thomas or his opponents were using unethical tactics.

Hill has testified that Thomas repeatedly pressed her for dates and made graphic sexual references in conversation, but never touched her. Thomas has vehemently denied all her allegations.

Bush said he had been glued to the televised hearings.

SPORTS QUIZ

Q Who was the Iowa football coach the last time the Hawkeyes lost to Wisconsin?

Answer: found on page 2B.

Twins clinch pennant, sweep in SkyDome

Jim Donaghy
Associated Press

TORONTO — It's Twins time again!

Minnesota's amazing run from worst to first got even better Sunday with an 8-5 victory over Toronto in Game 5 of the American League pennant.

It's the Twins' second unlikely league championship in five seasons and puts them into the World Series starting next Saturday against either Atlanta or Pittsburgh.

The Twins, just as they have done all season, won with a team effort and with playoff MVP Kirby Puckett leading the way.

"At the start of the playoffs people said I wasn't swinging well, but that was blown out of proportion," said Puckett, who had nine hits. "I just kept swinging."

And once Puckett started swinging, the Twins just kept winning, including a three-game sweep at the SkyDome.

Minnesota rallied from a 5-2 deficit to tie and won the game with three runs in the eighth inning.

Greg Gagne singled with one out in the eighth but was caught stealing. But Dan Gladden followed with a single and stole second before a walk to Chuck Knoblauch.

Puckett, who homered in the first, then broke a 5-5 tie with a single to right field and the runners moved up on the throw home. Kent Hrbek, in a 1-for-19 slump, followed with a two-run single to settle matters.

"I'd like to play the Braves," Hrbek said. "I'm sure everyone in baseball would like to see that confrontation."

Reliever David West pitched three strong innings for the victory. Carl Willis, another bullpen surprise, got three outs and Rick Aguilera finished for his third save as the Twins won their third AL pennant. They beat the St. Louis Cardinals in 1987 to win their only World Series and lost to the Los Angeles Dodgers in 1965.

"Everybody contributed," Kelly said. "The bullpen was great all week and so was the defense."

It was another postseason disappointment for the Blue Jays, who lost in the playoffs in 1985 and 1989.

"We didn't play well all week," manager Cito Gaston said. "We left runners on base, made errors. They just outplayed us and I congratulate Tom Kelly on preparing his team so well."

Puckett gave the Twins a 1-0 lead in the first inning with a home run and two passed balls by Borders led to Mack's RBI single in the second.

"Our pitchers did the job all year and again today," Puckett said. "I knew there was something special about this team. I'm not going to lie to you and say I knew we were going to the World Series, but I felt good."

The capacity crowd was silent until Gaston got some attention after the second inning by arguing with home plate umpire Mike Reilly over a strikeout by Candy

FIELD HOCKEY

Iowa wins not enough for Beglin

Jay Nanda
Daily Iowan

An unbeaten record, a No. 4 ranking, and a pair of shutout victories over the weekend. What more could a team ask for?

Plenty, says Iowa field hockey coach Beth Beglin.

After seeing her Iowa Hawkeyes improve to 11-0 with a 2-0 overtime win over Michigan and a 4-0 triumph against Michigan State in Ann Arbor, Mich., Beglin promised one thing.

"Practices will be really intense this week," she said, as the Hawkeyes prepare for No. 13 Temple and No. 1 Old Dominion next weekend in Philadelphia.

The cause of Beglin's unhappiness came about as she saw the Wolverines (5-6, 1-3) play the Hawkeyes to a scoreless standstill at the end of the 70-minute regulation. Furthermore, Iowa was outcornered for the first time this season, as Michigan earned eight penalty corners to the Hawkeyes' seven.

"We didn't play well and Michigan was fired up," Beglin said. "That's the best they've ever played against us. Nothing was ever in synch. We came out as flat as you could get. We decided to waste the entire 70 minutes and wait for the overtime to make something happen."

In the 10 minute extra-session, junior Amy Fowler connected off a direct penalty corner with 5:43 remaining, with assists by Jibs Thorson and Jamie Rofrano. Then with 4:18 to go, Rofrano took a feed from senior Lisa Sweeney to account for the 2-0 shutout. It was Iowa's third overtime win of the year in as many tries.

The wins put the Hawkeyes at 5-0 in the Midwest Collegiate Field Hockey Conference.

"Thanks to several great saves by Eileen Moyer, we managed to salvage the win," Beglin said. Moyer stopped six Wolverine shots, while Michigan goalie Nicole Hoover had 11 saves. The Hawkeyes could also thank the fact that Michigan had three goals disallowed — two for offside and another on a stick violation.

Against the Spartans (3-7, 0-4) on Saturday, Iowa fared a little better by scoring a pair of goals in each half for a 4-0 win.

When Iowa last played Michigan State on Sept. 28, the Hawkeyes did not allow a single corner or shot on goal in a 7-0 blowout. And although the Hawkeyes repeated their corner dominance, Beglin found other things to be concerned with.

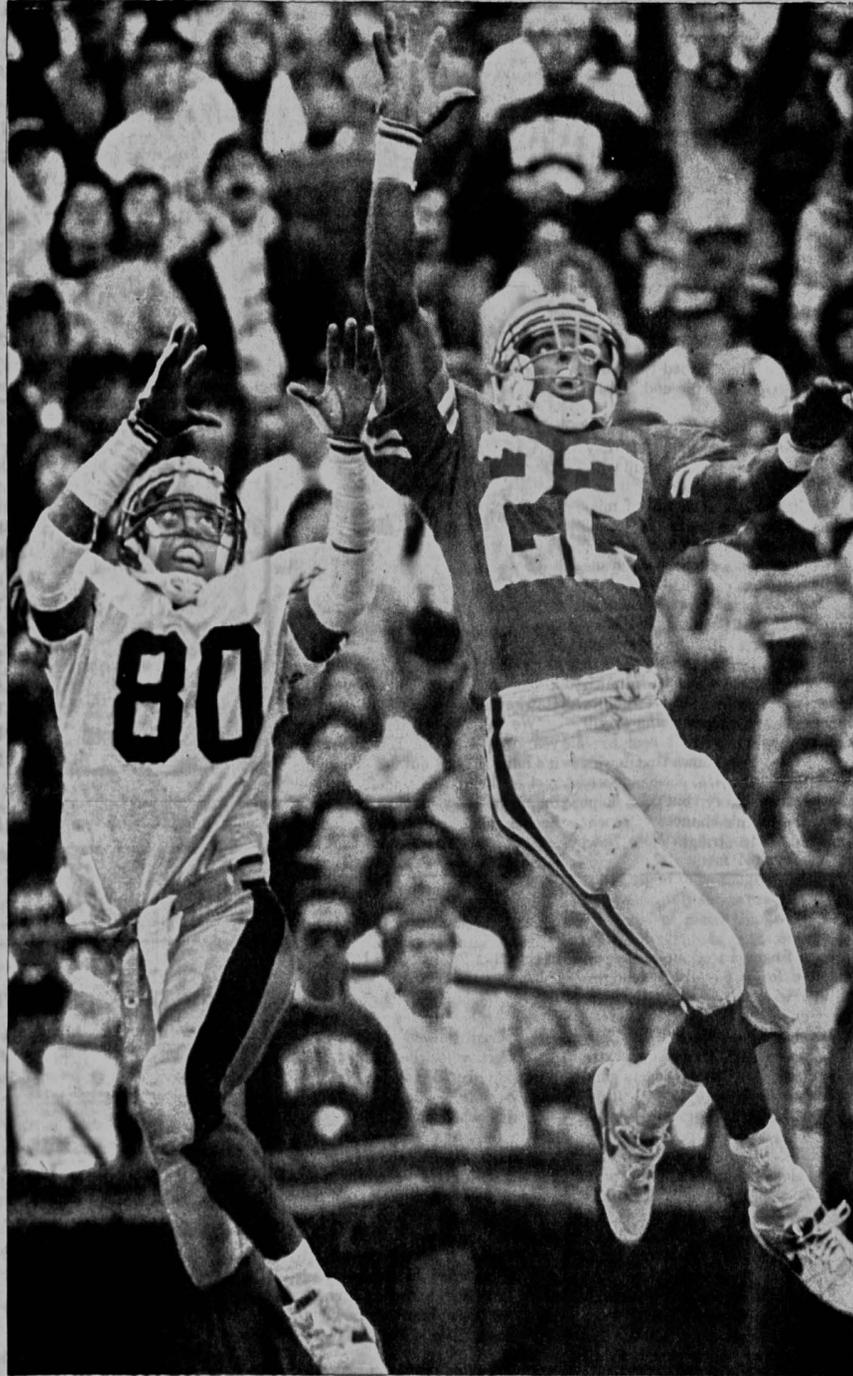

"We've been averaging a lot more shots and corners," she said of outshooting the Spartans 15-5 and only earning eight corners.

Sophomore Amy Aaronson got things started with 7:13 left in the first half when she "beat the sweeper" (goalie Sara Humpage) and sent a beautiful pass over to Lisa Sweeney, according to Beglin, for a 1-0 lead. "Lisa could have dribbled the ball in."

Sophomore Heather Bryant blasted a penalty corner past Humpage at the 4:46 mark for a 2-0 lead before Sweeney struck again to open the second half scoring.

"Lisa took the ball down the left side and just let loose a blast," Beglin explained of Iowa's third goal, at the 27:03 mark.

"I'm very concerned with our lack of aggressiveness and our inability to create corner opportunities," Beglin reiterated. "That's a concern this week as we head off to play Temple and ODU."

MADISON, Wis. — Somebody forgot to tell the Iowa Hawkeyes they were favored to beat the Wisconsin Badgers by 19 points Saturday.

Or maybe somebody neglected to inform the Badgers they were three-touchdown underdogs.

Is anyone confused about the difference?

If so, you're surely not the only one. For the first 59 minutes of Iowa's 10-6 squeaker at Camp Randall Stadium, both the Badgers and the No. 17 Hawkeyes appeared perplexed as to who was going to win its first Big Ten game of the year.

Perhaps the two teams weren't sure as to which holiday is just around the corner. By committing five turnovers in the first half, including four interceptions by quarterback Matt Rodgers, the Hawkeyes seemed to be in the Christmas spirit of giving.

However, the Badgers were apparently not in the receiving mood, as they refused to help their own cause by not gaining a first down until 5:42 remained in the first half — the sixth time they had the ball.

But finally, The Drive surfaced. Trailing 6-3 with 4:30 left in the MADISON, Wis. — Mike Saunders can go home now. Not bad for someone who almost couldn't make the trip here in the first place.

Saunders, a Milton, Wis., native, propelled the 17th-rated Hawkeyes to a 10-6 nail-biter Saturday over the unranked Wisconsin Badgers when he turned a 4th-and-5 pass from Matt Rodgers into a 14-yard winning touchdown with :44 left in the game. It was Iowa's seventh straight defeat of the Badgers.

The senior did not start at his normal starting tailback position — and barely made the journey with his teammates — after suffering torn cartilage in his ribs during Iowa's 43-24 loss to Michigan Oct. 5. But because his ribs were not cracked, as was feared earlier in the week, Saunders was given the chance to play in front of 75,053 home folks in Camp Randall Stadium.

Saunders rushed for just 44 yards on 11 carries and caught seven passes for 38 more. But it was his last reception, which accounted for the only Iowa touchdown of the day, that would be the lone highlight in a game that made one wonder when, if ever, the Hawkeyes would receive a wakeup call.

"This gives me an opportunity to go home on breaks and not get laughed out of the state," Saunders responded to accusations of ATLANTA — Just when it looked like the Atlanta Braves had Pittsburgh on the run, the Pirates pulled it out.

Mike LaValliere singled home the tie-breaking run with two outs in the 10th inning Sunday night and the Pirates won in Atlanta for the first time this year, beating the Braves 3-2 to tie the NL playoffs at two games each.

After Atlanta got the crazed crowd of 51,109 chanting and cheering with two quick runs in the first inning, Pirate pitchers quieted the Braves' bats and the Pittsburgh Pirates silenced the fans.

In the 10th, Andy Van Slyke drew a four-pitch walk as the first batter facing reliever Kent Mercker and stole second with two outs. Steve Buechele, who already had three hits, walked. Mark Wohlers relieved and LaValliere, batting for Don Slaught, singled sharply to center field. Van Slyke scored easily and Buechele was thrown out at the plate trying to follow him.

Stan Belinda held on for two innings for the victory. He retired pinch-hitter Jerry Willard with a runner on second to end the ninth and watched Lonnie Smith fly out to the right field wall to start the 10th.

The Pirates, baseball's best road team this season, were 0-7 in Atlanta this year. Now even, they will send Zane Smith against Tom Glavine in Monday's Game 5. Pittsburgh ace Doug Drabek, still unable to pitch because of a hamstring injury, is scheduled for Game 6 back in Pittsburgh.

The fans began chanting earlier, louder and more often than they did Saturday and, as they had all during the stretch, again seemed to inspire their team from the start.

Atlanta's Dave Justice scores as the ball eludes Pittsburgh's Don Slaught in Game 4 of the NLCS.

The Braves, for the 10th time in the last 15 home games, scored in the first inning. In their last 15 road games, they scored only twice in their first at-bat.

This time, Smith hit Randy Tomlin's second pitch to deep right-center field, and the ball bounced over the fence for a double.

Terry Pendleton followed with a fly ball to right field that Bobby Bonilla caught, and he unleashed a strong throw to third. Smith dove in just ahead of the tag, although Pirates manager Jim Leyland went out to argue with umpire Doug Harvey.

With the infield playing in at the corners and back up the middle, Ron Gant's grounder to shortstop scored Smith. The Braves didn't stop there, as consecutive singles by David Justice, Brian Hunter and Greg Olson made it 2-0.

SAUNDERS: Saves the day

 being a traitor. "Everyone has their choices (of schools) to make and hopefully today I showed I made the right choice."
 After a Jason Olejniczak interception gave the Hawkeyes the ball at the Badger 43 with 4:30 left, Rodgers engineered Iowa on what would be their final crack at erasing a 6-3 deficit.
 With no timeouts remaining on 4th-and-5, Saunders cut across the middle of the field, caught Rodgers' pass at the 10-yard-line and out-raced Badger sophomore strong safety Reggie Holt into the left corner of the end zone.
 "That's why people play this game," Saunders said. "You can't beat a feeling like that. When you've been playing football for awhile, it just kind of comes old hat to you. You know what you've gotta do and you just try to do it the best you can."

 "The guy that was on Saunders did a super job," Coach Hayden Fry said. "Had Matt not thrown a perfect pass, it would have been incomplete."
 The Hawkeyes, which had out-scored their opponents 164-70 prior to Saturday, took an uncharacteristically long time to get their offense going. And Saunders admitted that while Iowa may not have panicked prior to the winning drive, he and the rest of the players were indeed worried.
 "I don't think anyone was scared. We're a mature unit. But, oh, definitely, we were worried. Finally, we got together and said, 'Look, fellas. We're a Big Ten championship team. We gotta play like it right here.'"
 "The purpose of the play was to get the first down," Saunders added. "It was great execution.

Our offensive line picked it up and Matt got it done in the end. That's what counts."
 Still, Saunders knows that a repeat performance next Saturday versus Illinois may not end up with Iowa being as fortunate.
 "We made a season full of mistakes today," he said. "A lot of those were induced because of Wisconsin, but we also had lapses and we need to correct those."
 "You've gotta give Wisconsin credit. Some people said they shouldn't have been on the field, but they played tough. It's hard to beat a team that plays on so much emotion, 'cause if you give them a little opening, they're going to kill us like they did today."
 Saunders also knows that Iowa's winning touchdown not only preserved the victory, but also kept alive the team's chances of reaching its second straight Rose Bowl

Mike Saunders after the game. — which would have been all but killed had Wisconsin dropped the Hawkeyes to 0-2 in the Big Ten. "We went to the Rose Bowl last year with two Big Ten losses but it's hard to start out 0-2 and go the rest of the season undefeated. But today we had a lot of poise to come back and get it done. Senior leadership is what it's all about."

BADGERS: Almost upset Hawkeyes

 Fillion along the Iowa sideline for an 11-yard pickup and a first down. A few moments later, the Hawkeyes were forced to call their final timeout to set up The Play.
 On 4th-and-5 from the Badger 14-yard line, Rodgers found senior running back Mike Saunders across the middle. Saunders caught the ball and beat sophomore strong safety Reggie Holt into the left corner of the end zone with :44 left, allowing the Hawkeyes to survive a potential pre-Halloween nightmare.
 With the win, Iowa raised its record to 4-1, 1-1. Wisconsin fell to 3-2, 0-2.
 "I knew it was do or die right then," Rodgers, who completed 23 of 39 passes for 180 yards and a touchdown, said. "That's the character of this team. We came through in the clutch."
 With Iowa's offense sputtering the way it had been throughout the game, the Hawkeyes may have thought about kicking a game-tying field goal, instead of risking a disaster on either of the fourth down plays. But Fry quickly disregarded that notion.
 "I told everybody we're not kicking the damn field goal," he said. "We couldn't kick a field goal into the wind. It seemed like we were playing for field goal position instead of trying to score a touchdown. I was very upset with what was happening on the field."

 Despite his team coming out on the losing end in front of 75,053 fans, the largest Camp Randall crowd since 1986, Badger coach Barry Alvarez was glad to see Fry go for all the marbles.
 "I would have been very disappointed had he (gone for a field goal)," Alvarez said. "Hayden didn't come up here to tie. I think they still have hopes of playing in the Rose Bowl."
 Although the game ended with the Hawkeyes sitting pretty, the first three quarters were anything but.
 On Iowa's second possession of the game, the Hawkeyes had a chance to draw first blood but with the wind at his back, kicker Jeff Skillett missed a 27-yard field goal attempt wide left.
 The Badgers' offense didn't fare much better, as their first five drives ended in the same result, three plays and punt, leaving it up to Wisconsin's defense to make something happen.
 On Iowa's first play from their own 36, Rodgers stepped back to pass and overthrew a wide open Danan Hughes, into the arms of senior left cornerback Troy Vincent. Vincent, whom Alvarez said played with a broken finger, raced down the left sideline for a 65-yard touchdown return with 1:31 left in the first quarter.

 Defensive back Marquis "Bo" Porter blocked Rich Thompson's extra point try, but the Badgers had stunned the Hawkeyes with a 6-0 lead. Skillett redeemed himself with a 29-yarder to cut the lead in half, but the Hawkeyes found themselves behind at the intermission — despite edging Wisconsin in first downs, 12-1, and controlling the ball for two-thirds of the half.
 It didn't help that Iowa had minus 45 passing yards during the first 30 minutes, as well as the half's only two turnovers. But it could have been worse, as Wisconsin had a three-yard touchdown run by freshman tailback Terrell Fletcher called back because of a holding penalty.
 "Frankly, I didn't get on them as much as compliment Wisconsin for making the turnovers happen," Fry said. "We had to settle down and when we did, we executed and there wasn't anything Wisconsin could do about it."
 The second half was just as ugly, starting with an Iowa 3rd-and-4 chance at the Badger 26. Following a timeout, Rodgers intended to hit Cross, but was promptly picked off by Holt, who returned it 50 yards to the Iowa 28 with 7:12 left in the third.

 Still, freshman quarterback Jay Macias, who started for injured senior Tony Lowery, continued to be ineffective for the Badgers, and Wisconsin could not take advantage of the turnover.
 Macias, who was 2-for-10 passing in the first half, was replaced by sophomore Jay Simala late in the game. Simala's second pass attempt was intercepted by strong safety Jason Olejniczak, which set up the winning Hawkeye drive.
 Wisconsin still had a chance to pull it out after Saunders' touchdown, but Simala's pass from the Iowa 42 was knocked down by cornerback Eddie Polly as time expired.
 For the game, the Hawkeyes accumulated 24 first downs to Wisconsin's four, and more than doubled the Badgers in offensive plays, 88-43. Iowa also had the ball for 40 minutes and 20 seconds.
 "I view this as a loss," Alvarez said. "We came here to win, not to make a good showing. I don't want to keep talking about building, I want to win games. That's what the hell we practice for."
 "This was too close for comfort," tailback Lew Montgomery said. "We've got a lot of things to work on this week."

 Gaston did some serious finger pointing and was ejected by Reilly. Gene Tenace took over on the bench and Gaston lurked in the tunnel near the Toronto dugout to relay instructions from below.
 "It wasn't to get the team going," Gaston said. "In this kind of situation that's not necessary."
 With another postseason failure staring at them, the Blue Jays took the lead with three runs in the third inning off Kevin Tapani and added two more in the fourth. Tapani came into the game 0-3 against Toronto this season, including a loss in Game 2 in the Metrodome.
 Manuel Lee, booted before the game, got the Blue Jays going when he singled leading off the third to snap an 0-for-13 playoff slump. Devon White and Roberto Alomar followed with singles to score Lee, and Joe Carter tied the game with a ground-rule double down the left-field line.

 For the second straight game, Carter was limited to a DH role because of a sprained right ankle. Carter, in obvious pain, was 0-for-5 with three strikeouts in Game 4.
 "We just didn't play like we're capable of," Carter said. "It wasn't just one thing."

WOMEN'S CROSS COUNTRY

Hawkeyes take second at Indiana Invite

Steve J. Collins
Daily Iowan

After a slow start Saturday the Iowa women's cross country team blazed to a second-place finish at the Indiana Invitational in Bloomington. "Our athletes made up a lot of ground as the race went on," Coach Jerry Hassard said. "They were able to make up a lot of ground because people became fatigued by going out too fast. I was impressed with the patience our team exhibited."

Georgetown won the 18-team meet with 49 points. The Hawkeyes tallied 83 points without the services of their top runner, Tracy Dahl. The junior was held out after complaining of pain in her left achilles tendon. Rounding out the top five were Wisconsin (104), Minnesota (113) and Eastern Kentucky (186). Iowa's Jennifer Brower completed the 5K course in 17:36 to finish sixth. Other Hawkeye scorers were Tina Stec (17th), Erin Boland (22nd), Jennifer Johnson (23rd) and Christa Holmes (25th).

Hassard said he was especially impressed with the performance of Brower, who was recovering from the flu. "She ran down Wisconsin's number one runner in the late stages of the race," he said. "That's important because it shows everyone on the team that we're able to deal with Wisconsin's top runner." Since Iowa won't face Georgetown again until the NCAA championships Hassard said he was more concerned with league rivals Wisconsin and Minnesota. "After looking at the results I think we can beat Georgetown eventually, but for the most part it was good to see how we did against the schools in our region," Hassard said. Competition among team members continued to be fierce. "Both Tina Stec and Erin Boland finished higher up in our team pecking order than normal," Hassard said. "It's a good sign of things to come. I think it will encourage both of them and it should encourage Johnson and Holmes to work even harder in the coming weeks."

David Greedy/Daily Iowan

Stacy Boville was the low scorer for Iowa, shooting rounds of 81, 81 and 85 for a 247 total at the Hawkeye Invitational this weekend at Finkbine. Iowa finished eighth in the 12-team event, won by Minnesota.

WOMEN'S TENNIS

Sun shines brightly on Hawkeyes

Michael Watkins
Daily Iowan

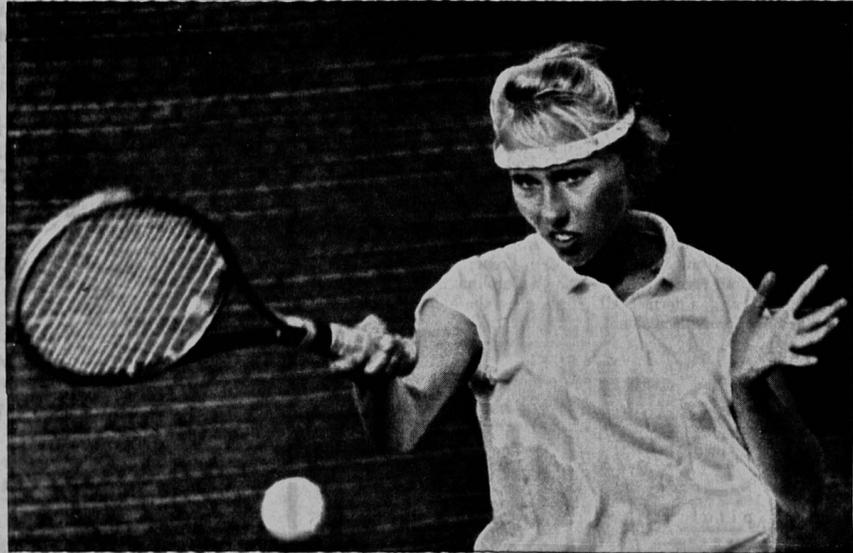

All last week, Iowa women's tennis coach Micki Schillig spent most of her time hoping for sunny weather for the weekend's Hawkeye Invitational tennis tournament.

When the tournament was over, however, and the team had captured the flight one singles title, the flight two singles title and the doubles title, she knew she had had little to worry about: The sun was out and shining brightly on her Hawkeye netters.

"Everybody played very good tennis this weekend and the weather was great," Schillig said. "Everything just seemed to click for us this weekend. It was just some awesome tennis."

After somewhat mediocre performances in her first two tournaments this season, senior Lori Hash rediscovered the confidence and execution that paced her in the No. 1 singles spot last season to roll through the competition and defeat teammate Andrea Calvert 6-3, 6-2 to take the title in flight one singles.

"I hadn't been playing up to my expectations and capabilities in the first two tournaments this year, but I pulled my game together this weekend and met the challenge," Hash said. "I had two split sets in the fourth round and semifinals where I lost my concentration. "But when it came to the third set, I just kept trying to keep my

Michael Williams/Daily Iowan

Minna Hatakka advanced to the fourth round before losing to teammate Andrea Calvert, 7-6, 6-7, 6-3 in the Hawkeye Invitational Friday at Klotz Tennis Courts. Iowa advanced two players to the finals in the first flight, one in the second and took the doubles competition.

concentration and play my game. It was kind of like a roller coaster ride."

Graduate student Catherine Wilson had a much easier time with her draw than Hash did as she didn't concede a set to her opponents in winning the second flight of singles. She defeated Western Michigan's Sarah Stanchin 6-4, 6-2 to take the title.

Hash and Wilson then teamed with one another to advance through the doubles draw and win the title 6-0, 6-4 over Western Michigan's tandem of Amy McClure and Stanchin. In their road to the finals, Hash and Wilson never dropped a set.

"I think that the veteran players were just getting tired of seeing the freshmen named in the press,"

Schillig said. "They thought that it was time to see their names in print for a change."

Speaking of the freshmen, Minna Hatakka and Laura Dvorak, who had strong showings in their previous two tournaments, ran into some trouble in their sections of the top singles flight. Hatakka struggled through her opening matches before losing to Calvert in a tight three-set battle.

Dvorak, who had been nursing tendonitis in her right forearm, breezed through her first round match with Kris Limpert of Marquette but fell in the third round to eventual semifinalist Zarina Galvan of Nebraska 6-2, 3-6, 6-3. Cara Cashon lost her first round match in flight two of singles but rebounded to make it to the finals of consolation play.

"I rested my wrist most of the week and it didn't really bother me that much in my matches," Dvorak said. "In my first match, that's about the best that I've played since mid-July. I concentrated much better than I have been."

"I really hated to see one of our players lose to a teammate, but when you're the strongest school at the tournament, it's bound to happen," Schillig said. "We knew what to expect from Marquette and Western Michigan, but we were kind of unsure about Nebraska. I expected them to be tougher."

"This definitely shows me that we are capable of great things when we put our minds and energy towards them."

WOMEN'S GOLF

Iowa finishes eighth at Hawkeye Invite

Curtis Riggs
Daily Iowan

The Iowa women's golf team took eighth place at the Hawkeye Invitational tournament held over the weekend at Finkbine.

Minnesota won the tournament with a 945 team total. Second place went to Illinois and Nebraska took third. Other Big Ten teams were Wisconsin (fourth) and Michigan State (fifth). The Hawkeyes shot rounds of 327-328-350 for a 1,005 tournament total.

On Saturday it was a sunny but brisk day for the first 36-holes. For the final 18-holes Mother Nature was not so kind. The linksters had to contend with 15 to 20 m.p.h. winds on Sunday.

Coach Diane Thomason realized that the weather was a major factor in Sunday's round but was also disappointed in the play of the team for the entire tournament.

"It has been a tough day and I'm not really pleased with our performance because I know that we can do better," she said.

Thomason also added, "I feel that the team gave it their best effort and that's all you can ask."

Stacy Boville had the low score for the Hawkeyes, shooting rounds of 81-81-85 for a 247 total. She was followed by Mary Jo Rollins with a 249 and Judy Bornholdt, who shot a 254. Jennifer McCullough shot a 256, Erin Strieck finished with 265 and Lynette Seaton shot a 270.

Boville felt that while the weather was a problem the team expected to have a much better outing.

"Today we had a lot of problems. While the weather was a factor we still didn't play as well as we wanted to," Boville said. "We had a better day yesterday but we still didn't play well the whole tournament."

Renee Heiken of Illinois was medalist for the tournament with a 223 for the 54-holes.

Thomason stressed that while the team is struggling at this point what they accomplish this fall should lead to more success next spring.

"This all just a learning experience right now," she said. "The more you play, hopefully, the more you learn."

The Game's Pure Fantasy...But The $25,000 Prize is the Real Thing!

You just made a killing on a stock nobody else seemed interested in. And that $500,000 you started with is now up to three quarters of a million. And climbing. Suddenly, on top of everything else, there's a reporter on the phone from USA TODAY who wants to know the secret of your success.

A fantasy? No! It's the kind of just-like-real experience that thousands of students are going for--in the most exciting, realistic, ultimate competition ever invented. Now you can see if you have what it takes to make it on the street. That's Wall Street.

It's The Fourth Annual AT&T Collegiate Investment Challenge. And in addition to the emotion and thrills of the market there is the invaluable learning experience it offers. There are fantastic cash awards, fabulous trips to The Bahamas and other exciting prizes--including financial calculators from Texas Instruments to help figure your way to the top.

The challenge is to build the fictitious $500,000 brokerage account you begin with on November 1, 1991 into as large a portfolio as you can by February 28, 1992 when The Challenge ends.

You're provided with rules, instructions, detailed monthly statements, and an official stock listing. Every month you receive an updated report with your ranking, so you know exactly how you stack up against everybody else. And as the competition goes on, USA TODAY publishes the current standings and interviews with players every week to its six million readers.

Now it's 4 p.m. Eastern time on Friday, February 28, 1992. The market just closed. Your phone rings. And an excited voice is telling you that you can start packing. You just won top prize in the AT&T Collegiate Investment Challenge--$25,000 in cash and a fabulous vacation trip for two on Delta Air Lines to Carnival's Crystal Palace in Nassau, The Bahamas.

Hey, it's going to happen to someone!
That someone could be you. So call 1-800-545-1970, extension 10, and sign up by October 31, 1991.
Because this is one fantasy that comes with a real payoff.

Hospice Road Races most successful ever

Jude Sunderbruch
Daily Iowan

Known nationally as an event for "everyone with a cause," the 1991 Hospice Road Races took place Sunday. Although the series of races were run under dark gray skies and with a strong wind that cut into runners' times, the atmosphere was far from dismal as runners, walkers, and others traveled through the streets and backroads of Iowa City.

Over 4,000 runners were entered in the races, according to Peg McElroy Fraser, the director of the races who called the event the "greatest success in our history." At the awards ceremony after the races Fraser announced that $106,000 had been raised by individuals, community organizations, fraternities, sororities and businesses for the Hospice and 40 agencies of the Johnson County United Way.

Several races make up the event: a half-mile event for children under seven; a mile fun run for all ages; 5K and 10K walks and runs; a half-marathon; and one mile, 5K and 10K wheelchair races.

Nan Doak Davis, a former UI track star and Coralville resident, was the first woman overall in the half-marathon with a time of 1:17:52.

"The wind was pretty bad. I felt confident, but I wasn't going to be able to get the time I wanted," Doak Davis said.

Jeff Hammons of Iowa City was the top male finisher in the 5K with a time of 15:16. Kathryn Evans of Ft. Collins, Colo. was the top female finisher with a time of 16:59.

Marc Olesen of Los Altos, Calif., took the 10K as the top male finisher with a time of 29:52. He was followed by Dan Hostage of Boulder, Colo., Bill Mangan of Albuquerque, New Mexico, Mike Carney of Ames and Christopher Chattlin, also of Boulder.

Sue Lee, another Albuquerque runner, was the top female finisher in the 10K with a time of 34:27. She was followed by Monica Signahl and Jaqueline Gareau, both from Boulder, Colo., Louise Mohanna of Cairo, and Renee Doyle-Kruse of South Sioux City, Nebraska, in that order.

Ken Frenette of Buies Creek, North Carolina was the top male finisher in the half-marathon with a time of 1:06:30.

Miami, Florida State looking to Nov. 16

Rick Warner
Associated Press

MIAMI — Let the buildup begin. Second-ranked Miami has three games remaining before its Nov. 16 clash with No. 1 Florida State. But after beating Penn State 26-20 Saturday, the Hurricanes clearly were looking ahead to their showdown with the Seminoles.

"We've got to come together mentally and physically and get ready for the 16th," said defensive end Rusty Medearis.

Florida State (6-0) and Miami (5-0) both appear to have good chances to remain undefeated until next month's monumental meeting in Tallahassee.

The Seminoles, who beat Virginia Tech 33-20 Saturday, must get past Middle Tennessee State, LSU, Louisville and South Carolina. The Hurricanes' only obstacles are Long Beach State, Arizona and West Virginia.

"We're not good enough to beat Florida State at this point," Erickson said. "We've got to improve against Long Beach and Arizona, and West Virginia is playing well, too. We've improved a lot, but we've got a ways to go."

Receiver Lamar Thomas, whose 42-yard touchdown catch in the fourth quarter proved to be the difference against Penn State, said he's already gotten a scouting report on Miami's offense from Florida State defensive back Terrell Buckley.

"I talked to him the other day on the phone," Thomas said. "He said, 'You guys are really spreading the ball around. I can't sit on one of you.'"

Penn State (5-2), which dropped from ninth to 10th in Sunday's AP poll, held Miami's explosive offense in check most of the day. But the Nittany Lions couldn't contain the Hurricanes on three long touchdowns in the second half — an 80-yard bomb from Gino Torretta to Horace Copeland, a 91-yard punt return by Kevin Williams and Thomas' TD, which gave Miami a 26-13 advantage that Penn State nearly overcame with a late rally.

No. 1 Florida St. 33, Va. Tech 20
Kevin Knox caught a 38-yard TD pass and set up another score with a 62-yard reception as Florida State (6-0) extended the nation's longest Division I winning streak to 12 games.

No. 3 Washington 48, Toledo 0
Mario Bailey caught three scoring passes from Billy Joe Hobert in the first half to become the career leader in TD receptions for Washington (5-0), which has 13 consecutive shutout quarters.

No. 4 Michigan 45, Michigan St. 28
Elvis Grbac threw three touchdown passes, two to Desmond Howard, for the Wolverines (4-1).

No. 5 Notre Dame 42, No. 20 Pittsburgh 7
Reggie Brooks blocked a punt and recovered the ball in the end zone for a TD, 63 seconds after Notre Dame (5-1) converted a fumbled punt by Pitt (5-1) into a touchdown.

VOLLEYBALL

Hawks drop two on big homestand

David For Daily Iowan

Home isn't always where the heart is, judging by the results of the Iowa volleyball matches this past weekend.

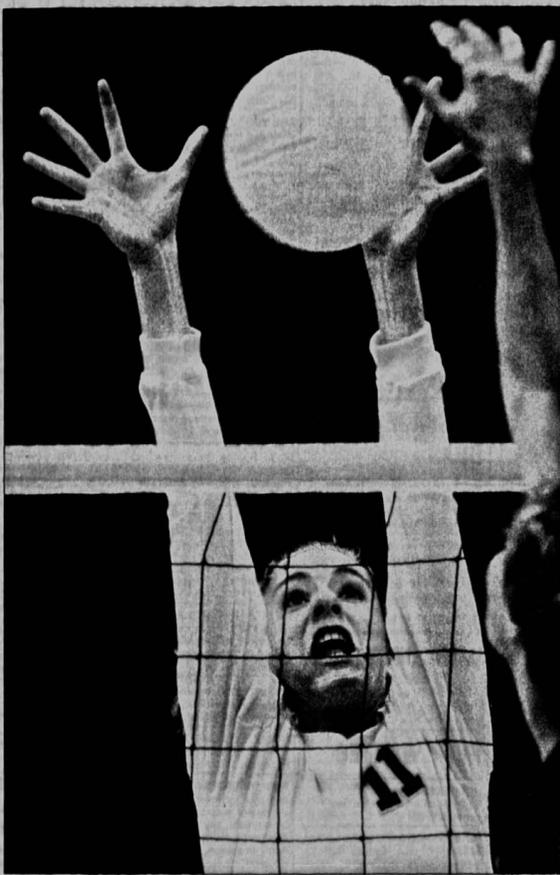

The Hawkeyes ran into the 1-2 punch of Purdue and Illinois and came up battered, losing both contests by a 3-0 count. The losses dropped Iowa to 5-13 on the year and 1-5 in the Big Ten. Iowa has also lost six of their last seven matches, leaving coach Linda Schoenstedt frustrated and searching for answers.

"There are no excuses for the way we played against Purdue; we flat-out played poorly," she said. "The team was not mentally prepared and I think they were looking ahead to Illinois, but I'm wracking my brain trying to figure out what it will take to get them ready for every match."

Iowa has not won since September 28th when they beat Michigan State. Since then, inexperience and a lack of consistency have combined to send the Hawkeyes to four straight losses, two at the normally friendly confines of Carver-Hawkeye Arena.

"I'm just extremely frustrated and disappointed," Schoenstedt said. "I realize that this is a reflection of inexperience, but I'm at a loss to explain why they don't always play to their abilities."

The situation was improved somewhat on Saturday night when the

Andy Scott/Daily Iowan

Sophomore Courtney Gillis blocks a shot during Iowa's homestand last weekend vs. Purdue and Illinois. The Hawkeyes lost both matches.

Hawkeyes played an inspired match against 15th-ranked Illinois. Although overmatched, Iowa gave the Illini all they could handle before falling in three games.

"I looked out there during the Illinois match and we were starting four freshman," Schoenstedt said. "They played very well against experienced, seasoned players. Basically they did the things they should have been doing the night before against Purdue."

MEN'S TENNIS

Hawkeyes impressive in Texas

Michael Watkins Daily Iowan

A very young and relatively untested Iowa men's tennis team headed to Austin, Texas, last weekend to, as head coach Steve Houghton put it, "experience collegiate competition on a high, national level."

With one player advancing to the fourth and final round and five of six reaching at least the second round, what Houghton and the Hawkeye netters quickly discovered was that they can compete with some of the best in the country.

"The majority of the guys who made the trip were either freshmen or sophomores and for them to play the way they did is just great," Houghton said. "I was very impressed with their composure and confidence throughout the tournament."

With No. 1 player Klas Bergstrom awaiting his first challenge in the qualifying rounds beginning Tuesday, freshman Bryan Crowley stepped forward for the Hawkeyes, winning his first three matches before falling 6-3, 6-1 to Kansas' Carlos Fleming. A victory over Fleming would have catapulted Crowley into the qualifying rounds along side Bergstrom.

"Bryan played really well in his first three matches but had some problems in his fourth match," Houghton said. "But he really showed me that he's capable of playing with some of the best players in the nation."

A plethora of Iowa players also advanced into the third round of action, among them last year's No. 6 seed sophomore Todd Shale, who lost his match 4-6, 6-3, 7-6 to the Jayhawks' Paul Garvin after being up 5-3 in the third set and holding two match points.

"That was really unfortunate for Todd because he really played a great tournament," Houghton said. "The guy who beat him went on to have a pretty easy fourth-round match and made into qualifying. That could just as easily have been Todd."

Redshirt freshman Naguib Shahid also rolled into the third round with consecutive wins before dropping his third match in straight sets 6-4, 7-5 to Joey Gonzales of the University of Pacific, as did sophomore Calle Manheim who defeated strong players from Texas and Rice but lost 7-6, 6-4 to Clemson's Chris Robinson in the third round. Junior Mike Marino also advanced to the second round.

"I think that we got a lot of people's attention this weekend," Houghton said. "We were one of only three teams (Clemson and Kansas) who advanced four guys into the second day of play. It was definitely worth the trip."

"Understanding comes hard. I just ask for peace," says Granny, one of two visionary women named Hannah in Urban Bush Women's production "Praise House." The show came dancing and singing and shaking its way to Hancher Auditorium last week.

This work doesn't submit itself to easy descriptive labels, except maybe "powerful." Set against a backdrop of clotheslines with laundry hung like fantastic bats, it is modern dance mixed with visionaries and angels; chanting and stomping; Africa and southern America; sweet soul singing and the blues; throbbing drums and jangling tambourines; umbrellas of death and filmy cabanas of light; abandon and tension; ebullient joy and heart-crushing anguish; squealing and groaning; laundry and dishes; processions and convulsions. Something about it is contagious, makes you want to leap up on stage with them and join in, to cry and whirl and wear purple.

UBW was first formed as a modern dance company, but it flexes its creative and artistic muscles in "Praise House" to include tight-harmonized, a cappella humming and singing, onstage guitar playing and African drumming, and dramatic dialogue as well. As the performers spin their story, the euphonious cacophony of the stage swirls from pianissimo to fortissimo — at times sounding something like underwater recordings of dolphins and whales jumbled with wailing and sex and laughing and gasping.

"Praise House" lets it all hang out, not indiscriminately, but with focused, purposeful abandon designed to wrest the visionary Hannahs from the grip of the unseeing world.

The grandmother tells us she was born with the gift of sight in May of 1897, and she has dreamed her whole life. "I thank you beeeauuuutiful spirits — you give and you give and you give and you give! ... Stars shoot from my eyes." Her visionary powers skip a generation and visit her granddaughter, also named Hannah. Young Hannah hasn't figured out just what to do with these visions, but she spends most of her time with her granny, annoying her perpetually cleaning and washing Momma to no end.

The women of the three generations are the only earth-bound, human characters in "Praise House" — the other six are angels. Momma serves to epitomize the part of our world that has no understanding or patience for those with a sight that prompts them to say things like, "Sometimes I don't see nuthin' but angel toenails ever'where!"

To give her some credit, Momma does occasionally admit to some uncertainty, thinking that maybe it is a blessing to be a visionary. She wistfully asks, "Do I ever still shine, Momma?" She gets frustrated and fed up with the Hannahs' dreaming, though, and decides she's going to have herself a vision: a vision of clean dishes that "sparkle and shine, sparkle and shine!" and don't ever need washing (since that daughter of hers won't ever wash them). The effort is futile, though, and she knows that. While she won't be ostracized from this world as the Hannahs are, she'll never truly be admitted to the spheres where her mother and daughter move.

Elder Hannah, on the other hand, has reached the point in her life where she can revel in her gift, an old woman gleefully feeling her oats, just waiting to be called to cross the river and go home. She spills forth her visions with confidence and humor as she waits on Brother Meshack, the blue-suited, guitar-playing angel, to take her home. Granny is the highlight of the show, full of wisdom and courage cloaked in a childlike giggle.

When her granny dies, Hannah is left without earthly guidance, but Granny never leaves her for long. She unceasingly feeds words through young Hannah's lips, guiding her through the tumult. The girl is tossed from angel to angel as the contrapuntal chanting builds to a frenzy — "Hannah Hannah Hannah Hannah. Whatcha gonna do, girl? Then in the darkness shall we see light" — as Granny talks about her painting, the vehicle in which she deals with the conflicting demands of earth and angels, and as her mother laments young Hannah's worthlessness to this world. Hannah is left, small and shaking; left, as the angels tell her, to "paint or die. ... That's your life now, Hannah. Let your light shine through."

There was no let's-milk-the-applause-for-37-curtain-calls attitude in this group at the night's end. The performers looked drained as they joined hands across the stage after a physically and spiritually exhausting experience. The person sitting next to me said when asked his opinion of the show, "I don't know yet — I have to let it soak." Zollar would have been pleased.

A date at the loo with you: an offering of 'Taxi' reviews

Daily Iowan

The controversy surrounding Frank Ripplloh's "Taxi Zum Klo" has risen to a fever pitch, yet few people seem to address the artistic merits of the film. (The social, educational and political merits, of course, may be implicitly considered in an artistic review.) In spite of the fact that "Taxi" has been much-written of and yakked about in public places, public bathrooms, in classrooms, over dinner tables and in the pages of fine newspapers such as this one — few people have actually seen the film itself.

It's been said that everyone's a film critic (just as "Everybody is a Star"), but the Arts & Entertainment department's film flangers have decided to take the tough stuff into their own hands, have a look and say their piece about "Taxi Zum Klo" in a gang-film review.

1981's "Taxi Zum Klo" details the life of a homosexual Berlin school-teacher. In spite of a stable relationship with Bernd, who has a tendency to be a bit of a hausfrau, Frank (or "Peggy," as he prefers to be called) has a wanderlust for the bars, parks and public restrooms of Berlin, and a craving for the casual sexual encounters he finds. The autobiographical "Taxi" graphically presents writer/director Ripplloh's lifestyle before he was dismissed from his job by the Berlin school system for publicly revealing his homosexuality.

It seems pointless, if not impossible to "review" "Taxi Zum Klo" out of the context of the current uproar. After all, if it wasn't for the inane obscenity charges being bandied about by knee-jerk back-water cops looking to get their names in lights, we wouldn't have paid a shred of attention to this film.

As it is, "Taxi" is not a bad film in any sense of the word. It's not my personal cup of cinematic tea — not because of the subject matter, but simply because I loathe drab, foreign films that soak in their own pits of European pretension. Like any interesting and valuable work of art, "Taxi" has its potential benefits and dangers. On the one hand it presents an honest and enlightening portrayal of the relationship problems that plague both gay and straight couples. On the other, it plays on the shock value of some very powerful images, images obviously constructed to get under the skin of 95 percent of the straight world.

Ultimately such tactics can have a positive broadening effect, but should we expect every straight 19-year-old German language student — not to mention overprotective parents and legislative munchkins — to come to similar conclusions? More likely, I fear it only further distances them from gay culture, implanting extreme perceptions and stereotypes that will never reconcile with their own sexual world views, thus fueling close-minded homophobic fires.

—Locke Peterseim

Finding it just as easy to pretend that morality does not exist as to pretend that it does, I'll dismiss the question of whether "Taxi Zum Klo" should be shown to innocent UI students of German and instead focus on the film itself.

Though rife with graphic, listless sex, "Taxi Zum Klo" intelligently questions sexual and societal values. Director Frank Ripplloh juxtaposes the unreal pleasantries of everyday life with the Dionysian reality that lies beneath it. He challenges the possibility of monogamy and attacks romantic attitudes about sex.

Unfortunately, Ripplloh's questions cannot always be posed in an intriguing or engaging way. While exposing the reality behind sexual unions, he irritates the audience with scene after scene of ugly people getting it on in bath houses and public toilets; while skewering the banality of "normal people," he bores us with the bathos of the common man. "Taxi Zum Klo" merits attention for its skillful satire, but it's, um, a bit hard to swallow.

—Henry Olson

When I told my mother I was going to see the film that has all of Iowa in an uproar, she said, "If you start feeling sick, just leave the room."

I left the room once and that was because I'd had too much coffee before the viewing.

I enjoyed this film because of its direction and storyline, but I would not recommend it to my more sensitive or close-minded friends.

They wouldn't understand it, and they'd keep talking through all the dialogue. Even though I don't speak a word of German, this bugs me.

The gay love scenes between Frank and Bernd were indeed love scenes and no more "obscene" than watching Julia Robert's body double with Richard Gere.

During one cruising car ride, Frank berates himself for going out and having fun instead of grading his students' papers. Nearly every teacher I know can relate to these feelings of self-disgust and anxiety when she/he puts aside the job for her/his life.

Another time, Frank asks himself why he can't have a lasting relationship, why he would rather have regular flings. It was at this point that I said out loud, "Because you're a guy."

That might have been a male bashing-thing to say, and after thinking about it, I realized many men and women I know treat their lovers in the same way that Frank treats his. Like many others, Frank has a problem with commitment, and this film shows this in a fashion that many "straight" audiences may be unaccustomed to.

—Mandy Crane

What exactly are we to understand from Frank Ripplloh's autobiographical "Taxi Zum Klo"? It's a heavy question, and after hours of chewing on sage leaves, I am left empty and unfulfilled. On the one hand, the film appears to be the story, or more likely the macho fantasies, of unlikely sexual progress. On the other hand, the film is the story of a petit bourgeois life peppered by homosexuality.

In either case, the film is essentially boring. The "scandalous" sex scenes are aestheticized, mechanical and uninspired, rendering them completely unerotic. Without the sex scenes, though, the film would be an insufferable account of two gay men arguing about an all-too-typical domestic lifestyle.

"Taxi Zum Klo," however, is not completely meritless. In this era of enforced political correctness, the film provides a candid glimpse of an alternative lifestyle, which we ultimately find is not much different than its heterosexual counterpart. Ripplloh and his lover are no more creative, no more progressive, no more intellectual and probably no hornier (though perhaps a bit more active) than a typical middle-class straight couple. There are moments of clarity and humor, particularly in the controversial pederasty scene, which is actually a clip from a German Ministry of Education film and not Ripplloh's work at all.

There are also insightful looks at the director's academic colleagues who engage themselves in petty concerns and employ so many clichés that we wrongly suspect bad script writing.

Finally, at its best, the film provides a brilliant contrast between the ideas of sexual freedom and the constraints of tradition. It is in this sense, I think, that the film can be particularly useful — perhaps as a negative definition of our collective sexual state, i.e., the lack thereof and the freedom to create our own "condition" that such a lack engenders. Then again, perhaps not.

—Robert Fuhrmann

To me, the irony of this entire affair can be found at the start and finish of "Taxi." Director Ripplloh begins the film with a voice-over about how he lives two lives — one as an elementary school-level health instructor and another as a sexually active gay man with a lust for the "polymorphously perverse." These two lives are consciously kept separate until the close of the film, and with both defiance and resignation, he comes to school in a drag costume he's had on since the previous night's gala.

Ironically, within the film, Ripplloh sustains his role as a school-teacher, presenting the viewer with his life — warts and all — and somewhat stiltedly informing his audience of the issues and concerns of his lifestyle. The explicit sexual encounters, and the range of sexual practices detailed, are an integral part of his life, a vital part of his self-definition and the construction of his identity. Therefore, the sexual acts cannot be considered gratuitous, though they are explicit (they force comparison to the coy depictions of sex in most mainstream Hollywood films). Ripplloh may fly his freak flag high, but his banner flaunts not only his sexual practices but his ethical warts — embarrassing taste in boppy Euro-pop musak, ugly sweater sets, rough edits and low production values. This is Frank/"Peggy" — love him or leave him.

As Ripplloh's lives finally merge, so reality merges with fiction, or rather history repeats itself. It's a Möbius strip worth unraveling and a poetic injustice worth dissolving; "Taxi" depicts a teacher teaching the viewer the "truth" about his life, while in reality he is ultimately dismissed from his job for revealing his homosexuality. His dismissal leaves him free to make films, thus resulting in the production of "Taxi Zum Klo."

Your slip's showing, honey: Bernd Broaderup and writer/director Frank Ripplloh check out the film-reviewing action in the controversial "Taxi Zum Klo" or "Taxi to the Toilet."

While acclaimed in film circles, "Taxi" then is shown at the UI for educational purposes, further judged and "dismissed" (or perhaps "crucified" is a better word) by a group of people far from Germany, far from his world and even further from understanding. The fact that the film still strikes viewers as powerfully as it probably did at its inception attests to "Taxi"'s importance as a landmark in gay filmmaking and as a valuable introduction to the rich world of gay lifestyles for straight audiences. With flamboyance and fantasy, Ripplloh put himself on the line with this film and apparently continues to put himself on the line.
