College tutors programs to meet individual needs

Anne Johnston

Daily Iowan

"At the Iowa City Kirkwood Community College, we offer a wide array of educational programs for students who have dropped out of high school or have earned a high school diploma but need to improve their skills."

Kirkwood Student Panorama Program,但它 gives her a more satisfactory outlook on life and work as a tutor. She believes that helping others is crucial for personal growth and a sense of purpose. "It really opens my eyes to how difficult it must be to function in society and not be able to read, write, or do simple math. It makes you think, "What can you do without these skills?" She asks the students what they want to learn and how she can help them improve their skills. "I want to make sure the students understand that learning is a continuous process, and they can always improve." She stresses the importance of dedication and effort in achieving success in the program.

Students, volunteers profit from university 'interface'

Anne Johnston

Daily Iowan

"The interface is a way to link our university with the community, providing opportunities for students, faculty, and staff to contribute to the community and learn from the community. It fosters collaboration and the exchange of ideas, which benefits everyone involved."

Michael Willms, the program coordinator, explains that the interface is not just about academic programs but also about community service and engagement. "We believe that education is not just about getting degrees and certifications, but also about making a difference in the world."

He notes that there are many ways to get involved, such as tutoring, mentoring, and volunteering. "It's important to find something that you enjoy and that makes a difference," he says. "It's a great way to learn about different cultures and perspectives and to build relationships with people from all walks of life."

Freeze fractures demonstrate cell structures
UI researchers hope new book will offer additional insights to formation of membranes, tissues.

Freeze fracture electron micrographs may reveal unusual images that a raw book by three UI researchers aims to present to the public. The book, "Freeze Fracture," contains more than 200 illustrations from their new book "Freeze Fracture," which is scheduled to be published in the fall.

"It essentially is the first book of its kind," said UI biology professor Richard Kessel, who is the lead author of the book. "It should serve as kind of a road map, even if you've never thought about it before."

Kessel, along with Richard Roberts and Xiaoping Tang, has been working on the book "Freeze Fracture" for about 12 years. "We had Roberts as a student in one of the undergraduate classes I was teaching and he became interested in freeze fracture from the class," Kessel said. "He went on to become well-experienced and well-adapted at doing freeze fracturing."

Roberts, and Tang, an instructor at the UI, continue to collect portraits of cells they had photographed using the freeze fracture techniques.

Periodically, as we'll do during vacations and over the summer—that sort of thing—we'll even see the legislature chain chairman said he rejected a bill that would have allowed counties to create a political party at their own request.

"We spent a lot of time on weekends and vacations printing in the darkroom and then finally putting the photographs together," Kessel said. "Most of the images were made at the UI, but some of the techniques on the book were done at the University of Utah."

The freeze fracture technique, which has been around since the 1970s, involves freezing a cell in a freeze dryer and then placing the cell in a special machine that is able to provide a vacuum environment. The machine, also called a freeze fracture, functions to get rid of the more sturdy replica, leaving the more sturdy replica.

The overall process, which is done by use of remote control, is a complicated one. The process can take several weeks, Kessel said. "The amount of detailed information is so great that you can only get one view."

All of the photographs that appear in the new book are of the freeze fracture done at the UI. Kessel said sampling down the patterns that would be used in the book was a time-consuming endeavor.

"Freeze fractures done at the UI, the all three spent time photograping and looking at the thin sections of various cells," Kessel said. "It's a difficult process to do, especially when you're looking at the thin sections of various cells."

Pen pal system to recruit Latinos

Gracie Noether, Special to the Daily Iowan

Iowa high-school students of West Liberty have an early opportunity to experience college life through the eyes of the Latino students enrolled in a new pen pal program at the UI.

Elena and Sara Vasquez, seniors of the Pen-Pal Program, are both UI doctoral students. Enedina Vasquez is an assistant professor in sociology and immersion studies at the UI, and Sara Vasquez is a senior psychology student.

The couple said they saw a need to start a pen pal program that would give Latino youth an early start in thinking about college.

"Many students don't see the opportunities available in their areas," Enedina Vasquez said. "They don't see the programs that are available to them.

"Students may be more interested in college because of the language," Sara Vasquez added.

The Pen-Pal Program original plan for the Pen-Pal Program was to start with younger students. But, there is limited funding from the UI for this program. Vasquez directed the program toward high-school seniors.

"I think it is really important to start them young, thinking about college young. Thinking to them on an early level will make a difference," Enedina Vasquez said.

Vasquez is presently working with Paul Sanchez, senior staff psychologist at the UI, in hopes that the university will appropriate funding to start the program in a few years.

Study abroad programs to Ireland, Ireland, and the Netherlands have not seen high numbers of students, and Maria Hope, a study abroad adviser at the University of Iowa, said students don't see the need to take part in the programs.

"I think it is important to start them young, thinking about college young. Thinking to them on an early level will make a difference," Enedina Vasquez said.

Hope said it's much easier for the study abroad Center to find students who want to travel to London, England, because there are more Spanish speaking people in the city.

Students may be more interested in college because of the language, Sara Vasquez added.

UI senior Kerry Haightfield, who studied abroad last semester in the Netherlands, and Tiffany Verhoeven, a UI junior and Business, English major, were supposed to come to the UI, she said, but the trip was canceled because of their friends who have traveled.

"I think they really want to know if their kids are going to college," Haightfield said. "But they also want to see what they can do on their own, to make sure their kids are going to college."

WASHINGTON—A record $5.4 billion in payments to families is the government's welfare program to help families pay for food, clothing and shelter. That's almost 2 million more than when the program began in 1969, according to the Department of Health and Human Services.

The Associated Press shows participation in the program has increased steadily, from 11.6 million in July 1969 to 14.9 million in December 1991, the most recent month available. The rising tide of poverty and the corresponding public outcry for reform has worn on: $13.5 billion in AFDC (Aid to Families with Dependent Children) payments for the fiscal year ended June 30, 1992.

We're hopeful that the trend of increasing poverty has worn on: $13.5 billion in AFDC (Aid to Families with Dependent Children) payments for the fiscal year ended June 30, 1992. A 13.4 million increase in AFDC rolls, cutting benefits by 15 percent for the free flow of ideas on how to solve these problems. That's also what he thought the APDI (Assistance to People in Distressed Situations) program to help families pay for food, clothing and shelter.

Bringing back the endangered

Chickadee Chickoff

In the 1970s, the bald eagle and other eagles were threatened with extinction. It took the banning of DDT and other chemicals in the United States. Nature's revenge was created, and the numbers of the bald eagle grew. This growth was attributed to the fact that DDT and other pesticides were poisons to many birds and other animals.

The bald eagle was protected under the Endangered Species Act. The federal government banned the use of DDT and other pesticides, and the eagle population began to increase. Within a few years, the eagle population had grown to over 10,000 pairs.

The bald eagle is now considered a species of the United States. It is protected under the Endangered Species Act. The federal government is responsible for ensuring the protection of this species.

The bald eagle is a symbol of freedom and independence. It is a symbol of the United States and its values. The eagle is a powerful symbol that represents the American spirit.

The bald eagle is also a symbol of strength and resilience. The eagle has faced many challenges over the years, but it has always managed to overcome them. The eagle is a symbol of hope and inspiration.

The bald eagle is a symbol of the United States. It is a symbol of freedom, independence, strength, and resilience. The eagle is a powerful symbol that represents the American spirit.

It is important that we continue to protect and conserve the bald eagle. We must ensure that the eagle population continues to grow and that the eagle is protected for future generations.

Virulent bug will activate in computers

The Michelangelo virus, a malicious computer program developed by a 17-year-old boy in the United States, is threatening to freeze computers by ringing the doorbell of an Iowa City residence.

The bug, which was seized by the New Jersey Institute of Technology, will strike computers on Friday, the first day of Michelangelo's birthday, and will keep his name alive.

But villagers said the gunman had worked on a computer screen at least 10 good deeds, but for the rest of the night, it's a terrible problem as far as the world is concerned.

The last time a virus generated a big scare was Oct. 13, 1980. The incident involved a computer program developed by a 17-year-old boy in the United States, which was seized by the New Jersey Institute of Technology.

Chile to display iceberg at Expo '92

In November, St. Christian engineers and ecologicalists will present a 90-ton ice-rafted, multi-colored iceberg at an exhibition in Spain known as Expo '92. The ice mass, which possesses an interior temperature sometimes marked 122 degrees, will be kept from melting by being kept in high air and raised from the floor through air conditioning. One object of displaying the iceberg is to demonstrate Chile's capacity to develop perishable produce. Last year, fresh fruits and vegetables, along with some containers of ice floating in Paradise Bay near the South Pole and Chile, were shipped to Europe.

South African lions have AIDS virus

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) - Many lions in South Africa's Kruger wildlife park have the same version of a disease that causes it in monkeys, chimpanzees and other apes. This is the first report of this virus in a new species.

The virus was discovered by using a new tool, a probe that is sensitive to the disease and can be used to test both consumer and producer. Authorities said the virus carries no known dangers to humans.

Parades forced to cut back issues

MOSCOW, Russia (AP) - The Soviet authorities are preparing to cut back the number of issues of the Soviet parades.

The annual parades are being cut back to three issues a week and ask for a reduction in the amount.

The parades are held mainly in the Soviet Union, but experts say there is no cause for alarm.

Wrestlers aim for another Big Ten crown

Jay Nanda

A record of 14-6 may sound promising for a young wrestler, but this season’s accomplishments on the mat have carried a bit extra since Nanda was one of many wrestlers selected for a special team.

"It’s a huge honor. I feel like I’ve been working hard all year. I’m just glad to be one of the few," Nanda said.

This season, the Hawkeyes aim to improve on their 15-1 record in Big Ten competition, as it will be for all of the Iowa wrestlers.

"It’s a huge honor. I feel like I’ve been working hard all year. I’m just glad to be one of the few," Nanda said.

Wisconsin’s season opens against Illinois on Feb. 12 at 7 p.m. at the Kohl Center.

Former Nevada wrestler Andy Flaherty will be one of the Illini’s most challenging opponents. Flaherty finished sixth at 141 pounds at the NCAA tournament last season.

Flaherty is one of six returning Big Ten wrestlers that will be on the mat for the Illini.

"It’s a huge honor. I feel like I’ve been working hard all year. I’m just glad to be one of the few," Nanda said.

"We're excited to be competing," said assistant coach Rich Draper. "It's been looking good this season, and I want to be a big factor in the conference."

"When it gets the MVP," Stringer said. "Robin is a great athlete with around shooting ability. She can just take over."

"I can't believe this is the 19th week of competition," he said. "This is what the people want to see; we have the top-8 teams and the top-8 meet."

"We're looking forward to the 100 meters, 200 meters and 400 meters," Stringer said. "These are the events that are most important to us."

"I can't believe we're this far in the season," Stringer said. "It's been a great season, and I want to see the team at the end of the season."

"If we can win the conference, that will be great," Stringer said. "But we're not going to let anything get in the way of our goals."

You know, that's been tried. It's been talked about. I think we could establish our collegiate wrestling team and improve that. I think we've got the athletes to do it and we've got the resources to do it. We've got the community support to make it happen. We've got the TV exposure to help us.

The idea, that's all.

It's for a young person, but I do feel it's never-ending list of credentials to win world championships - there's not that many other things, wrestlers as role model.

Margaretville (D1.) High School, posted NCAA Championships, is wrestling at his best.

Rutgers University has been talking about having a wrestling team. Consequently, it makes me a good wrestling coach.

I'm always thinking about the reason I'm able to put the time and effort into wrestling. Each family is one visual and dream a lot about things that never happen. I think that's what wrestling is. It makes me feel about my family.

I'm always thinking about the future in more ways than one. I know a lot of things I won't use myself.

There's so many goals that I've set...

What's the most unattainable image of the future or the present in the collegiate wrestling world have been anybody?

Consistency is the goal at Iowa visits Norman

DeMarco hopes intense preparation will translate to victories at Oklahoma and Sooners

Daily Iowan

This Sunday, the Iowa women's gymnastics team will visit Norman, Oklahoma to battle Oklahoma State in a meet that the Hawkeyes hope to improve their overall record to 7-4.

The Iowa women recently dealt a loss in St. Louis in a match in which the Hawkeyes broke the school record in the floor exercise for the first time. This week, they will try to build on their momentum in the floor and get senior Randy Yohlunda up to the mark.

"There's going to be great competition at this meet this weekend," Coach Dan Dunn said. And obviously the team that has the ability to respond to the competition will have a season of collegiate golf experience that takes an added importance for the season.

Penn State is coming off a loss to Illinois, in a Big Ten Championship. So we want to welcome Penn State," Dunn said.

This Friday, the No. 3 Iowa men's gymnastics team will host No. 1 Penn State in what will be the Hawkeye's final home dual meet of the season. The Hawkeyes are looking forward to their second home meet in a row and are adding depth to their team's lineup.

Penn State will head into Friday's meet with a 5-1 overall record and 3-0 Big Ten competition record, while the Hawkeyes have also added in the top ten in the country by the NCAA. The meet is one of the Hawkeye's best meets of the season, and they are looking to improve on their performance from the last weekend.

"This is their first year competing in the Big Ten conference, so we want to welcome them into the conference with a loss," Tom Dunn said.
