"It was between my wife and the Missouri it'd be hard which to choose for decommissioning first," said Marcel Daniels, U.S. Navy civilian member.

"I'm 73 years old, I've been in the Navy since 1953, it's been an honor," said Daniels.

"It was the last of five self-defense battleships mothballed by Pentagon rats. It went into service in 1959, then was decommissioned and mothballed. The Missouri had been in the Navy for 10 years by the time it went into service in 1969. It was built for the express purpose of being a battleship and it was used in the Vietnam War," said Daniels.

"The ships were very similar, but the Missouri was larger. It was a lot more difficult to operate," said Daniels.

"We had to work very hard to get the Missouri back in the water," said Daniels.

"And I think that's why I'll never forget the Missouri," said Daniels.

Neighborhood residents disapprove of plan to solve overcrowding at local elementary

William Pepper

Daily Iowan

At its regular meeting Tuesday night, the Iowa City School Board received many letters from people opposed to a plan that addresses overcrowding at Elementary.

Superintendent Bud Grohe explained that four parameters were followed in deciding on a recommendation to be presented to the public.

1. Select a solution that would provide more student space.

2. Choose a solution that would not result in splitting the sixth-grade class.

3. Choose a solution that would not result in student displacement for the students in a particular neighborhood.

4. Choose a solution that would provide an alternative that could be used in the event that the school board does not get the funds it needs.

Several students members also presented the school board with alternative plans. Grohe said the school board felt the option that the parents and students were given would be the best option.

"If you keep children in the same family in the same school, it will be better for everybody," parent Bob Kinney said.

"I think people wouldn't be sitting to look at school boundary changes. However, board member Sally Major said she did not support the idea.

"If you rework the boundaries, you're not juggling the boundary lines," she said.

"You would have to move students, and that would totally change students in more ways than one."

One of the main concerns of several parents was how long it would take students to get to and from school with the new bus routes that would be required, and where the students would be picked up and dropped off.

 parent Michael Blocker said that Michael Blocker pointed out his main concern to the board, which is that his son would have to change schools.

"If you make children change schools, it will be a lot of trouble for the family, but if you keep children in the same school, it will be a lot less of the crowded conditions.

Michael Blocker said that Staley disagreed. "If you send kids to the bus for no reason other than one bus, then you may as well be on the bus for a longer time.

"An overview of the decision to divest the school district, for a determination of whether or not to change schools from middle school to middle school, will present the results of the research.

"We will have a literature review set for April 20."

U.S. Chamber of Commerce commented, "The uptick in confidence and a return of the economy's vitality is heartening. The recovery was under way long before the Bush administration hailed the new reports as fresh evidence of a strengthening economy." The confidence that has been building since the start of the Bush administration, the Chamber of Commerce's Head of Research, stated, is linked to the National Economic Council in Washington.

The Commerce Department reported the broad-based increase in the leading indicators, with seven of the 13 forward-looking variables rising in February, pointing toward a continued recovery. Analysts and federal officials had urged the Federal Reserve to lower interest rates further to stimulate a stronger revival in a year that will witness elections with a presidential contest.

The Federal Open Market Committee, the central bank's monetary policy-making body, met on Friday to discuss the implications of the recent reports.

Article Text:

Although numerous peace initiatives have degraded since July, two leaders said Tuesday that a new round of talks had begun with the aim of ending the fighting in the region. The leaders, who spoke during a meeting of the latest in a series of regional conferences, said they hoped to see a lasting peace in the region within the next year.

The leaders said the talks, which had been planned for several months, were aimed at creating a permanent peace in the region. They said the talks would focus on the following issues:

1. Reconciliation and Forgiveness: The leaders said they would work to reconcile the different factions in the region and to ensure that all parties were treated fairly.
2. Political Stability: They said they would work to establish a stable political system in the region that would be acceptable to all parties.
3. Economic Development: The leaders said they would work to promote economic development in the region, including the development of infrastructure and the creation of jobs.
4. Human Rights: They said they would work to protect human rights in the region and to ensure that all individuals were treated equally.

The leaders said they hoped that the talks would lead to a lasting peace in the region and that all parties would work together to achieve this goal.

Players put NHL in penalty box

Ken Ragpoap Associated Press

TORONTO—NHL president John Ziegler moved on back to the drawing board after players turned down a new proposal.

"I think we're in the same boat as we were on Monday," the commissioner said yesterday. "We'll keep talking until we work something out."

"I'm in a conference at which he reaffirmed the 'manor of the house' in the way by players to the boss," said the commissioner.

"We've had a little light of hope that a strike could be ended if the membership voted against the proposal."

Former Pacific Division head coach Ken Belanger said yesterday at the trade deadline that the owners were trying to take away the money, some of which was left over from the last season.

"To present, the owners relented about $11 million from the hockey carpet and penalties, or 45 percent of the money would not have to operate the season.

"The owners have on the table a proposal to give back the revenues, which is, in their words, 'we have taken,'" said Belanger.

"We'll talk about it in the next few days." It is in the same boat as before because it is in the same season. Ziegler said that the owners' final offer proposal.

Iowa takes fourth in tight competition

Yolanda Monley

The Iowa women ended their Big Ten competition last weekend with yet another top-four finish, highlighted by newcomer Penn and Jane Powers being named to the All-Big Ten team. This year's competition started after the end of the season, and the Hawkeyes ended with one of the most beautiful performances of the year.

"We've constantly been challenging ourselves, and we've always been trying to improve on our previous performances," she said. "I think that we've been able to do that throughout the season, and we've been able to do that in every meet that we've had."
Changes breathe new life into Chicago Cubs

Jim Paul
Associated Press

MESA, Ariz. — The Chicago Cubs have more new faces than they have players this season.

So much for the Blue Jays, the Subway Series and the expansion Arizona Diamondbacks. There are four new faces at the top of the Cubs' new brain trust, and manager Larry Himes is making a point of boosting the morale of his team with his presence.

"We're talking encouragement," Himes said before the World Series champion White Sox came to town for a 1:05 p.m. (CT) interleague game at Wrigley Field on Wednesday.

Himes has talked a lot about third-base coach Mark Grace being dropped as Milwaukee Brewers manager and acquiring a manager. He joins third-base coach Joe BROOKS, who was the Blue Jays' third-base coach for the past three seasons, and replaces Jim Essian, who was fired last May

"We're going to have a whole lot of living to do," Himes said.

"The ball goes good when we come to it."

Indiana's Anderson, Meeks regain touch with basketball

Associated Press

BOOBLINGTON, Ind. - Eric Anderson and Darnell Meeks regained their shooting touch from the free-throw line in time for the tournament.

Indiana coach Bob Knight beached the Hoosiers two seasons during the regular season for slacking off and then watched them shoot 67 percent and 71 percent of their free throws. In Indiana's 94-79 victory over UCLA in the NCAA West Regional, Anderson scored 17 points, shooting 7 of 10 from the line.

"I think probably a few more times than when he's riled off, redClasses," Anderson said. "I think he's probably going to hit the people's memory on the one at the end of the season, Mikel Anderson said. "I think that's the type of coaching his players impresses on the players. He was going to enjoy it anyway."
Verdi’s ‘Requiem’ at Hancher

Daily known

The UI School of Music will present one of the largest and most significant events of the year when the University Singers and the University Chorus come together for the performance of ‘Requiem’ by Giuseppe Verdi, at 7:30 p.m., Tuesday, April 21, at Hancher Auditorium.

William Kolar, UI director of choral activities, will conduct the performance, which is in four acts.

Soprano soloists will be Kim Playfair, Winterset; Rebecca Carter, Coralville; Baritone soloists will be Andrew Boyer, Crawfordsville, Ind.; and Alan Eberly, Huxley.

The University Singers will be joined by the University Chorus, the Women’s Chorus and the University Chorus, which will be led by William Kolar. The University Singers and the University Chorus will also be directed by William Kolar.

The performance will conclude with a grand finale of ‘Requiem’ by Verdi, with the University Singers and the University Chorus, under the direction of William Kolar. The performance will be followed by an encore of ‘Requiem’ by Verdi, with the University Singers and the University Chorus, under the direction of William Kolar.

How she spent spring vacation: On the road to drive-thru hell

Mandy Crane
Daily Times

As God is my witness, I’ll never go near another drive-thru window again.

Last week, like many of you, I made a long trip to Tennessee. We drove almost non-stop from my town. I worked very hard last week and at the end of the week I wanted to get away. I needed some relaxation, so I decided to take a trip to my favorite place, the drive-thru.

I stopped at several drive-throughs and was very impressed with the service. The workers were friendly and the food was delicious. I decided to try the next drive-thru I came across and was pleasantly surprised. The service was even faster here.

I continued my journey and stopped at the next drive-thru I came across. The workers were very rude and the food was not up to par. I decided to continue my journey and try the next drive-thru I came across.
