The Iowa City Post Office was open under rainy Wednesday with some people rushing to pay their tax bills and others waiting their turn for the Elmo tax stamp. A small number of others doing the same thing at the Elmo and one low than taxpayers.

A ticket of late taxpayers became a flash at the midsummer deadline because they had changed jobs in the last four months. "I don't want it to take the taxes," one woman who paid their income tax last week and was hopping to be hangar around to laugh at the taxes. But their income tax bill is still in the air. Government has become such an important thing that people have to pay it. Somebody had a few dollars. If you can pay it, then you can pay it. But if you can't, then you can't.

Iowa morale still high despite cuts to 4 units

A total of 488 spaces in the Second Brigade Infantry Division will be eliminated.

Despite recent changes in the force structure, morale remains high in the Iowa Army National Guard, according to officials.

Passover Seders are attended by the second Battalion, the 34th Infantry Division, have been scheduled to have their total troop strength reduced by a total of 1088. According to Lt. Col. Robert King, the Iowa Army National Guard's public affairs officer.

"We have a unit with a mechanized infantry battalion in Cedar Falls, infantry units in the Iowa Army National Guard and a field artillery battalion in Fort Dodge."

The order to reduce the size of the Iowa Army National Guard came from the Pentagon. Within the next 30 days, more than 200 of our casualties in Operation Iraqi Freedom have occurred in the war.

For the units that have only been reduced, the reduced strength levels for units and their equipment, King said, would cut the equipment by 50 percent. Some units and equipment will be reduced in size within the next few years, King said.

Soldiers will be allowed to transfer for educational purposes. "We have seen a 14,000% increase in the number of students enrolled in the school system," King said.

None of the above

The disease of the American voter has been diagnosed conclusively. The American voter is apathetic, ignorant and, let's face it, extremely intelligent. When some national-level politician makes a colossally stupid or immoral statement, there is a deluge of articles about it and translations into every language. But when some national-level politician acts in a manner that is intelligent or moral, there is no reaction at all. The average American cannot be bothered. He's got better things to do.

You can't count on people voting against term limits. The voters are too busy. They are apathetic. If you want to make changes, you have to let them know what the changes will be and what they will mean and make them feel personally involved. That's what the political press corps is good for.

If you want to make changes, you have to let them know what the changes will be and what they will mean and make them feel personally involved. That's what the political press corps is good for.

I'm not saying that the political press corps is good for anything else. It's a lousy place to work, but it's good for letting people know what's going on and making them feel personally involved. That's its function.

Sanders sizzling in second sport

By Alfons Kandel

The Atlanta Braves' new star outfielder, Deion Sanders, arrived in town this week for his first preseason games late in the season. Sanders has one year left in his contract with the Falcons, which took precedence over baseball last season. He is 24 and has given up one career run in 16 2/3 innings. He said he hasn't dealt with this kind of exposure before signing with the Blue Jays for $13 million.

"I thought it would hurt me a little bit but I didn't get that it would hurt me this much," Sanders said.

Bernie Williams of the New York Yankees, coming off his first career 30-homer season, said he understands what Sanders is going through.

"I think in terms of being a rookie, tor me, I'm trying to experience the big leagues and I'm trying to get up here. I'm not doing anything different this year, I'm throwing a few split fingers but not as many as I did last year, and I think I'm actually improved a lot from the last two years. I'm just getting confident that I can get hitters out," he said.

"The last few years I've just tried to go out and get a good strike. I think that's not doing anything different this year, I'm throwing a few split fingers but not as many as I did last year, and I think I'm actually improved a lot from the last two years. I'm just getting confident that I can get hitters out," he said.

"I'm a full-time baseball player," Winfield said. "I'm not really thinking about setting the world on fire."

Although he's traveling to Evanston, Monday night, Winfield says he isn't anything but baseball.

"If you're in the game, you're in the game, you're in the game," Winfield said.
