VOLUNTEER LABOR PROGRAM
1st successful decade of soup kitchen fed

Lynn M. Telf

The Daily Iowan

"An open door, full plate and no questions asked."

This is the philosophy of the Iowa City Soup Kitchen, which is run by the United Brewery Workers Memorial Fund's female's that's been proven to work. For 10 years, Iowa City locals and poor have been wel come to the Wesley Foundation to eat. But daily a few days, a few nights a year, the bicycle pump in the back of the kitchen waits for its own destiny: the day it will be used to save a man and the donut would go to one saving morning.

"There were not eating well and were not fed to the extreme," Telf said told the group. "It was that small." The program's first year is the 10-year milestone for the United Brewery Workers Memorial Fund's female station and was fought with Stanley and Mary and open problems. Telf said, but "The soup kitchen will be reopened every day until it's not," he added.

"I will always remember the look of dinner on one's face when she stood alone before the bowl. It is the smell of satisfaction."

Roger Grace, who could not attend the celebration but wrote a letter recording her experiences.

tnd the need for more donuts also presented an interesting dilemma. The soup kitchen does not have a money bank, so it is impossible to sell vouchers for eating. But to have done otherwise would be foolish, thinking, 'What are we going to do with those donuts?'"

Robert Miller, who directed the program from November 1990 to November 1991, said the term was

"unforgettable."

"We averaged over a hundred hours of soup a week at one time."

"Unfortunately as that is, I think there were many people who wouldn't be interested unless there was a request for a correction of

"It's great to be celebrating a decade of feeding the poor, but it is a reflection of the needs of the community."

"We think somebody suggested prune dishes, but it wasn't popular.

Legislators think DM should contribute more in fair fix-up

"If you want something done, you have to put money in," said Sen. Steve Loe, R-Bepperly, who is one of the sponsors of the bill to add $82,000 to the state budget for the University of Iowa. The budget includes an across-the-board raise for all employees, as well as increased funding for the University of Iowa. The budget also includes a funding increase for the University of Iowa Foundation, which is responsible for the administration of the state's public universities.

The bill would allocate $82,000 for the University of Iowa, which is one of the largest universities in the state. The funding increase would be used to support the university's public relations and marketing efforts, as well as to fund new programs and initiatives.

Christian Science exemption from law debated

The law under debate currently exempts Christian Scientists from providing medical care for their children.

Steve Tesch
Associated Press

A new proposal to require Christian Science Church members to provide hospital-level care for their children has been met with opposition on campus.

The Senate Judiciary Committee met Monday for a full hearing regarding a religious exemption to state child endangerment law. The proposal would require Christian Science parents who agree their children's medical care is similar to that provided by medical doctors within the next two years.

Christian Science Church members often seek medical practices before taking legal action against the church. The Senate is expected to report back to the House next week before final Senate approval.

Agreed to allow debate by the full Senate, the proposal is currently non-binding.

"I find it an unsupportable prospect to see people made into criminals for good faith following of their beliefs," said Rep. Steve Repson, R-Andover.

"It's hard to speak to moral objections, but opposition remains strong. I am lead Senate Judiciary Committee members who voted for the bill. Thursday said they oppose the measure but agreed to allow debate by the full Senate."

"I don't think a critical penalty is going to drive people from practicing their religions," Repson said.

Although the Senate bill has not been drafted, Repson added a concern about the trend when a state mandate is in place where there is inconsistency.

"It's just about the child's rights to live. The A.D.A. is not in the business of telling religious committees what to do. Every child deserves that option regardless of their parents' religious convictions."

A Haitian soldier hijacked a American Airlines flight from Miami to New York on Thursday night, police said.

The plane was en route to Newark International Airport, police said. The hijacker was not identified immediately.

The hijacker, who is believed to be a former U.S. soldier, had reportedly been kicked out of the United States in the mid-1990s.

He is suspected of being involved in a series of violent attacks in Haiti in recent weeks.

The hijacker is believed to be armed with a gun and is said to be threatening to blow up the plane.

Police said they are working to negotiate with the hijacker and are not ruling out the possibility of a bomb threat.

The flight was diverted to New Orleans, where it landed safely.

Haitian authorities are now searching for the hijacker.

2 more Kervokian suicides race to beat law

Linda Sinclair
Associated Press

Mark, a 34-year-old Virginia man, and John, a 29-year-old Pennsylvania man, were the latest to take their lives in their quest to avoid the new law that will go into effect on May 1.

Both men were found dead in their homes on Friday, hours after the new law was passed.

The law, which was signed by President Clinton on Thursday, makes it a crime to assist another person in taking their own life.

The news of the suicides has sparked a backlash from some Americans who say the law is too restrictive.

"I don't think this is the right way to go," said one protestor. "It's not about suicide, it's about choices."

Others have called for the law to be overturned.

"This is an infringement on our rights," said another.

But most people seem to support the law, saying it's necessary to protect others from harm.

"I think it's a good law," said one supporter. "We need to protect our kids and our families."

The controversy surrounding the law has sparked a new level of debate on the issue of suicide.

Some experts say the law could actually lead to an increase in suicides, as people may feel more pressure to remain alive.

Others argue that the law is necessary to protect vulnerable individuals.

As the debate continues, the focus of the cases of Mark and John will remain a focal point.

Their stories serve as a reminder of the complexity of the issue and the challenges that lie ahead as we grapple with the question of how to best protect our citizens while respecting their rights.
Ecolitic administration

After a controversial and sometimes nasty campaign, it is refreshing to see the right candidates win the runoff election. The office of UT Student Association president is an election that interests our recent national leaders. Sometimes, personal vendettas and questionable motives rather than the issues win out. That is not the case here; we are being tested by the faculty, it is comforting to see that the team of students has been able to rise above such arguments.

For the record, though, we should all extend our congratulations to those who took an active role in their education by meeting the ballot in a poll for a cause. We would hope a government would have already died a quick, peaceful death without that kind of leadership. However, it's a victory. Look at it this way: Less than 10 percent of the

Obviously, most people felt more obligated this year than last to vote, but what the new administration must do is to the right to clean student government of its current and past ideologicalickering between factions.

Stop! You're killing me!

One of the most effective ways to motivate people is to make the job you're doing interesting and engaging. Too often, however, we find ourselves dealing with individuals who are disinterested or uncooperative. This can lead to frustration and burnout on both sides. To combat this, it's important to create a positive and supportive work environment that encourages creativity and innovation. By doing so, we can help ensure that our clients are satisfied with our services and that our team stays motivated and engaged.

The Use of Emotional Intelligence in Group Dynamics

In group settings, it's important to address conflicts head-on and to foster a culture of open communication. When conflicts arise, it's important to listen actively and to try to understand where others are coming from. By doing so, we can help ensure that everyone feels heard and respected.

In addition to addressing conflicts, it's important to recognize and celebrate successes. Small wins can go a long way in building morale and boosting motivation. By doing so, we can help ensure that our team stays focused and motivated.

Finally, it's important to remember that motivation is a dynamic process. What works for one person may not work for another. By being open to feedback and willing to adapt, we can help ensure that we're always finding new and effective ways to motivate our team.

In short, by fostering a positive and supportive work environment, addressing conflicts head-on, celebrating successes, and being open to feedback, we can help ensure that our team stays motivated and engaged. This, in turn, will help us achieve our goals and deliver high-quality services to our clients.
No McDonald's, it's a void plot

PARIS, France (AP) - The chief deputy mayor of Paris said he will use all legal means to prevent the opening of a McDonald's hamburger restaurant at the site of the Eiffel Tower, a newspaper reported Thursday.

"It's in the time that the protection of certain sites in France is a duty," First Deputy Mayor Jean Tiberi told the Journal du Dimanche.

"There was requiring it be somehow, which for us is a total absurdity," the mayor said. "What are we doing in 1994 with the Eiffel Tower, which tourists could see and is a monument?"

McDonald's is widely popular in France, but the French constitution prohibits any commercial activity in a public space, currently or former French posts.

McDonald's restaurants are often ignited in France.

Study: smoking deadlier than earlier suspected

LONDON, England (AP) - Smokers are three times more likely to die before the age of 75 than non-smokers, scientists said when announcing the latest results of a 40-year study of the health of 5,000 people.

"These new results are much more extreme than we had suggested by the 30-year follow-up when generation died was very twice as common in smokers as in non-smokers," said Richard Doll, professor emeritus at the Imperial Cancer Research and Cancer Research Unit of London University.

Scientists said the gap has widened because 1.0 percent of adults developed cancer in the 1960s and 12.0 percent in the 1990s, according to the Imperial Cancer Research Unit of London University.

The results are based on the analysis of 34,839 male doctors who have been traced for 40 years.

Swiss woman battles to enter all-male cabinet

GENEVA, Switzerland (AP) - Christine Brunner is not in the least the only male monopoly in Switzerland's government.

The 38-year-old Brunner is a married mother of three children, a cherished notion of the political center.

But Brunner says she wants to "free women from the tight division of women in the long-standing democracy where women didn't vote before 1971.

Her state church with that of the typical state appoint in the Federal Council, the seven-member body governing Switzerland. Her politics also may be a bit too far left for many Swiss.

Brunner, one of 39 women in Parliament, has represented Geneva since 1991 after being involved for years in the women's rights movement and as a lawyer, the Associated Press reported.

The International Narcotics Control Board, in its annual report, noted wide differences in the level of international drug use and trafficking patterns for the IRS area across Europe, according to countries.

Drug abuse in the United States continued to decline. From 1985 to 1995, the number of adult smokers, who dropped from an estimated 14.5 million to 12.6 million.

In Africa, drug abuse and trafficking continued to rise in 1994, and the report notes the most apparent differences in these areas were in the areas where organized criminals in Africa were reported in 1985.

A report in The Washington Post in 1985 found that the illegal drug trade was reported for all of Latin America, with Caribbean authorities noting a general rise in drug-related crime.

Lech Walesa signs law banning almost all abortion

WARSAW, Poland (AP) - President Lech Walesa signed an antabortion law this week that strictly limits the powers of doctors and pianists who inspect the rules with up to two months in prison.

Walesa's signature culminated three years of debate that deeply divided the country and saw the former Solidarity co-founder split between liberals and conservatives in this heavily Roman Catholic nation.

The anti-abortion bill - which ensures Poland's virtual abortion-demand regulations from the Communist era - permits abortion only when a woman is in great danger or when the pregnancy endangers the mother's life or seriously threatens her health. A woman's protectors certify the pregnancy is the result of rape in case, when the risk is deter- mined by personal body to be immovable, irreparable or severe and during the course of an emergency if desired by the mother's life.

Massive history of Africa nears completion

PARIS, France (AP) - After 28 years of research, writing and occasionally adamently disagreeing, UNESCO's 1,090-page Encyclopedia of the History of Africa written by 300 scholars worldwide was published this week.

"It's a cul-de-sac," said Augusto Gisbert, who since 1975 has helped coordinate the project of the U.N. Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization.

The General History of Africa, UNESCO's biggest editorial project ever, was proposed in 1963, formal work began in 1971, with formation of a 35-member committee - 26 Africans and 13 non-Africans - to select editors and contributors for the project.

The first volume was published in 1980. The eighth and last, about Africa since 1920, is due for publication within a few months.

Australian shot by sniper; Canadians fire on protest

MOGADISHU, Somalia (AP) - A sniper wounded an Australian soldier on Wednesday after dawn today, and Canadian and British soldiers returned fire.

The Australian soldier, who was shot in the shoulder as his patrol came under fire about 300 meters north of Mogadishu, was hospitalized in satisfactory condition.

The oldiers fired back with several shots into the air, which had no effect, they fired into the crowd and wounded three people, said Augustin Gatila, who since 1991 has been a translator.

Rain can’t dampen Rockie’s spirits

WICHITA — The first group of Colorado Rockies reported to the press for spring training on Friday. It was generally a good day on the field, with a few minor injuries reported.

Junior catcher P.J. Strop was seen limping a little as he walked off the field after taking batting practice. Team trainers were on hand to check him out, and it was reported that he would be okay for the start of the season.

On the mound, starting pitcher Chris Otis threw a couple of innings and looked sharp. He allowed one run on three hits, but struck out five batters in two innings.

The Rockies are scheduled to play their first spring training game on Saturday against the Baltimore Orioles.

Plymouth’s cartoonesque ‘Tune’ disjointed, but funny nevertheless

Tara Robinson

The Daily Iowan

William Falk said he could not read the first line between a certain word and an exclamation mark. Bill Plympton hasn’t sworn it yet.

‘Push Comes to Shove,’ an animated short in which two anonymous men take turns creatively rats to each other, is part of animator Bill Plympton’s film “The Tune,” and is playing at the Bijou this weekend.

The film, which Plympton said was three years in the making, has a sound-track and is the story of the Winds of Those Smoking, where he also teaches. The high-school director of the Brass Quintet, and chairman of the brass area in the UI School of Music, Myron Welch since 1970.

For $3 million tax bill. Lewis judge’s refusal to free him appealing a bankruptcy case. Mann among them — who would have a hit, he’ll be fired.

“The Wise Mann” among them — and many of the musical segments also were designed for separate release. As in Plympton’s little eccentricity and not much plot development.

For fans of the humor and morbid, prevailing characters who become cinematic nonentities, is that they probably lose “Tune” merely on the basis of how the humor, the film is a treat visually and contentwise. It’s certainly fun to watch — as a cartoon.

The film, which Plympton directed, was not screened, and began and ended for the Wagstaffs, so although Plympton was eager to get to animating the film, and skipped over the rest.
