Bowlby speaks on selection of athletes

Marcy Gottlieb

The Daily Iowan

Although he believes intercollegeniate athletes will always be fairly surrounded, UI Athletics Director Bob Bowlby and his department try to select "dedicated students who are outstanding athletes and good citizens." In a discussion with the Daily Iowan, Bowlby expressed the hope that future intercollegeniate athletes will resemble the ones he selects.

"I feel that the best athletes are always surrounded," Bowlby said. "What makes our selection a little different is that we're looking for students who are dedicated to college and a part of the community." Bowlby believes that the students who are good citizens are the ones who will succeed in their academic pursuits.

"What we're looking for in an athlete is a combination of academic and athletic ability," Bowlby said. "We want students who are willing to give their all and are committed to their college education." Bowlby believes that the students who are dedicated to their college education are the ones who will succeed in their academic pursuits.

Waist-hip ratio may affect life span

Cindy C. Coleman

Associate Press

Weighing someone’s height against his or her waistline can tell you a lot about the person’s risk for certain diseases - heart disease, diabetes or even cancer. The New England Journal of Medicine, a scientific journal, recently published an article on the topic.

Iowa City Police Chief R.J. Coleman, who has been in command for three years, said the decision to step up patrols was made after considering the women’s section along with the Johnson County Sheriff’s Department increasing surveillance during the summer.

If the section contains stories about how to keep a man, how to get rid of a man, or how to lose weight, then she said. “But if it includes political investigative reporting as to working conditions or as an inside look at getting things done,” she added.

The study was based on data from the Iowa Healthy Women study, which was conducted from 1991 to 1992. The study found that women with a high waist-hip ratio were more likely to have a heart attack or stroke, or to die of cancer than women with a low waist-hip ratio.

Officials to emphasize aid for troubled families

Mike Glover

DESMOND - State officials on Tuesday proposed a 10 percent shift away from troubled family programs toward family support programs.

It is hoped the new approach will be getting $50,000 and to be served with number 80000 public family service workers, about 20 percent of which go to family support programs.

"We're talking about helping families" to change a lifestyle," said Assistant Commissioner of the Department of Human Services.

The grants from the Annie E. Casey Foundation would go to the Iowa Taekwondo program, a counter to the program in the nation.

Since 1990, the number of young persons going to group care has shown a significant increase.

"The grants would help support the work being done to support group care," said J. Eric Amsden, a public family service worker.

ROSE MATHOVICH, 29, Rock Island, said she would be interested in the Taekwondo program.

"I've always been interested in Taekwondo," she said.

Clear Pepsi helps aid ‘health’ illusion

Mandy Crane

I like water. You might think this is a bit of an understatement, or I might not drink enough water. While my friends, family, and roommates all enjoy my thirst for water, they can’t always understand my water drinking habits. Water is just what I need to stay hydrated all day long!

Each year I tend to drink more and more water. It’s not healthy, I tell myself. Drink more water. But I can’t help it. I’m addicted to water. Perhaps water isn’t really for me, but I know that drinking five cups of water a day is far from being normal.

I asked a friend about her water drinking habits. While she said that she tries to drink at least eight cups of water a day, I’m not convinced. She must be a water junkie, I thought to myself.

The military worldwide has traditionally embraced concepts of masculinity and strength. However, until women were not only allowed into the armed forces, but women were also not only allowed to serve in the military, but women were also not only allowed to serve in combat roles, the military has been seen as a “man’s world.”

During World War II, women were often kept out of combat roles due to concerns about their safety and the impact of their absence on the war effort.

In the 1990s, however, the military began to change its policies regarding women’s service in combat roles. The policy shifts were made in response to concerns about the military’s ability to attract and retain qualified personnel.

Today, women can serve in all areas of the military, including combat roles. The military has made significant progress in recent years in addressing concerns about women’s service in the military.

Despite these changes, women still face challenges in the military. Women are often marketed as being less capable than men, and they are often subjected to sexual harassment and discrimination.

The military has made efforts to address these issues, but there is still work to be done to ensure that women are treated fairly and with respect.

The military has also made efforts to address issues related to mental health. The military has launched initiatives to improve mental health care and support for service members.

Despite these efforts, there is still much work to be done to ensure that all service members, including women, are able to receive the care and support they need.

In conclusion, while the military has made progress in recent years in addressing issues related to women’s service and mental health care, there is still much work to be done to ensure that all service members are treated fairly and with respect.

Vertigo comics aim for more mature audiences

"I really think that Vertigo is drawing a lot of people to the concept of comics who aren't necessarily interested in comic books," says |b>Vertigo<< editor J. Michael Straczynski.
