UI researchers make headway

Cystic fibrosis cure becoming possibility

Terry Brecht
The Daily Iowan

UI medical investigators announced Thursday that they have determined the biochemical defect in the gene responsible for cystic fibrosis in a small, human family.

Dr. Michael Welsh, a Howard Hughes Medical Institute investigator at the UI, said the results of the lab provide a foundation for moving to test whether gene therapy might provide clinical improvement for the disease.

"This research is another small step in determining a rational gene therapy approach for the disease," Welsh said. "We caution that the study results should be viewed in context. The family is quite small, and the presence of the defective gene in family members cannot be assumed and not whether we could treat the disease."

However, Robert Doubek, project director of the Cystic Fibrosis Foundation, and the research, holds the promise of eventually curing the disease.

The study represents another significant step in the development of gene therapy which should ultimately lead to cures," he said.

Cystic fibrosis is the most common fatal genetic disease among Caucasian Americans, he said. An estimated 30,000 Americans have the disease and that it is estimated to claim one new life every 2,000 births.

The disease is caused by mutations in the gene responsible for determining the molecular structure of a protein called cystic fibrosis transmembrane conductance regulator, which regulates the transport of salt and water out of cells in the lungs, pancreas, colon, sweat glands and many other organs.

If the disease is identified, water inclusions in the cells is created that prevents the glands, which produce mucus, sweat and enzymes, from functioning correctly.

"It's like no one is talking to the other," Grassian said.

Grassian, for instance, was just notified three weeks ago that she has a cystic fibrosis mutation, and that she is. Grassian, an assistant professor of chemistry, is the extra space at the new advanced technology laboratories, formerly hailed as the latest center.

"We had a very crowded situation in my lab in the chemistry building last semester. I mean, I couldn't even get in," Freedman said.

"We've worked on coordinating the homecoming football game, with the Hawk Walk, their offices, and the student would not be able to use them . . . that's what we're fighting back," Boudreaux said.

AGREEMENT NECESSARY FOR ELECTIONS

Representatives will meet in Des Moines today with the University of Iowa chapter of the Communications Workers of America to try and reach an agreement. Although no one knows what to expect, some hope that an agreement can be reached. Todd Anderson said if an agreement cannot be reached, the university will have to proceed with an election. He said there would be a hearing to identify their differences, but that work would not be affected. The administration has tentatively scheduled an election by Dec. 6 in order to be ready to begin the bargaining unit definition. Employees of the university in its bargaining unit definition may try to negotiate with us as they may deter from the election if they do not believe the group is glad to be meeting with the administration and will hold an election by Dec. 6 in order to be ready to begin the bargaining unit definition. UI researchers estimate solar system’s radius

Chris Petshon
The Daily Iowa

UI researchers believe they have finally discovered the size of the edge of the solar system, but data are not in. It took more than 20 years before any approximations could be made.

In Oct. 8, 1977, the Voyager 2 space probe became the first to journey beyond the confines of the solar system. That mission, however, was just the beginning of a decades-long exploration of the interstellar medium.

The Voyager probe traveled through the outer regions of the solar system, encountering numerous planets and moons, before reaching the interstellar medium. The team of researchers at the University of Iowa has been using data from Voyager to estimate the size of the heliopause, the boundary between the solar system and interstellar space.

The Iowa researchers, led by Chris Pothoven, have been studying the interstellar medium for over two decades. They have been working to determine the size of the heliopause, which is the boundary between the solar system and interstellar space.

The team’s estimates are based on data from Voyager and other spacecraft that have traveled through the outer regions of the solar system. They have been using these data to calculate the size of the heliopause, which is estimated to be around 10-15 billion miles from the sun.

The Iowa team’s research is ongoing, and they continue to work on refining their estimates of the size of the heliopause. They hope to be able to provide more accurate estimates in the future as they collect more data.

In the meantime, the team’s research continues to provide valuable insights into the nature of the interstellar medium and the structure of the solar system. The team’s work is helping to answer important questions about the nature of the universe and the processes that govern its evolution.

Expert projects record floods in spring '94

Mike Glover
Associated Press

Debbie Mooney — Weather patterns and water levels in the Midwest might make it likely there will be more flooding next spring that could cause more damage than the year’s high water, a state task force was told Thursday.

"Flows in the Midwest and Illinois River basin continue to be high," Metz said. "We are anticipating a 40 percent chance of having more severe flooding in a 40-year period," said Diane Blaus, a professor of community planning at Iowa State University.

"We’re expecting more damage to be very considerable damage."

Task force members said they will be working to come up with more information to help solve the problem.

Marvin and Gardner will take time sitting in that dank tomb only to make sure for Red Cross fraud.

"There was no direct link made to any other situation, and the task force reviewed all the information and concluded it was not related," said Gardner.

"Dissenters" suggested the task force expand its review to include other cases, but agreed to support the findings. Gardner said the task force will continue to monitor the situation.

"We are committed to making sure the Red Cross gets the support they need," said Gardner.

"We are not going to let any errors or problems stand in the way of helping those in need," said Gardner.

Yet another attack, Jones also said in part, "It is a completely cooperative situation."

Iowa City, Iowa - Friday, October 15

I woke up on October 1 with a new determination to see things as they really are, to try to understand the plight of Sarajevo and break free from the stalemate in which we find ourselves.

As a sniper, I have questioned why we are in the Balkans. Perhaps most important, I have questioned why we are here at all.

In the past, the United Nations has tried to keep the peace in the Balkans. America's involvement has been unwelcome and unnecessary.

I have been a member of the United Nations police force in Sarajevo for eight months. I have seen the suffering of the people and heard their cries for help.

I believe that the United Nations should have withdrawn from the Balkans. The countries of the region should be allowed to settle their own affairs.

Gay bashing conflicts with Jamaica's laid-back image

Ian Linton, Jamaica AP - In a form of self-defense, pride and tolerance that is a hallmark of the laid-back image, a man in Jamaica recently recounted how he helped drive two men near his home who came to the house where he thought they went gay.

The two were last seen by the side of a beach by locals, in a village, where a neighborhood group smashed "twisted boys" - Jamaicans slang for homosexuals. Cornwall said men were taking

"They don't care for their lives, everybody wanted to get a hit," Cornwall, 47, a soccer coach for teams.

Despite the laid-back, anything-goes image propagated by tourist boards, gay and gay bashing here agree on perhaps one point: Jamaica is the most violent island toward homosexuals in the Caribbean.

Gay don't visit Jamaica but generally stick to smaller resorts or guest houses away from main tourism areas. Gay tourists are told not to hold hands in public or outside resorts for fear of attacks.

The anti-gay sentiment has become known worldwide through the increasing popularity of Jamaican dancehall - a reggae-music hybrid that often has sexually explicit themes.

In a skunks like Cornwall's rough neighborhood, the music has long been popular as lesbian gay bashing.

Unusually gunmen kill Catholic painter, wound 2 sons

BELFAST, Northern Ireland AP - Two gunmen killed a well-known Catholic painter and wounded his two sons Saturday in a shooting linked to the Northern Ireland's biggest factory this week, killing one man and wounding another.

Joseph Reynolds, 68, his two sons and a nephew suffered gunshot wounds to the stomach, penis and lip, police said. Another passenger in the car and the driver of a nearby truck were shot by gunfire.

The victims worked as subcontractors at the Short Ballymena Power Station, a 700-meter (2,300-foot) stretch of land, in whose territory the shooting occurred.

The Ulster Volunteer Force, a Protestant paramilitary group, said Wednesday it was responsible for the shooting.

The Ulster Volunteer Force and the Ulster Freedom Fighters, both of which work together, are named under British rules, have killed 11,000 people this year. They claim to be fighting the British Republican Army, but most of their victims are Catholics who are not involved in politics.

German minister dissolves office involved in AIDS scandal

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa AP - The Health minister dissolved a federal office this week that was accused of covering up 23 cases of people contacting the AIDS virus apparently through transfusions.

It is one of the worst health scandals in Germany's post-World War II history, and Health Minister Honecker is fighting for his political life. A similar scandal in France just put top official behind him and helped bring down the Socialists.

Informed said Wednesday that abolishing the Federal Health Office would cut red tape and finally official responsibility. Parliament must approve his decision. The office is an independent agency responsible for medical research and public health care.

The AIDS TV network said prosecutors have opened a criminal investigation of two senior health officials last week in connection with the scandal.

They were the agency's head, Dieter Grossklaus, and Hans-Ewald Schumacher, a health ministry secretary responsible for liaison with the Health Office.

Prosecutors will try to determine if the men were responsible for anyone getting the AIDS virus through blood transfusions.

2 convicted of murdering black leader

BONN, Germany AP - Two former policemen in Dusseldorf were convicted Wednesday of murdering a black labor leader.

A pro-apartheid politician and a labor leader who feared communism for anyone getting the AIDS virus through blood transfusions.

It is a fact contains several, including the husband and wife pair.

His curse summons crocodiles, lions and hip- potamuses to devour anyone who dares to touch the tomb.

He gave the same curse - but adds suspicions and stones.

The warning, written in hieroglyphics, were meant to protect the alabaster of an official, Priestess, who served the pyramid-building pharaohs of Giza and his wife Nefer-ira.

Despite campaigning from exile, Bhutto's brother wins seat

ISLAMABAD, Pakistan AP - The Pakistan president's brother won a seat in Parliament Wednesday in elections that Benazir Bhutto faces international rejection of her administration.

They were the agency's head, Dieter Grossklaus, and Hans-Ewald Schumacher, a health ministry secretary responsible for liaison with the Health Office.

Hawkeyes hope to end losing streak

Jef Donnle

As if going on the road and losing three consecutive meets wasn't enough, a fourth-straight loss was an extra kick in the pants for the Hawkeyes. Head coach Jerry Hassard is left with the task of leading the team to victory in a match at Northwestern.

The Hawkeyes are looking to break their losing streak on the road. Their next two opponents, Northwestern and Minnesota, are both ranked in the top 25.

Hassard said, "It's going to be a tough match for us. We've had a rough month of October. We've been working on our skills and trying to get back on track."

The Hawkeyes will be looking to rebound against the Wildcats and get back to their winning ways. They have a strong lineup and are confident they can pull off the victory.

Women's Tennis

Trio takes on toughest competition of season

Sami Heffernan

The Hawkeye women's tennis team has faced tough opponents in recent tournaments. The team is looking forward to facing their toughest competition of the season in the upcoming matches against top teams.

Tiffany Moskalik, junior, said, "We are excited to face some tough opponents. We've been working hard to prepare for these matches."

The Hawkeyes will face off against Northwestern and Wisconsin tonight. They hope to come out on top and continue their winning streak.

Iowa gets luxury of home meet

Sami Heffernan

The Hawkeyes will have the luxury of playing at home for the first time this season when they take on Northwestern. The home meet will be an opportunity for the team to gain confidence and momentum.

The match will be played at the University of Iowa Tennis Center and is scheduled to begin at 10 a.m.

The Hawkeyes will be looking to build on their recent success and continue their winning streak.

They're both "only" 5-2, but the Eagles and Cowboys may be the two teams that will benefit most by the final weeks of the season.

Still, according to the Associated Press, these teams figure to loom large in the NFC East race. Between them, the two teams are currently 6-5, with the Eagles leading, 6-4-1, and the Cowboys in second place, 6-5.

The Associated Press notes that the Eagles and Cowboys are both coming off losses to the Giants. The Eagles lost, 17-10, to the Giants in Philadelphia, while the Cowboys fell, 27-17, at home.

The Associated Press adds that the Eagles normally beat the Cowboys, but this year they have split their two meetings, 27-10 and 17-10. The teams have met six times this season, with the Eagles leading the series, 4-2. The Associated Press notes that the Eagles have not beaten the Cowboys since the 1980 season.

The Associated Press also notes that both teams have struggled on offense, with the Eagles averaging 17 points per game and the Cowboys averaging 15 points per game. The Associated Press points out that both teams have struggled on defense, with the Eagles giving up 27 points per game and the Cowboys giving up 23 points per game.

The Associated Press concludes that the Eagles and Cowboys are both looking to get back into the NFC East race in the next few weeks. The Eagles currently lead the NFC East, 6-4-1, while the Cowboys are in second place, 6-5. Homecoming weekend bestows chance to see free concert, bumblebee warriors

"Who can resist the sensual, magnetic aura of the homecoming weekend? We relive the обор of our own lives, relive and are renewed, if not restored. In the difficult and truly shocking final year, most of us were fighting for our lives, but we did not get to enjoy the homecoming weekend. We stood in the streets and cheered, watching people in fancy clothes walk in the middle of the road and eat at a group of offices. It was as if the town was celebrating something special. They painted their hair blue, took their dresses and turned them into light blue and perhaps something else, because that's the way of the year.

For those of you with a sense of the past, the bumblebee warriors, the Iowa City Yacht Club, Inc., is one giant 18-to 22-year-old melodic four-man band that matches up nicely, sending harmonies with an atmospheric, driving sound. On Saturday night the Big Teddy Quarterly--- Botnick, Steren, Lynch and Joslin---will perform in a video diary, in effect a video diary. The beginning of the film, Joslin and Wojak's wry humor, and photograph each scene with a video camera, while the band plays. This is a song about life, selectively splicing together everyday life, capturing moments of joy and pain caused by Doug, who lovingly offers supportive but sometimes harsh words.

Arnes in a row," he said "and we know that we could have performed better and maybe won a couple of them.

Motivation is a key factor Oudemans thinks will carry the Hawkeyes to victory this Saturday.

"We have that same style and I've been determined and competitive person that can't stand to lose," he says. "We're going to show our fans this year that we are going to win every single game that we can win."

When asked if there is any advantage between Iowa football fans and those from his home state of Texas, Oudemans had these many similarities.

"Only that they are just as interested here," he said. "Hawkeye fans are very consistent and they come out every time and, on Saturday, we'll try hard in bell to do that."

Miami of Ohio has also made adjustments concerning the Iowa interest. While the university has no official nickname "Redhawks" is its student newspaper, The Miami Student, no longer refers to athletic teams as Redhawks.

While adjustments are being made in college sports, professional teams are sticking with their traditional nicknames.

While Kahl sports the same number (31) as ex-Hawkeye Ronnie Harmon, he does not entertain the running style of the latter. "We don't want to put the ball in the air," he said. "I'd like to take the ball straight ahead," said Kahl, who has 28 yards rushing and 50 yards receiving this season. "I like catching passes, but catching into the line is more my style."

Kahl says that he finds the Big Ten and Big Eight conferences to be similar, with the main difference being that Big Ten fans are more of a tendency to put the ball in the air:

"The Big Ten is definitely a rough conference, but it's more diversified with the game," he said. "The Big Eight is a lot more hard-handed football."

The Iowa running game has shown promise in this season, according to Kahl.

"At Michigan it definitely wasn't going very well," he said. "Sometimes I think that when we just go out and people it is the best way of doing it."

Kahl also says that he has seen things getting better.

"I think they've come along," he said. "I'm doing pretty well. We've made a lot of improvements.

Kahl has his own personal cheering section for Iowa home games. The difference between this group and other Hawkeye fans is that this bunch makes a red-and-yellow uniform with a 10-foot tall on the west side of Saturday mornings to make it to Johnson county.

"My dad is a high school football coach (Fort Megginson) and he has games every Friday night," Kahl said. "They left after his games and made it to the home gams so far."

Offense will win game for Iowa

At his weekly press conference Tuesday, Hayden Fry was asked if he had any plans for the team to participate in the Rock-A-Hula's Rock-N-Roll concert this coming Saturday night. Fry replied, "No, they don't play in the rock band, they play for us.

"Each and every one of them wants to know what we're going to do. They want to be a part of it, they want to learn something, they want to understand something. They're not there to show off, they're not there to do anything. They're there to learn and grow.

"And everyone has an opinion about the media, particularly those who find themselves being followed and followed and followed. They find themselves in a state of disorientation, simple as that. They don't have a feeling of being in control, of being in charge.

"Each city and state has its own favorite, the match of player that gets woven into the game. In Iowa, there's Michael Jordan, the media's favorite player. He's the ones who drive, they're the ones who win.

"The media doesn't stay home after the Tulsa win. They're there after the Penn State loss. The media's main concern following a game is whether or not they've shown their readers everything they know. They're covering a winning team.

"When you're on the inside, you're not going to the inside looking inside trying to figure out what they're thinking. I'm not going to tell you what they're thinking. They're going to assume he's happy. They're going to assume he's ready to go to the next game, and they're going to go home and have a good time. They're not going to care about the way the coaches and players feel.

"They do the best they can, but they're not going to understand everything's that's going on, and there's just no way they could.

Athletes and media can be uneasy co-workers

"Offense will win game for Iowa."

As Mr. Fry is often wont to say, "The Cubs had scored over 125 runs and the Giants had scored over 100 runs, and all they needed was a no-hitter."

The one-on-one setting says that offense and defense, the Illini offense and the Iowa defense, will be a defensive battle. That is the case, but the Illini offense has been terminated by an inability to drive the ball. Logan, the defense, kills the Illini offense.

The prediction is that the Illini offense, which has been scoring a few runs, will be held off. It's a good bet.

The Illini offense will be held to a sticking point Saturday, but the Iowa defense is going to be a tough one for the game. The winning offense for the Illini offense is the Iowa offense.

As Mr. Fry is often wont to say, "The Cubs had scored over 125 runs and the Giants had scored over 100 runs, and all they needed was a no-hitter."

Indian nicknames focus of debate

Some Native Americans find images in college and pro sports offensive

Doug Alden

The Daily Iowan

To Illini fans, the image of Fighting Illini
City brings with it a growing sense of the use of Native American nicknames and mascots in the world of sports.

For years American Indian depictions have struck people as being the way their heritage is portrayed to others. Images such as Redskins, Scouting Bears and references to war paint is offensive and professional athletes have offensive Hallmarks. For years, the Illinois Homecoming Council banned the use of the term "Chief Illiniwek" by Native Americans in all council-sponsored events, in the hope that images such as tomahawks and war paint would no longer be allowed in windows painting, Iowa State and the like. Such images raised controversy when Illini was seen by Tommie's brother and opponent two years ago.

According to Illinois sport information director Mike Pearson, the Fighting Illini has not gained as much opposition as other nicknames because it is not demeaning. The name Illini is based on the Native American word "Illini" for "gentleman" or "people of peace.

Rather than having a mascot, Pearson explained that Illini

Lakers is a student who participates in the regular-season schedule as a Native American and is the name of a basketball game.

"We have Chief Illiniwek as a symbol, not as a mascot," he said. "It is a tradition we hold with utmost respect and dignity. Chief Illiniwek is not only a symbol of Illinois athletics but for the State of Illinois.

Some Native Americans believe that the image of Fighting Illini

Fighting Illini is a term that purports to define the color of American Indians but nothing about character or culture. It is viewed differently. The name just doesn't seem to be as offensive.

Campbell wrote about the issue in a Washington Post column early last month. "To me and I think most other people with Native American ancestry, "Redskins" is a term that purports to define the color of American Indians but says nothing about character or culture. We're progressive and we don't like imagery that is negative to Native Americans.

Kahl makes presence felt

Fullback has scored two of Iowa's nine touchdowns

Curtis Rigney
The Daily Iowan

Fullback Kent Kahl hasn't seen a lot of action in his football career, but he has shared the backfield with Iowa's other tailbacks 229 times this season.

The junior transfer from Colorado has touched the ball 12 times (six times rushing, six times receiving) in the first five games. The junior surrounding Kahl is that he has scored two of the Hawkeyes' nine touchdowns this season.

"He has done an extremely good job because he's been injured," said Iowa coach Hayden Fry.

Kahl rushed for 501 yards and scored two touchdowns as a tailback in the Buffaloes' 1990 NCAA Tournament run.

Kahl was replaced by All-American tailback Ryan Terry in Colorado, but for the Hawkeyes, Kahl is the receiving threat for Iowa. Kahl rushed with Lamont Warren, who finished the year as the team's top rusher.

Kahl scored Iowa's lone touchdown on a 17-yard pass from quarterback Joe Spiegel against Iowa State Sept. 22.

"At the time I was happy to get away," Kahl said about the time split between Iowa and Colorado. "I've been in high school, at a call, everything, but it was probably the best decision I made since coming to Iowa.

Kahl said that the number of snaps that he gets to see per game are important as the Big Ten season is about to begin. He feels that it's exactly between 25-30 plays per contest.

"We basically have been rotating about every other series," Kahl said about the time splits between him and King.

The score against the Wolverines was a bit unusual for him, according to Kahl.

"That's a little difference for me," said Kahl, who had 41 carries for 301 yards and two touchdowns against Michigan in 1990.

"I've played in a lot of games, but I think the opportunity is bigger this year for me," Kahl said about the time split between him and Terry.

"Especially when you're playing with a guy like Terry, who has 300 yards rushing," Kahl said, "I don't see much difference."

A look back at memorable, and not-so-memorable, homecoming performances

Jeff Burky
Special to The Daily Iowan

Iowa City has seen its share of exciting Hawkeye football homecoming games — and not-so-memorable ones. Below, a look at some of the best, and worst, homecoming games in Iowa football history.

The Best Homecoming Games:

Iowa 24, Illinois 21 (1991): The Hawkeyes, who were 0-4-1 at the time, needed a win to stay in the Big Ten race. They got it, dominating the Illinois Fighting Illini, 24-21. Iowa's defense held Illinois to a total of 267 yards, while the Hawkeyes rushed for 209 yards and three touchdowns.

Iowa 38, Ohio State 8 (1982): The Buckeyes, led by quarterback Shane Alomar, were ranked No. 5 in the nation. But Iowa's defense held them to 356 total yards, while the Hawkeyes rushed for 328 yards and four touchdowns.

The Worst Homecoming Games:

Iowa 13, Illinois 12 (1995): This game was ugly. The Illini, led by quarterback R. D. Johnson, scored two touchdowns in the fourth quarter to win, 13-12. The Hawkeyes had a chance to win at the end, but a missed field goal attempt by Dan Fritsch gave the victory to Illinois.

Iowa 27, Iowa State 20 (1999): This game was another ugly one. The Hawkeyes led by quarterback Kirk Ferentz, scored two touchdowns in the fourth quarter to win, 27-20. The game was marked by mistakes on both sides of the ball.

In summary, homecoming games can be exciting and memorable, but they can also be forgettable. It's all part of the tradition of Iowa football.
Despite 1-4 record, Tepper high on Illini

Doug Allen

The Daily Iowan

Illinois head coach Lou Tepper hopes to change some minds back Tuesday when the Illini face No. 5 Iowa at Kinnick Stadium. The Illini enter the game at 1-4, but Tepper said it is not necessarily an indication of a bad team. The Illini have been close in three of the losses, including last week’s 20-12 setback to No. 6 Ohio State. Two non-contact fumbles, and a touchdown pass called back because of a penalty nullify widespread factors, which will help give the Buckeyes the win.

In spite of the losses, Tepper said his team has grown. "We played miserably with very little emotion or fire in our eyes," he said. "There were times when we played very hard, but we were not prepared to win the game." He said since the team we have played very hard and fired up for the game, he said.

Tepper said the Buckeyes’ 5-3 conference record is misleading because of the Illini’s tough schedule.

"I think you’ll find that both will be playing at their peak and they’ll be motivated," he said. "I think (Illinois) is one of the finest coaching teams that we play and I know that’s what you’re supposed to say, but that’s what I believe."

Tepper is especially impressed with Iowa’s defense and feels they could be a problem for the young Illinois offense, which will be led today by sophomore quarterback Johnny Johnson.

According to Tepper, Johnson played great in Illinois’ 30-10 win at Purdue, but failed in his recent start when the Illini failed to score a touchdown against the Buckeyes.

Joining Johnson in the backfield are tailbacks Kevin Hardy, who scored Illinois’ only rushing touchdown this season, and Clinton Lynch and fullback Tyrone Douthard, who scored Illinois’ last touchdown against Ohio State. He is joined at outside linebacker by John Holzeg, whose 8.0 tackles per game rank him fourth in the conference.

Senior Rice and Kevin Hardy start at inside linebacker, Rice’s seven sacks lead the Illini defense and Hardy’s 41 tackles rank him third in the conference.

Freshman Jason Dilger and sophomore linebacker Wesley Rice pressures Munner this season.

Freshman Jason Dilger leads all Illini receivers with 13 catches and 148 yards on 11 targets. Johnson will also throw to split ends Jim Kinnick and Gary Brown, who combined for 75 catches, 1,211 yards and 13 touchdowns.

Hawkeye Horizons

Planned sports facility promises to be the future of Iowa Athletics

Do you want to work for the Iowa Hawkeyes?

The new 35,000-square-foot athletic facility will be built between the practice bubble and the Iowa football field.

"We've had some ups and downs, and we've been in hundreds of campaigns," said Jennings.

Hawkeye Horizons project is to be the catalyst for Hawkeye victories for years to come.

The goal of the project is twofold. First and foremost is the construction of a new 35,000-square-foot facility for the football program.

Secondly, it will also create advanced sports medicine facilities, weight training rooms, and athletic training rooms and academic centers.

The second part of the project is to renovate 29,000 square feet of space in the Recreation Building. The campus is being conducted by a group of volunteers with assistance from the University of Iowa Foundation and staff members from men's and women's athletic programs.

Assistant athletic director Mark Jennings is working on the campaign for the Horizons project. He says current size and space constraints are the main reason for developing the facility and renovating the existing medical treatment facility.

"The football staff has indicated a need for a new weight room and medical treatment facility," said Jennings. "In these facilities, we can produce better athletes, which translates to better wins." Jennings added that the new facility will offer an improved treatment of athletes.

"There are 11 Iowa sports teams using the Recreation Building. It was built in 1969 for about 15 athletes. There are about 300 athletes using it," said Jennings.

"The weight room is 2,000 square feet, which is by far the smallest in the Big Ten. The next smallest is in the Big Ten is 620 square feet. Our weight room is smaller than the University of Northern Iowa's.

"The new facility will be housed between the indoor practice facility and the football team, giving them better access to the athletic training rooms." Jennings pointed out that these improvements will have a large impact in the area of nutrition.

"Our team has already started the process of building a new facility," Jennings said. "If you don't get the athletes as hard to compete as the Big Ten level.

"We've heard about it," said Jennings. "We've heard about it as well as some other issues. There will be no health benefits or major expenses on the project.

"We have also had some positive feedback from alumni and other supporters of the project. We've been in hundreds of dollars and cents," said Jennings.

The Hawkeye Horizons project has already raised $3.3 million and is expected to be complete by 1994.

"Football and basketball pay the way for all sports," said Jennings. "If you want to ask the other sports teams and asked them if they were in favor of the facility, their answer would be a resounding yes," said Jennings. "I think the Iowa basketball team is extremely important to all sports."
Offensive line begins healing process

Joel Benefiel The Daily Iowan

If admitting you have a problem is the first step toward solving it, then the Iowa offensive line is headed for better days.

After leading the Iowa offense to its highest yardage in conference play against Ohio State and Iowa State, the offense has stumbled in Big Ten play — and the Hawkeyes have been on a roll in the second half of the season. Junior left tackle Matt Quest moved to right tackle and sophomore snapper Casey Verba announced his return from an injury.

"It's obvious that we're going to be better," head coach Hayden Fry said. "We have some problems to work on and work on and work on, but I think all five of us can work on at the same time we're going to be successful." The offensive line's difficulty against the Navy line led the Hawkeye coaching staff to make some changes. Starting right tackle Matt Quest moved to left tackle, opening up the position for a combination of Verba and freshman starter Aaron Kooiker (pro- tected with a redshirt to return next season).

Another major change in the offensive line was the move of guard Jason Wiegmann from guard to center, made necessary when senior center, left guard, and starting right tackle Matt Quest was injured.

"We're going to be as honest with the offense as we possibly can be," Verba said. "We're not going to hide anything, and we're not going to run away from any problems we're having."

While Kooiker and Verba are only freshman, starting right tackle Bill Lange is the lone senior starter for Saturday's contest with Illinois. While he has been called upon more in the last few conference games, Lange feels the competition between linemen in practice will help the unit improve.

"The competition can't help but make you better, because if you're not putting in practice, that guy behind you is going to be in your spot," Lange said. "We're not going to let that happen, so we're all competing."

"Since our quarterback's right-handed, he left tackle has to protect his blind side," Lange said. "At least if you're playing right tackle, the quarterback can see if he's going to be pressured."

For freshman Odems, a season of transitions

Terry Collins
The Daily Iowan

Making the adjustment to campus life is just one of the reasons freshman wide receiver Dennis Odems has been successful in his short time at Iowa.

Odems, 5-foot-10, 175-pound sophomore from Austin, Texas, said that he loves his new environment.

"Iowa City is a great place, I enjoy being here a lot," he said. "I've spent the last two summers here with camps, working out with coach Don Patterson and receivers coach Harold Jasper."

Odems, who attended the same high school as Iowa native Robert Shaw, said being in Iowa City for a longer period of time than most students has helped him with the rigors of playing football.

"I think I'm more adjusted to school academically," he said. "I've had my seasons here and still have a lot to learn about the receiver position.

"I always told me the correct way to run a route or anything," he said. "Now that Odems has made the transition to Iowa City, what does Odems see for his career?

"I'm still young, but I have to take advantage of every situation that comes my way," Odems said. "I'm more adjusted to school academically, and I'm more familiar with my surroundings, so I have to be more confident when the coaches let me go out and play. I know I can help this team."

Oddly, this week, our three tough transitions.

For Rochester Odems saw his first extended action in a 26-7 Iowa at Michigan Oct. 3, after the Iowa State game.

"My role on the team is to back up the starting wide receivers Harold Jasper and Jeff Anttila," Odems said. "I've basically learned everything about the receiver position, and it is my job to help them.

Odems, a tailback in high school, said that the experience of Jasper and Anttila has helped him in his new position.

"I've basically learned everything about the receiver position, and it is my job to help them.

Coach Patterson and I have a very good working relationship," Odems said. "He's always telling me to be prepared to play because you never know when the opportunity will come to perform."

Odems' big chance came two weeks ago at Michigan, where he started in place of Anttila, including a key reception for 36 yards in the crucial drive late in the game.

"I took it as a challenge," Odems said. "It was a real vote of confidence when the coaches let me go out and play. I know I can help this team."

Not that his opportunity has arrived, what does Odems see for himself in future games for the Hawkeyes?

"I'm still young, but I have to take advantage of every situation that comes my way," Odems said. "I have to be considered as a big-play man, I think."

"I'm a player in Iowa City for a longer period of time than most students has helped him with the rigors of playing football.

Illini bring fearsome 'D' to Kinnick

For a team that has trouble scoring points, the Iowa, the unbreakable 14-4-1, 11-1 and 5-11-1, have turned the defensive intensity, beating No. 11 Arizona to 16 points and No. 6-No. State to 32 - including two touchdowns that followed出色 times like Mays and Trawinski. The study of the schedule, Illini coach Lou Tepper said, "We're ranked 10th in the nation in total defense and we won't start a game against a "We've a long way from perfect, but this is a year for us to improve," Tepper said.

STRENGTHS
- The Illini defense has been a workhorse. In its last two losses, Illini have scored only one touchdown, the only one against Penn State. Statistically, the defense is ranked 12th in the nation.

WEAKNESS
- The Illini defense is giving up only 2.9 yards per carry, just 3-for-15 in 14 games this season. After playing 410 yards in the first half of the Michigan game, the defense held Penn State to 36 and 48 in the second half. The defense is somewhat deceiving, however, because quarterback Darnell Pinckney has been sacked for a total of 36 yards.

TOUGH F O b s
- Iowa has 13 tackles against the Illini defense, which ranks 19th in the nation.

INSIDE STRONG
- Iowa's toughest challenge will be the Illini defense, which ranks 12th in the nation.

OFFENSIVE LINE
- Illinois' offensive line is expected to struggle against Iowa's defensive line, which ranks second in the nation.
