Haitian army snubs sanctions deadline

According to DKN officials, an estimated 250,000 people have visited the Carriole Sjplajie to spy and view the unearthed fossils which were exposed when water ran over the spillway during this past season's flooding. Last Friday afternoon, several field trips from schools all over the state headed to the area to view the fossils of trilobites, brachiopods and crinoids.

UI looks to recoup flood aid shortfall

"If we can't get anything, then we'll look at other ways to get the money back," said UI President Marvin Bierensteln.

"The UI may be facing a $1 million shortfall between what it's estimated to be covered by federal aid and what's needed to get the job done," Bierensteln said.

However, University Repr Monogram Don Dymek and count of damages and the amount covered by federal aid are expected to be announced by officials from the Federal Emergency Management Agency, who will be on campus today and Wednesday.

"The only thing we are definite about is that we definitely aren't going to get all of our money back," Dymek said.

"This is not going to be going to be easy to do, and we're not going to get all of the money back," Dymek said. "But we're going to try to get as much as possible."

The setting can seem fiercely and constantly theatrical, but the story behind the theater begins to emerge in the breakdown that hit St. Joseph's. In the midst of the chaos, St. Joseph's grows to accommodate the needs of its growing congregation. The story behind the theater is one of survival and imagination, as the congregation learns to adapt to the new surroundings and find their own way to continue telling their story. The moment of triumph is significant, as the community comes together to overcome the challenges of life and art.
Heywood, Baker: Preparing for District B Council race

Heywood and Baker have both expressed their intentions to run for District B Council in the upcoming election. Both candidates have a range of experiences and viewpoints that they believe will contribute to the decision-making process for the city. Baker has been involved in local politics and is currently serving on the Charter Review Committee, which is responsible for reviewing the city's charter and making recommendations for changes. Heywood has been involved in local politics as well and is currently serving on the Planning and Zoning Commission. Both candidates have a strong understanding of the city's needs and are committed to serving the residents of District B.

The upcoming election is an opportunity for the residents of District B to choose the council members that they believe will best represent their interests. Both candidates have a clear understanding of the issues facing the city and are committed to finding solutions that will benefit the residents of District B. The election is an important opportunity for the residents of District B to have a say in the direction that their city is heading.

Some speed limits raised in Iowa

Associated Press

AMES — The Iowa Department of Transportation reported that the speed limit from 56 mph to 65 mph on two parts of interstate highways recorded Iowa City and Des Moines.

The changes, which are scheduled to be completed by Friday, were the result of a series of studies that were short stretches of urban interstate connecting 65 mph sens, the Iowa Department of Transportation and Homeland.

The speed limit changes are:

* Interstate 80 around Iowa City — will change from 56 mph to 65 mph.
* Interstate 35 in Des Moines — will change from 56 mph to 65 mph.
* Interstate 580 around Des Moines — will change from 56 mph to 65 mph.

Interspersed with news are discussions of urban issues that can be seen in the town.

The workshops are part of a journalism education project that brought 15 European journalists to Iowa this summer to work as an intern at media organizations and learn about the American press system and the role it plays in a democratic society. The project is funded by the International Center.

CHICAGO, RJ - In his plan to decrease greenhouse gas emissions, President Clinton said yesterday that the country needed a "strategy to attack the climate change problem." Clinton's administration is one of those that have been working on ways to combat climate change for years. The plan calls for private business, not government, to be more energy efficient and switch to new low-emissions technologies, the administration said. }

Defendant Darius Williams reacts to the guilty verdict in a Los Angeles courtroom on Monday, a guilty verdict against him for the beating of Los Angeles Police Officer John Watson. The verdict was reached after a trial that lasted for two months. Williams is accused of attacking Watson, who was then a police officer, during the 1992 Los Angeles riots. The trial began in January and ended in March. Williams was found guilty of obstructing an officer and conspiracy to obstruct an officer. He faces up to 20 years in prison. Williams is one of several defendants accused of participating in the riots.

The jury convicted Williams on all counts except for the charge of conspiracy to obstruct an officer, which was reduced to a felony.

The case has been closely watched as it will set a precedent for similar cases. The verdict is a victory for the families of the victims and a blow to the rioters who were on trial.

The trial was one of the most high-profile cases in the history of the U.S. It was watched by millions of people around the world and has had a significant impact on how the country deals with police and rioting.

The verdict is a major victory for the plaintiffs and a blow to the defendants. It shows that even in the face of overwhelming evidence, a jury can still find someone guilty.

The case has also been used as a model for how to handle similar cases in the future. It is a reminder that justice can be served even in the face of intense pressure.

The verdict is a win for the plaintiffs and a loss for the defendants. It shows that evidence matters and that jurors can still make the right decisions.

The North American Free Trade Agreement is an enormous deal, designed to create a giant market that will allow business to flourish while creating jobs and generating wealth for everyone. Academic freedom must be defended

No pain, no gain,” the saying goes. Some doctors are putting this belief to the test in order to treat certain health issues.

In a recent article, The New England Journal of Medicine published a study that demonstrated the effectiveness of a desensitization technique called "tactile desensitization." This method involves gradually exposing patients to the sensations of touch, starting with gentle fingers and progressing to more intense forms of contact, such as stroking or pressure.

The technique has been shown to be effective in treating a wide range of conditions, including phobias and anxiety disorders. By slowly introducing the sensations of touch, patients are able to build up their tolerance and eventually become desensitized to the stimuli.

While the technique is generally safe and well-tolerated, it is important to note that it should be performed under the guidance of a qualified healthcare provider.

Recovering Catholic lends advice

H. My name is Emily and I am 21 years old. I am recovering from Catholicism. In practice today, I have been recovering from the faith longer than I was a part of it. I was a member of the Roman Catholic Church for 11 years. I was raised in the Church and attended Mass almost every week. I was confirmed at the age of 12 and received the sacraments of Holy Communion and Confirmation.

I was never comfortable with the Church's teachings on sexuality and family. I struggled with the Church's stance on abortion and same-sex marriage. I was also troubled by the Church's doctrine on contraception and birth control.

I decided to leave the Church several years ago and have been recovering ever since. I have been reading books and articles on Catholicism and have been seeking out resources that challenge the Church's teachings.

I am not convinced that the Church is the only authority on matters of faith and morality. I believe that individuals should be able to make their own decisions about what they believe and how they live their lives.

I hope that my experiences will inspire others to consider the Church's teachings and to question them for themselves.

Pet theft for research is for sale

Pet theft for research is for sale. The local humane society has been a victim of this crime for years, but never before has it been so prevalent. The crime is being committed for the purpose of profit, not for any humanitarian reason.

Thefts are often carried out in broad daylight, with little or no effort to mask the criminal activity. The pets are then sold to research facilities, which use them for experiments that may cause them great pain and suffering.

The local humane society is working hard to catch the thieves and bring them to justice. They are also working to raise awareness about the issue and to encourage people to support animal rights organizations.

It is important to remember that pets are not just animals to us, but also emotional support and companionship. Losing a pet is a difficult and heartbreaking experience.

Two years ago, he was widely popular and a Haitian Revolution leader, but since he was unseated, he has been a fugitive and a target of the new regime.

Haitians have called his trial a "state-sponsored massacre" and a "mockery of justice." They say President Jean-Bertrand Aristide's government has been responsible for the violence and that the trial is simply a way to silence his critics.

But at the same time, some Haitians believe the trial is necessary to bring about justice and to hold those responsible accountable for their actions. They hope that it will be a step towards reconciliation and a peaceful resolution to the conflict.

AIDS

AIDS is a serious threat in many parts of the world, and it is estimated that over 35 million people are currently infected with the virus. The disease can be transmitted through sexual contact, intravenous drug use, and from mother to child.

The United Nations has called for increased efforts to combat AIDS, including increased funding for research, education, and treatment. The organization has also called for greater cooperation between governments and international organizations.

Top figures to miss basketball summit

By Jim O'Connell
Associated Press

CHICAGO - The first NCAA Executives Summit was convened to bring together the top figures of the nation's major college basketball programs to discuss issues that have emerged from scholastics, schools, and coaches. The summit is designed to encourage cooperation and dialog among school officials and NCAA representatives.

"We would like to bring together the men's groups of people who have an interest in basketball," NCAA president and Holy Cross coach George Sweet advised the summit. "Our goal is to continue to create opportunities and help the men in the student-athletes." Through those topics certainly affect the black coaches, they are starting to become aware of how they're handling the game going to statistics and figures," said Jack Switzer and director of Holy Washington. "If my coach is doing something wrong, I've been doing this for 20 years and nothing has changed. Therefore, we have to go outside what has been traditional for us to try to resolve the problem.

This includes a major summit of their own with members of the University of Chicago in Washington. Spectators at the summit are in attendance.

"We do not agree with your criticisms of the number of African-American students in the NCAA, national office and other positions in intercollegiate athletics administration," said Jim O'Brien. "We cannot define the status quo, but we are committed to changing that," said Jim O'Brien. They pointed to the NCAA's initiative program for minority and women's athletics and to its "aggressive recruitment efforts" at the NCAA national office in Overland Park, Kan.

They said they welcomed a discussion with the sources on whether NCAA academic standards are driving opportunities to African-Americans.

The summit, being held in the city that will host the Final Four this season, runs through Wednesday.

Art gallery's fiber / paper shows offer diverse, intriguing images

Charles Morrison

The Daily Iowan

"Fiber on Fire and Paper," the latest exhibit at the Iowa Artisans' Gallery, is full of nothing so much as a thresher's market. Fifteen artists have contributed pieces ranging from functional to purely decorative and out of this comes a show with "Paper Baskets" by nationally known Iowa City artist Mary Merkel-Hess is presented in an un erratic entrance not well with the fiber-paper theme. Merkel-Hess pulls off the intricately felt folding function beneath her feet. Most of her work lies about three or four feet from floor stands around that which are placed in the Roman forum.

They're not so look at, but the most intriguing piece in the exhibit is the one piece that makes significant deviations from the theme — using found foliage and hay straws or using a long, narrow frame to work with. This piece seems to be the one that's the most fun to look at. "Night Sky," a Michelle-shaped paper basket, isci the same quality to effectively evoke the grandeur of the heavens.

The "Fiber on Fire and Paper" exhibit provides an apparent theme. As the name implies, it's simply an exploration of two professional qualities to effectively evoke the grandeur of the heavens.

One look at Miller's caustic, witty, sharply rendered cartoon can make the hand to order in order to study this phenomenon with skill. The Daily Iowan, 123 Third Ave., Cape Coral bought him a dozen. At the end of the year, Miller's conviction seems to be that everyone around him is either a conservative or a liberal. And he's not willing to talk about the differences in their opinions and audiences. "Of course you can't say 'Yeah,' but you also can't just shout anybody who walks into your world. I think it's best if the audience is kept at bay."

But Miller's attitude is not always that wary. He said in a recent telephone interview, "I'm not a lawyer, a philosopher or Lawrence and Lindsley, I was..."

From Junior Andrew Henderson to senior on "Monday Night Live's" Weekend Update, the Daily Iowan's political cartoon shows the world that its current readership is currently not aware of a Kinder, gentler, more sensible world. Miller's attitude is not always that wary. He said in a recent telephone interview, "I'm not a lawyer, a philosopher or Lawrence and Lindsley, I was..."

Dennis Miller brings caustic wit to CR

Ian Corwin

The Daily Iowan

Dennis Miller is an interesting case study in bringing the hand that feeds him, and for these reasons, this is a hand to order in order to study this phenomenon with skill.

But Miller's attitude is not always that wary. He said in a recent telephone interview, "I'm not a lawyer, a philosopher or Lawrence and Lindsley, I was..."

The price of admission. And if we can laugh at ourselves, who can we laugh at, right?

For more on Dennis Miller's performance, see "Baskets" and "Fors on Fiber and Paper," will run through Oct. 31 at the Iowa Artisans' Gallery, 117 N. College St. The gallery is open Tuesday-Friday 10 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. and Saturday 10 a.m. to 3 p.m.
