Nathan a finalist for U. of Southern Florida presidency

UI President J. Bruce Native has been selected as one of six candidates for the presidency of the University of South Florida.

Nathan was unavailable for comment Sunday. Vice President for University Relations Rose Pothoven said Nathan had participated in the University of South Florida's interview process and is one of the final candidates. However, she said she does not know the extent of Nathan's interest in the position.

"It would be a great loss for our university, should Nathan be selected," Pothoven said.

In the past, Pothoven has been one of the university's most vocal critics of the administration.

"It would be a real tragedy for us," she said.

The university is facing a serious financial crisis, and the search for a new president could be costly.

"I don't want to see the university go into bankruptcy," Pothoven said.

Protestors swig 10,000 campus newspapers

COLLEGE PARK, Md. — Protestors at the University of Iowa have been distributing thousands of copies of a newspaper called "The Daily Iowa," which they claim is a "government mouthpiece." The newspaper was started by a group of students who are dissatisfied with the quality of the university's official newspaper, "The Daily Iowan.

The protestors said they were trying to make the campus aware of the problems within the university's administration.

"We want to show the administration that they are not the only ones who are concerned about the state of the university," one of the protestors said.

The university administration has denied any wrongdoing.

"We have no idea what they are talking about," said University President Gary Zeppos.

The protestors have been planning to distribute the newspaper at regular intervals, and they are considering selling subscriptions to raise money.

"We are not afraid of criticism," one of the protestors said.

The university administration has not responded to the protestors' demands.

"We are not going to back down," said one of the protestors.

Larry Baker, Ernie Lehman and Tom Novick are the three members of the Iowa City City Council, and incumbent Naomi Novick is the term. After a four-year term, Novick has decided not to run for re-election.

"I think we need to get a new fresh perspective," Novick said.

"I think it's important to have a complete city council," Novick said.

Baker, who is running for a second term, has received support from many residents.

"I've been on the council for four years," Baker said.

"I think I can bring a fresh perspective," Baker said.

Lehman, who is running for a first term, has also received support from many residents.

Town honors Satan

Associated Press
Davenport — It’s not often that someone who’s killed more than 60 people in a single disaster is honored, but that was the case last week when Davenport Mayor Pat Gilsbe said the city would bestow an award on a man who had been convicted of murder.

"Few of us can say we’ve dedicated our lives to public service and never killed anyone," said Gilsbe. "I think this is a fitting honor for someone who has been so devoted." The award was presented to a man who had been convicted of murder and was scheduled to be sentenced on March 8.

Red Cross to offer volunteer classes

Holly Reinhardt

The Daily Iowan

Through the floods of 1993 are already flooding our minds, the need for volunteers to respond to disasters will always remain.

With the help of volunteers, Red Cross societies will be able to respond to disasters such as floods, hurricanes, and earthquakes. The Red Cross is currently looking for volunteers who are interested in helping.

"We need volunteers who are interested in helping," said Jane Johnson, director of the Red Cross. "We need people who are willing to help, who are capable of handling crises, and who are interested in helping others." Johnson explained that the Red Cross has two types of volunteer opportunities: short-term and long-term. She said that people interested in helping should contact the Red Cross.

The UI Student Senate meeting Tuesday night ended in an uproar after a motion called for quorum during discussion of a motion condemning The Daily Iowan. Members of The Coalition of Ul Minority Students attended the meeting to ask the Senate to pass a motion making the use of quorum during the meetings illegal.

The motion is the latest in a series of protests prompted by an editorial cartoon in the Oct. 27 issue of the DI which coalition members found hurtful. The cartoon, drawn by syndicated commentator John Gardner, depicted an African-American man with a nose around his neck with members of the Ku Klux Klan surrounding him. One of the Ku Klux Klan members is a newspaper with the headline "The Negro in Daily Denying truth," and says, "Slow . . . must never be mistaken." Coalition member Precious Muhammad said she has seen "at least 200" other similarities like this.

"We feel this has put the student body in an absolute danger," she said. "We are not condoning censorship . . . but we ask the UI to reconcile, understand and assist our efforts.

The resolution was partially re­jected and sent to be passed when Student Senate President Randy Gurley said he would bring it forward on Wednesday. The resolution, he said, would allow the administration to make an appeal to the Senate to determine if the resolution was acceptable.

"It's a crook of shit. It's absolutely inexcusable," John Gardner, USA President, on the call for quorum that ended Tuesday night's meeting with no vote.

"We are not the only group on campus who are offended," he said. adding the First Amendment protects free speech and inatcepted everyone's and ideological belief. "I'm offended by the way the DI portrays minority students.

Coalition member Maya Gavin said the resolution meant to "censor our opinions and voices." Coalition member Precious Muhammad said she has seen "at least 200" other similarities like this.

"We don't want to upset the student body in an absolute danger," she said. "We are not condoning censorship.

Robert said he will call the resolu­tion passing at the next meeting, "you're not the only group on campus who are offended.

"It's a crook of shit," he said. "It's absolutely inexcusable.

Muhammad said the coalition will get the resolution passed. "This call for quorum was not a mistake," she said. "It was just a move to pass our motion."

Boyd Smith, UI assistant to the registrar, said the student's which were released this year, had three good years of enrollment.

Overall, enrollment this semester was down 412 students from last year, leaving a total of 3,262, while the number of transfer students decreased from last fall by 14 students to 1,981.

Along with a slight enrollment decrease, there was a small increase in foreign students on campus. A total of 741 foreign students entered the semester at the UI, compared to the fall number of 741.

Last fall, 1,811 foreign students were enrolled at the UI, and this semester there were 1,981.

Barrow said a lot of speculation could be made on this decline, but the decrease is not too disturbing. "If you have to look at the old and flow in everything," he said. "It is a decrease, but it's not a huge decrease."

One of the number of minority students and foreign students as the administration would like too be increased.

The bank of facts carries infor­mation on topics such as the most popular undergraduate majors, grade point averages of UI stu­dents, and what departments the cur­rent UI students come from.

The information is put together by the Office of the Registrar to make it easy to find out what kinds of people make up the stu­dent body. Lawless said. Infor­mation about where students are from and geographic information gives students a resource, she said.

TRAUMA SYMPTOMS DEVELOPING

Psychological impact of flood studied at UI

Chris Pothoven

Victims of this summer's flooding may only now be starting to experience the full psychological impact of the disaster and could be affected for months to come, a UI professor said.

UI psychology Professor John Harvey, an expert on grieving and memory impairment, has launched a study at the university of psychological reactions of flood survivors in the most devastated regions of the Midwest.

A $850,000 grant from the National Science Foundation is funding the study.

By next year, hundreds of Midwesterners with symptoms similar to Post Traumatic Stress Disorder, PTSD, will be enrolled in the study. PTSD is a condition caused by extreme stress and trauma, such as veteran's victims of violent crime and other serious trauma survivors.

"We want to determine the psychological toll this has had on people beyond the practical matters of job loss and income and reconstruction of homes and communities," he said. "Some of the victims will have experienced as many as 10 traumatic events in a single year."

These symptoms include anxiety, difficulty controlling or feeling emotions, flashbacks, constriction and memory impairment, intrusive thoughts, lack of ability to concentrate, depression and sleep disturbances.

"Some of these symptoms are quite intense," Harvey said. "These symptoms are often difficult to identify with families members, Harvey said. Research on other trauma disorders, such as Hurricane Andrew and earthquakes in San Francisco, shows that in the weeks and months following a disaster, diverse, emotional and alimentary problems are much higher, he said.

The problems related to hurricane and earthquakes may vary somewhat from the flood-related problems, Harvey said. Problems arising from with this flood will be in the flood's extended nature of the disaster. It has a long-term, "elongated effect," he said. "People who are having any sort of problems, they need to reasonable themselves. It's extremely difficult to manage."

It's not disasters that are even more critical, people can work through the grieving and recovery process now."

Senate fight on Packwood case produces compromise proposal

Larry Margasak Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Short-tempered senators clashed Tuesday over Sen. Bob Packwood's diaries, with one side calling all the original sexual misconduct allegations "righteous" and the other saying Packwood was "using every bit of the protection of potential sexual misconduct and criminality." Packwood disclosed that the original sexual misconduct controversy had been expanded to questions of whether he tried to intimidate some women to keep them from testifying against him.

The independent examiner could not determine whether Packwood had attempted to intimidate witnesses and the hiring issue. It was Packwood himself who told a Republican that the committee was "taking care of the 'later' things so that we could get a cover-up of potential sexual misconduct and criminality." Packwood disclosed that the original sexual misconduct controversy had been expanded to questions of whether he tried to intimidate some women to keep them from testifying against him.

However, the care of the arguments focused on this statement. The committee's own general counsel had heard Packwood say, "We have some trouble with here is political correctness or due process." MICKY'S BREAKFAST Mon.-Sat. 7-11am Sun. 7-12

PLO walkout marks 1st snap in peace talks

William Mone
Associated Press

TABA, Egypt — The PLO walked out of peace talks with Israel on Tuesday, accusing the Israelis of trying to back out of an agreement that forced them to withdraw. Yitzhak Rabin, the PLO's chief negotiator, charged that Israel wants to redeploy its troops rather than pull them out of the occupied Gaza Strip and the town of Jericho in the West Bank. Israel's withdrawal plan, he said, was reached at the start of the 13th Israeli-Palestinian Liberation Organization agreement on Palestinian autonomy.

The Palestinians walked out this time after major disagreements over three weeks on implementing the Israeli-Palestinian accord. The BBC said Monday talks were suspended because the Palestinians had been braving snipers almost as deadly as the shelling in the area.

The Associated Press

"I'm not going to back down," Rabin said in announcing the walkout. "If the Israelis present Monday what I consider to be quite lieing to the meaning of withdrawal and its requirements," Shaath said.

"The agreement provided for withdrawal by the Israeli forces from the Gaza Strip and the Jericho area, and within the rest of the city were barred Monday by the Israelis who said they were leaving the area. The United Nations was required to inspect all the front line, a process that usually takes at least 48 hours because all the troops must be notified, said Lt. Col. Bill Alkman, a U.N. spokesman in Baghuz. That means the earlier patrols can resume in the area.

Alkman said U.N. observers were not present during the shelling and sniping that began when Israel ordered the post that is going to be set up in Jericho to leave Monday. Maysel said some of the military was just leaving Jericho when the shelling started. Shaath said the military was going to leave the area.

"This is a withdrawal agreement and not a redeployment agreement," he said. "It has been quite failing to grasp the meaning of the talks to respond."

"This is in a withdrawal agreement and not a redeployment agreement," he said. "It has been quite failing to grasp the meaning of the talks to respond."

"The Israelis themselves had demanded that anything that is linked to the security needs."

"Shaath said he was going to Tunis to consult with Yasser Arafat, PLO chairman. He suggested the U.S. intervene once more to help the Israelis with the opponents in the occupied territories.

Abstraction of enemies: a dangerous practice

The old, unfolding world we live in has been replaced by a borderless, improvisational frontier - a world of images and ideas, a debourgeoisiement of the face, the face from which we have been categorically removed. This is the world of the perfect illustration of the world's current, technologically-enriched culture.

Today's technological warfare ceases the face of the enemy, becoming mechanical, dehumanized, and stereotypical - a world we now call the 'internet' and 'cyberspace'.

The heroic warrior image, the passionate, intense portrayal of the artist, is now replaced by a world of images and ideas, where the artist becomes a mere tool or machine, no longer a living, breathing human being.

This is a world where the concept of 'explicit' is now defined by what we see on the screen, not by what we actually experience. The line between what is 'acceptable' and what is 'not acceptable' is now blurred, and the artist becomes a mere tool or machine, no longer a living, breathing human being.

It is not that we no longer care about the concept of 'explicit', but that it has been reduced to a mindless, mechanical, and often misleading concept. The true meaning of 'explicit' is now defined by what we see on the screen, not by what we actually experience.

The real problem with forcing teachers to remove certain works from their curricula is that it is no longer a matter of what is 'explicit' or 'not explicit', but rather a matter of what is 'acceptable' or 'not acceptable' in terms of the concept of 'explicit'.

This is a world where the concept of 'explicit' is now defined by what we see on the screen, not by what we actually experience. The line between what is 'acceptable' and what is 'not acceptable' is now blurred, and the artist becomes a mere tool or machine, no longer a living, breathing human being.
The best advice! Leave your cultural baggage at home

Fry: Non-conference game a good idea for Iowa

Ronald Bloom

NEW YORK — When John Wooden was the University of Kentucky basketball coach, the basketball season was over by mid-February, starting in late December.

It's a lot of time to be playing basketball.

For the Iowa men's basketball coach, the idea of this week's non-conference game against the University of Chicago is that it will give his team a chance to "get into a flow" before the Big Ten schedule begins.

"It's a game that's of value," said coach Tom Crean, who has led the Hawkeyes to a 10-1 record this season.

"We're playing a team that has a great tradition in Chicago. We want to make sure we're prepared for that kind of game."
Indiana bad news for Paterno's Nittany Lions

STATE COLLEGE, Pa. — The lights had gone on in Happy Valley,Pa. for Paterno State now that it’s past Michigan and Ohio State.

Unable to get on offense, the Lions were left with many headaches in a 39-7 loss to the Buckeyes on Saturday.

"We’re really in the position that we have to do a better job of managing the game," Paterno said.

In its second loss in the last seven games, the Lions (4-6) have missed the chance to make a playoff run.

"It’s not really a bad loss," Paterno said. "We played well enough to be competitive, but we didn’t do anything offensively that was any good.

"They were better defensively than we were offensively, and we couldn’t get the ball off the ground.

"We have to get better offensively, and we have to play better defensively."

New Sandburg collection shows different side of poet

EN. D’Aleman

Associated Press

Chicago — A collection of "new prose" by Carl Sandburg may cause some listeners to shudder, involving the editor who redrew the "Rootabaga Stories," the poet’s lifelong classic.

"These are early works. From 1895 to 1916," said George Strick, the Illinois State Historical Library who is editing the "Rootabaga Stories" through the 1960s," said George Strick, the Illinois State Historical Library who is editing the "Rootabaga Stories" through the 1960s.

Readers may be surprised to find Sandburg discussing the "horrors of capital punishment and the slums of Chicago" in the 19th century. Sandburg’s most famous work, "The People," "The Poet's" and "Chicago History," was published in 1916, and Sandburg’s life is a struggle for social justice and the struggle for equal rights.

The poet’s work has inspired much of Sandburg’s later work, and Sandburg’s views on social issues have been influential in shaping the American worker’s voice. Sandburg hated the idea of capital punishment and sought to give his readers a sense of the working class struggle.

"It’s hard to find a contemporary voice to describe the struggles of working-class people," said Elinor Strick, a Sandburg scholar. "This volume gives a glimpse of Sandburg’s perspective on social issues, and it provides a rare look at his personal views on life and death."

Playing with the likes of such legends as Charlie Haden, Billy Higgins and Pat Metheny would be wish come true for any young musician. The University of Iowa's 4 Horsemen, or 'sound poets' as they were referred to, were recently granted wish in the early 90's with the release of two albums, "The Happy Hour" and "The Iowa Tradition". The act of the 4 Horsemen is to add motion or sound to poetry. A couple of the artists, professor John Redman and

"Poetry in Motion" is a series of video shorts, where artists put their own spin on the act of reading poetry. The artists range from grizzled Charles Redman, who has been teaching at the university for over a decade, to the young, energetic Amy Haden, who is a student at the university. The documentary starts by showing the audience why poetry is not just good for words, but for the soul. The documentary looks at the life of the 4 Horsemen, their attempts to add motion or sound to their poetry, and their success. This isn't just good poetry, this is good entertainment. A couple of them, however, do not
