Clinton lifts Vietnam trade embargo

George Good
Associated Press
WASHINGTON - President Clinton made a monumental gift of presidential grace Thursday when he lifted a 28-year-old ban on American trade with Vietnam and also commended the Vietnamese leadership for promoting human rights.

The move opens an important emerging market for American goods and services.

The move was widely welcomed by business leaders and human rights advocates, who said it would further efforts to get a full accounting of missing Americans and that it would destabilize Vietnam's concessions to human rights. The gesture was condemned by some human rights activists and by the Senate, which voted 87 to 1 against the move.

The Senate also voted 96 to 0 against lifting a decade-old moratorium on admissions to the U.S. for Vietnamese refugees.

For years, America's trading partners have urged the de facto embargo on Vietnam - a 1978 agreement that then-Sen. Henry Jackson, D-Wash., and Sen. Frank Church, D-Idaho, had imposed - be lifted.

With the move, the United States will be permitted to conduct formal trade relations with Vietnam, which could mean the loss of $500 million in trade for American companies in the short term.

On one hand, the lifting of the embargo could benefit American companies that want to sell goods and services to Vietnam.

But on the other hand, it could also benefit the communist regime in Vietnam, which has used the embargo as a bargaining chip in its negotiations with the United States.

The embargo has been in place since 1978, when then-President Jimmy Carter imposed a ban on American trade with Vietnam, which had helped to oust the U.S. from its position as the world's largest trading partner.

The Senate vote to lift the embargo was a major victory for human rights activists, who had long been campaigning for the lifting of the ban.

The debate was centering on the role that the embargo played in sustaining the war in Vietnam, which ended in 1975.

College radio - in this case, KRUI with Andy Quinn and Mike Ferris - can be both a training ground and a progressive trendsetter.

The Daily Iowan

College radio may be just as hard to define as the alternative music it plays. Even though the alternative music scene may be the first that comes to mind when people think of college radio, the genre is not as vaguely symbolizing what music means to students.

John Barker, general manager and co-founder of KRUI FM 89.7 and the meaning of college radio is KRUI.

"It is hard to put into a sentence, but this year there is a consciousness of what music means.

The reality unique thing is that every college is different in what music means to students.

While Barker sees college radio as a stepping stone into the professional arena of Broadway; Matt Slowik, an alternative music director at KUOW in Seattle and a former KRUI broadcaster, said college radio is an opportunity for DJs to approach their audiences without the presumptions of professionalism.

"College radio is an opportunity for people to hear DJs that are truly ly spontaneous and sincere - in a positive, cool sense," he said.

you could fit in.

College radio has been responsible for the existence of many "alternative" bands in mainstream music. Things that once were once heard in college radio stations are now heard on the radio.

"We play songs of experimental and even before commercial radio picks it up," said Slowik.

She and song "Cherub Rock & Roll" is not only a fan favorite but also relieves stress.

"We no longer play these songs. They were picked up by the commercial stations," he said.

Mong said college radio is an effective outlet for smaller bands.

Branstad to speak with area leaders

Jodi Reishbard
The Daily Iowan
Gov. Terry Branstad is scheduled to make a stop in the region to discuss the negative impacts of federal policy on the economy.

Prior to the visit, Branstad will attend the Iowa Pork Producers Advisory Board meeting at the John Deere Roundtable in Johnston, on Tuesday, May 14.

At 11:45 a.m., the governor will present information on Forward Iowa to a delegation of community leaders, said to be made up of elected officials and business leaders.

"Having the governor in town provides an opportunity," said the governor's office, "to discuss the significant impact federal policy has on our state and the importance of a strong economy.

Quick said.

Jill Reinhardt, executive director of the Iowa City Development Corporation, said about 80 people are expected to attend.

"It is important to the governor that he provides an opportunity to hear from community leaders, said Jill Reinhardt, administrative assistant to the governor.

But Quick, executive vice president of the Iowa City Development Corporation, said the governor's visit will provide an opportunity for community leaders to make up the governor's audience and will provide time for questions.

"At times you get sessions where the governor, a senator or a state representative in town, it is good to get to listen to what they have to say," said Quick.

"What's good about this is the governor is talking about a new initiative," said Quick.

Four Johnson County WW I veterans to be honored

Jade Sandborn
The Daily Iowan
More than 17 years after the last date of World War I were dead, the four surviving World War I veterans from Johnson County will be honored in a ceremony Saturday at 3 p.m. in the Iowa City National Guard Armory.

Veteran Hugh Douglas, Leslie Freenwich, Charles Righter and Joseph Kerf will be presented medals at the ceremony. Brothers, said Douglas, the ceremony will also provide an opportunity to honor the service of the other 44 veterans who were part of the Iowa City area leaders.

The ceremony will be sponsored by the Military Affairs Association, a local group that was formerly part of the Iowa City chapter of the Military Affairs Association, and the Johnson County Veterans Office.

Annie Tuttle, a public affairs specialist with the Iowa City Veterans Affairs Support Group, said the ceremony is a way for the community to thank the veterans for their service.

"The medals are a gift to all Iowa World War I veterans," said Tuttle. "It is a recognition of their contributions to our freedoms.

"The ceremony is being sponsored by the Military Affairs Association, a local group which was formerly part of the Iowa City chapter of the Military Affairs Association, and the Johnson County Veterans Office, and honoring the veteran is an important reminder for the current generation of our World War I heritage.

Death of Palestinian generates PLO outcry

Nefi MacFarquhar

GAZA CITY, Occupied Gaza Strip - Israeli troops killed a senior Palestinian underground leader during a shootout Thursday in the hunt for fugitives at a time of ed. peacemaking with the PLO. They Jamalaat Hawks, a group they said was made up of soldiers disguised as milkmen to avoid being seen by the Hamas security forces.

An Israeli military spokesman said that two soldiers were wounded in the shootout. It was not clear, however, whether the soldier killed was a member of the Hawks or a civilian.

The Hawks said they were a group of four and that they had been preparing an attack on Israeli forces for days.

The death of Salim Mawhut, 32, who had been the leader of the Hawks, was announced by a senior Hamas official in Gaza, criticized the actions of the Israeli military and the neighboring town of Sderot.

The Hawks, known as a military wing of Yasser Arafat's Fatah, had been on Israel's wanted list for months.

The army shut down the Hawks' refuge camp in the Israeli-occupied West Bank late last year when it said that the group had become a terrorist organization.

At least 18 fugitive Fatah members were killed by Israeli forces in the West Bank and Gaza Strip, witnesses said.

The term "blackface" is used in African-American cultures to refer to a performance style in which white actors or performers use makeup to create a facial resemblance to a black person. This term is considered offensive and derogatory by many African Americans.

In the context of the passage, the phrase "faster than a melting credit card, more powerful than a loan shark" is not directly related to the discussion of "blackface". The passage discusses the impact of welfare programs on children and the decision to have children based on financial incentives. It highlights the financial pressures faced by families, particularly those in poverty, and how these pressures can influence the decision to have children. The passage also mentions the role of government policies and the financial incentives provided by welfare programs in encouraging or discouraging reproduction.

The passage suggests that financial incentives can be a significant factor in the decision to have children, and it notes the impact of such incentives on the poverty rate in America.

Faith holds up under attack
To the Editor:
Two friends of mine, who are Roman Catholics, were interested in Tom Hunter's column last Tuesday. Hunter, a Unitarian, then brought up the question of Jesus as an historical figure and the basis of one's belief system — your filter?
I will not defend Jesus as a historical figure, because I do not see or did not see anything in the Bible that would make him a historical figure. I have read the words of a demon.

To the Editor:
In regard to Tom Hunter's column, I feel that he is correct in saying that Jesus is a historical figure and a historical person, but his argument is not valid. He says that there is no historical evidence to prove that Jesus existed, but I believe that this is a fallacy. There is a lot of evidence that proves that Jesus existed.

A protest in Grendel's defense
To the Editor:
In all honesty, I only started reading the Grendel at an average pace since I found this book a few months ago. However, I noticed that the character of Grendel, who is the main character of the book, had been misunderstood. The character of Grendel has been misunderstood. Grendel is a character who is misunderstood.

Grendel is a character who is misunderstood. He is a character who is misunderstood. He is a character who is misunderstood.

COLUMNS

Washington, D.C.

Washington attorneys are facing a unique challenge in the world of sports law. Traditionally, sports law has focused on issues such as contract negotiations, collective bargaining, and antitrust litigation. However, in recent years, there has been a growing trend toward sports law as a separate and distinct field of law.

The increasing popularity of sports law can be attributed to several factors. First, the growth of professional sports leagues has created a need for legal expertise to handle a variety of issues, from contract disputes to intellectual property rights. Second, the rising levels of revenue in sports has led to an increase in legal challenges, particularly in the areas of antitrust and labor law.

In addition to these factors, the globalization of sports has also contributed to the expansion of sports law. As more and more international athletes and teams enter the sport, there is a growing need for legal professionals who can navigate the complexities of international law.

The demand for sports law professionals is expected to continue to grow in the coming years. As the sport continues to evolve, new legal challenges will arise, creating a demand for legal expertise in this specialized field.

Gable seeks steady lineup

Iowa wrestling coach Dan Gable is looking for a strong team from his Hawkeyes. The Hawkeyes have had mixed results this season, but Gable is hoping for a strong performance in the dual meets.

Dan Gable, who is in his 30th year as head coach, is known for his innovative coaching techniques and his ability to develop successful programs. He has led the Hawkeyes to 20 NCAA championships and 14 Big Ten titles, and his teams have won 23 national individual championships.

Gable's team is currently ranked 16th in the NCAA coaches' poll, but he is hoping for a stronger showing in the upcoming dual meets. The Hawkeyes will begin their season on January 13 against Northern Iowa, and Gable is confident that his team will be able to deliver a strong performance.

The Hawkeyes have a strong team, but they will need to prove their worth in the upcoming dual meets. Gable is looking for a strong team that can compete at a high level and bring home a victory.

Overall, Gable's team is looking for a strong season, and he is confident that his team will be able to deliver a consistent performance throughout the year.
Investigation could go past Games

Bob Raum

A Portland—As Thaddeus Harding said on Thursday, investigators considered whether to expand their presence in the case involving what he knew of the attack on rival skateboarder Mike McOravy.

The Portland Police Department on Wednesday, was preparing with steps that could lead to the seizure of evidence. But that process could drag on for as long as the Portland Police Department said on Wednesday.

As he sat in a public place where he said police had reason to believe he might be involved, McOravy said, "I don't know what other people say."

Andrea Kerrigan, who has not changed her mind, said the investigation is not hindered by the fact that she said in the first part of the trial that she had heard McCravy had been heard.

The first told investigators she knew nothing about anyone having been with her, John McOravy, the trial. She changed her story after he was heard and later said she was false.

The Portland Police Department on Wednesday, said they had not done anything to the case after her return to Portland, where she said she was "no longer interested in the case." The Portland Police Department said they had been asked to voluntarily submit a handwriting sample, a statement that the Portland Police Department seized in the beginning of the investigation.

"Give us a big confidence boost," he said. "It's not going to cost us the game."

Heady and Johnson said they have a balanced scoring with their game. "We're looking forward to playing in the Big Ten," the Portland Police Department said.

"He's a tremendously talented young man," said Heady. "I think that when he was in high school the biggest difference was in his ability to be a good player."

For Iowa, the pressure, they're not going to win the Big Ten Championship this year but they have the presence of mind and the ability to play that will make them a force in the NCAA Tournament."

The Portland Police Department said they have a good chance to be in the NCAA Tournament. "I think there is a lot of pressure on them in a big game," the Portland Police Department said. "For Purdue, you know it's a good team when it's a team that really thinks they can win the Big Ten and with that get a very good seed in the NCAA Tournament plus the prestige of being a Big Ten team."

"Both teams have tremendous pressure on them in this particular game so as a great game to win and that normally makes for pretty good competitive basketball."

Women's swimming: Seniors finish home careers

Doug Allen
The Daily Iowan

After a successful and outstanding regular season, Iowa's swimming and diving team hosted its final Big Ten meet this past weekend. The Hawkeyes posted a 175-115 victory over Minnesota with 16 seniors on hand this past Saturday.

"I think it was kind of good that we got to see them go out in front of their home crowd," said Dave Herda, Iowa's head coach. "At this point I think you have to give them credit for everything they've done and the way they've performed.

"Iowa has not lost a dual meet in four years," Herda noted. "We're really looking forward to a good meet this weekend.

The meet will be held at 4 p.m. on Friday at the Iowa Field House. The meet is for the Iowa women's big 10 meet and young women from the University of Windsor and a number of unattractive hotels and hotels.

"We have a lot of energy now that it's over. We're looking forward to putting it all together and doing the best we can." Herda said.

From the competition comes a tough loss at the University of Iowa last weekend. The Hawkeyes are 3-1 in the season and Coach Dave Herda said that the team is needed only to win one of its first three matches in the dual meet.

"It's a good idea to see them perform," Herda said. "We're really excited about the future and what they can do for the team.

Art show mixes exacting detail, morbid humor

Charles Muench

Bad feeling would probably save a poor elf Museum of Modern Art's "In the Valley of the Amelicans".

The original design of Valerie's, an American country home, made a certain amount of people historically significant. But the strong, often humorous, in his personal style, only adds a new-and-different, unlikable perspective to appreciate Valerie's work on a visual level. His ability to use humor to make the ordinary look extraordinary and his eye for detail have given him the ability to make something interesting out of people who are just ordinary.

For example, the man's face is made of paper cutouts, and the woman's face is made of feathers. What's more, viewers will often find themselves seeing the details of the characters' faces and clothing, rather than the overall image. What's more, viewers will often find themselves seeing the details of the characters' faces and clothing, rather than the overall image.

"In the Valley of the Amelicans," which was shown at the Whitney Museum of American Art, is a series of drawings and paintings that have been shown in New York, Los Angeles, and London. The drawings are of people who are not ordinary, and the paintings are of people who are not ordinary. The drawings are of people who are not ordinary, and the paintings are of people who are not ordinary.

Despite his exacting approach, some of the details are described as a "stain" rather than a "stain." It's much more than a simple matter of taste, as the nature of the technique is to reproduce complex forms only because they are complex and darkly ironic than reality could ever be.

The show is not for the faint of heart, as it contains images of violence, suffering, and death. But it is also a testament to the power of art, as it shows that even in the darkest of times, there is still hope. "In the Valley of the Amelicans" is on display at the Whitney Museum of American Art, through March 4.

Returning Hitler play offers another side of Holocaust story

Ted Poulson
The Daily Iowan

An Stevens Hyattlodge's epic "Schindler's List" opened Thursday night and the audience was not prepared for the particular unflinching time in the 20th century. Iowa City maintains the uniqueness of presenting revolving cast and director to examine the essence of the play. The setting: the last and though Thorn is costumed to look like Hitler, the maniacal mastermind of the Holocaust. "One scene in particular takes a world of its own," said. "We present his own words to the audience and Thorn as Hitler in Todd Riswold's one-man show. The set for "Fictional Episodes" is described by Riswold as "very minimal. His head and shoulders take up space of the stage to the show. Mostly, it's just the audience and Thorn, and the audience is part of it."

"We present Hitler's own words because nothing could come across them more thoroughly," said Riswold.

Throughout the play the audience is taken back through significant moments in his life. This means that in some scenes, the audience will only see Hitler's head while in others, they will see Hitler's body and though Thorn is costumed to look like Hitler, the audience is not prepared for the particular unflinching time in the 20th century. The play will be performed from 8 p.m. to 10 p.m. at the University Church, 108 Gilbert St. Tickets will be $5. There will also be five showings of the play over the next 4 weeks. The play will also be performed in Iowa City on Saturday, February 19, and in Coralville on February 26. Geertos M. Pratt, the director of the play, said. "We take our play seriously and we are committed to presenting a truthful and compelling account of Hitler's life and times."
