Inside

Iowa feeling temperamental spring

Chris Peterson
The Daily Iowan

Although Sunday's weather wasn't as warm as Friday's, people did get outside and enjoy the sunshine. Editorial Dan McManus attempts to put this idea to rest.

When I lived on a farm, I didn't notice it being 70 degrees weather and thinking I needed a raincoat, because it probably rained once or twice a month. People are not used to the 70-degree weather.

I'll admit it's nice when it's 60 degrees and you can wear a shirt, but I don't see much point in putting on your shorts and sunglasses because you can't actually do anything in the weather...

NATIONAL

ADVISORY DISRUPTIONS

Reported by Clinton

WASHINGTON, D.C. - An October 1993 story published in the Washington Post last Sunday which was written by the Post's David Ignatius, says the CIA believes that North Korea plans to begin testing a nuclear device in 1994. The story was written by the same author who was quoted in the Post's June 26 article about the possibility of a North Korean nuclear test.

The CIA has been tracking North Korea's nuclear program for several years and has been closely monitoring its progress. The country is believed to have a small nuclear arsenal and has been developing a nuclear weapons capability for several years.

The story has been widely criticized by many experts who believe there is no evidence to support the claim that North Korea will test a nuclear device in 1994. The CIA has not publicly confirmed or denied the story.

Readers are encouraged to read the full story and make their own judgment about the accuracy of the information presented. The story is available online at the Washington Post's website at http://www.washingtonpost.com.

Weather

WEATHER WEARING ON MANY

Iowa weather is unpredictable and can change rapidly. The temperature can fluctuate significantly within a short period of time, and there can be a wide range of weather conditions from one day to the next.

The National Weather Service in Des Moines, Iowa, issued a winter weather advisory for Monday, warning of slippery conditions and reduced visibility due to freezing drizzle.

The advisory is in effect from 5 a.m. to 7 p.m. and is intended to alert drivers to the potential hazards of driving in these conditions.

PLANNING AHEAD

There are plenty of options for healthy eating on campus. From salads to smoothies, there is something for everyone.

Perry: U.S. willing to risk war to stop North Korea

Associated Press

WASHINGTON - The United States is willing to risk provoking war in North Korea to stop the regime from developing nuclear weapons, according to President Clinton.

"We're not going to provoke a war with North Korea," Clinton told reporters in his weekly radio address on Saturday. "But if the North Koreans continue to develop nuclear weapons, we're willing to risk putting ourselves in a position where we have no alternative but to act.

"I think the situation is very serious, and we will not allow North Korea to go ahead with its nuclear program without taking action," Clinton said.

The U.S. has been pressuring North Korea to abandon its nuclear program and return to six-party talks, but the regime has so far refused.

When Nabie Swaray came to the United States in 1981 to attend college, she arrived with a nickname, a reputation and an identity. She quickly realized that an identity was crucial. While she was attending the University of Iowa, she was crowned the nation's fastest bagger in a grocery-sacking contest, but it was her nickname that she treasured the most.

Swaray was known on campus and in the community as "the little man in the hat." She was known for her small size and her warm smile. She was also known for her intelligence and her passion for social justice.

Swaray was a native of Africa, specifically, Sierra Leone. She grew up in a small village where she learned the values of hard work and perseverance. She was the first person in her family to attend college, and she was determined to make the most of her opportunity.

Swaray was a先锋, courageous and sensitive. She was a leader in the community, and she was respected for her knowledge and her integrity. She was a role model for many students, and she inspired them to pursue their dreams.

Swaray was a normal student, but she had a unique perspective. She was a product of her environment, and she was proud of her heritage. She was a little man in the hat, but she was also a giant in the spirit.

SHER BROWN - An abortion bill is simmering in the Iowa Senate, threatening to rock the normally-staid body in the final weeks of the 1994 session. The Senate was poised Thursday to debate the bill that has divided the chamber. The measure, which would require a 72-hour waiting period before an abortion could be performed, will be put to a vote early Friday.

The bill, if passed, would be the first in the nation requiring a mandatory waiting period to put on hold an abortion once a pregnancy has been confirmed by an ultrasound. The Senate killed a similar bill on March 22, but supporters of the measure have sprung it up again to try to win approval by the full Senate and are clustered around a vote.

The majority of the people in the state of Iowa want it, and it would be wise of the majority of the people in the Midwest. Just like any other human being, women have a right to choose. They need assistance. Last fall, "The Way of America," the Community Flood Relief Coordination Committee, sponsored workshops throughout the Midwest to help victims of the floods. A second series of workshops is being planned in the state. Workshop facilitators are being trained in the state. Workshop facilitators are being trained.

Iowa City this week celebrated the 50th anniversary of the Community Development Block Grant, a supplemental annual funding program that has generated more than $13.5 billion to help area residents and agencies.

The program has led to the construction of more than 100,000 housing units throughout the city, as well as the building of the Clarion Pointe Mall, improvement of the Eldon Creek Dam and increased services for low-income families.

The Mary C. Doherty Homes, 301 E. Clark St., a nonprofit retirement home for seniors, also benefited from a grant that paid for the complete renovation.

Dorothy Shalla, chairwoman of the home's board of trustees, said due to the home's limited finances she and an awards ceremony will held one from 4-6 p.m., and another will be held at United Action for Youth on Tuesday, April 5, also from 4-6 p.m.

Pre-election unrest persists in S. Africa

PETERSBURG, South Africa: The police here have stepped up security after soldiers from the South African Defense Force opened fire on political demonstrators, killing a man and wounding 37 others as police entered a family's hut near Port Shepstone on Saturday, bringing the death toll in Natal to 37 since de Klerk declared the state of emergency to end the escalating political violence.

Inkatha is boycotting the election.

The nine deaths in Port Shepstone, near Durban, came on the eve of Monday's general election, adding to the nine people killed in Natal since de Klerk declared the state of emergency. It is the third death in Natal in two days. No other details were provided.

“I’m really eager to stick a note on the hip pocket and go out there alone and try being a reporter again,” Kuralt said. "It’s going to be... about America."

The broadcast veteran called it a day at the close of this week’s edition of the 60-minute news and feature program, which he anchored for 20 years, his name inscribed in history as the program’s signature host.

“After the final fadeout, Kuralt met with cheers from his office. ‘But when I said goodbye and the show was off the air, he turned to me and said, “Bye’ and the show was off the air."

He had gathered, some with their families, for the recitation of a poem by Clarence Moore, the program’s lone black host. Kuralt had been the first to sign off the show, and the program ended with a final fadeout as well.

“The program has been a morning staple for many years, including the era of a poem by Clarence Moore that goes, “I’m really eager to stick a note on the hip pocket and go out there alone and try being a reporter again,” Kuralt said. “It’s going to be... about America.”

SOCIAL ISSUES

Building consensus

The National Abortion Rights Action League recently added “induced” and “selective” to its official title. President Clinton is still pushing abortion as a political issue. The issue of abortion is one that truckers have outlined as a top priority. However, Congress has called the question, leaving it to the courts to decide what to do.

President Clinton states that it is essential for the courts to determine the issue. However, Congress has not been able to provide any solutions.

The debate is not really over whether or not a woman has the right to choose. The issue is more about the circumstances under which a woman can choose to have an abortion.

Van Maanen recognizes the “strong feelings on both sides of the issue.” He sees NARAL’s additional mission as something pro-life groups can agree on. The directors of NARAL have been practicing all along.

The preventer’s argument is that they are wasting time debating. Couldn’t they go on to something of “real” concern? The preventer’s argument is that if大家 waste time debating, couldn’t they go on to something productive?

The preventer’s argument is that if individuals waste time debating, couldn’t they go on to something productive?

Tar Heels triumph on last-second shot

It's been a long time since the Tar Heels have defeated the Demon Deacons. In fact, it's been almost a decade. But on Saturday, North Carolina finally got their revenge.

North Carolina played their best game of the season against Duke, who had been hyped as one of the top teams in the country. The Tar Heels dominated the game from start to finish, never trailing at any point.

The game was tied with seconds left when Duke guard Jon Scheyer made a long three-pointer to tie the game. But UNC's Harrison Barnes calmly made two free throws to give the Tar Heels a 70-68 lead. Duke missed a three-pointer at the buzzer to lose.

This victory was huge for the Tar Heels, who had struggled for much of the season. They were able to get back on track and prove that they are a top team in the ACC.

Holly cow! Harry Caray opens 50th season

Caray begins his 50th season of broadcasting today when the Cubs belt the Mets. He has been with the Cubs for 11 years.

For a man expired at age 83, he had to be the star of the show, and that's exactly the way "Mr. Baseball" will broadcast tonight's game against the Dodgers.

Chinese composer brings new piece, memories of Tibetan exile to Hanche

William Falk

The Takacs Quartet performs tonight in Hancher Auditorium, with a program including pieces by Beethoven, Auxer and Chinese composer Wright Paulsen. By the time the quartet circled the stage at Gabe's, a punk rock club in downtown Iowa City, it was almost midnight. Paulsen was well into the last piece of his set, a new one he had written for the quartet just a week before, and the audience was engaged. It was a perfect evening for a punk rock show, with the air outside heavy with the scent of marijuana and the smell of sweat and sweatshirts.

Paulsen, who will perform with the quartet tonight, has a unique perspective on the world. He grew up in China, where he was born, and later moved to Iowa to study composition. His music is a blend of Eastern and Western influences, and he often incorporates elements of traditional Chinese music into his compositions.

In his music, Paulsen explores themes of identity, relationships, and the human condition. His works are often characterized by complex rhythms and intricate melodies, with a focus on harmonic exploration. His music is both accessible and challenging, appealing to a wide range of listeners.

The Takacs Quartet will perform Paulsen's new work tonight, titled "Waterdance," which is inspired by the Chinese tradition of ice skating and the spirit of resilience. The piece is a celebration of the human spirit, and a testament to the power of music to bring people together.

So come out to Hancher Auditorium tonight, and enjoy a night of music that is both innovative and timeless. The Takacs Quartet and Wright Paulsen will not disappoint.
