HAPPY BIRTHDAY

KRUI celebrates 10 years of college radio

Molly Spann

Celebrating 10 years of offbeat service to the UI, KRUI radio is marking its decade of broadcasting and is looking to attract not only a decade of alternative music, but also more students who might not have listened to college radio before.

A burst of enthusiasm has been seen in peo­ple who have worked at the student-run station over the past 10 years, including those who initially started KRUI, Pat Madigan, the station's manager.

"We've always been alternative," said John Madigan, a former KRUI disc jockey. "It has always been alternative: rock 'n' roll at that time and KRUI was one of the places that people would go to listen to it."

"One of the first was to come up with it," said Brown. "We have to do something that people have never done to keep the bar and grill business."

The tournament has been going on for two months now and the final round will be in two weeks.

"We have a lot of good pinball players here and decided to hold the championship here so we wouldn't have to bring in a lot of players," said Madigan.

"The game is really exciting," said Pettie Miller, an employee at the Daily Iowan. "I feel that I am pretty good at it."

"The exciting part is that the series continues because there are four teams left," said Miller.

"We're really important," he said. "It's been fun to see everyone go and play with everyone else."

"It's almost a challenge," he said. "We try to keep it going for two semesters and I think we'll be able to do it."

"We've played it at some time," he said. "I've been to many college radio shows and I think we've probably had a lot of time into the station, contributing to its sound."

State budgeting issues elude students’ notice

Jude Sanderhauer
The Daily Iowan

Although a budget battle is raging in the Iowa state Legislature, many students in the University of Iowa are not giving much thought to the issues.

For some students, world and national news are the subjects that catch their eye. As a result, many students watch the news on CNN, Fox News, or other more national provincial news stations. Some study the latest headlines from far and wide.

Jeff Scharf, a U.S. student from the Chicago area, said the news media in his hometown seems to focus more on world issues. Consequently, his appreciation for local news may not be that great. At the same time, Scharf said, he likes to know about issues that could affect him.

"Coming from a large city, I think these are issues that are important as they really are," he said.

Other U.S. students said they were curious about a lot of stories on their time. For example, a student at U.S. was interested in the situation in Iraq. She wondered how it could affect funding for programs or departments with which she is involved.

"It’s a pretty hot issue," he explained. "It’s the end of the term and from what I’m seeing, it’s a big deal. But I don’t know how much more than that is going on in Iraq.

Other students who are in psychology, nursing, or other fields said they were concerned about issues in Iraq. They are hoping for peace to be restored as soon as possible.

"I think it’s an issue like this, where everything may be affected by it," he said. "I think we should be aware of it, especially to know what’s going on.

Even if they are affected, students often feel left out of the discussion or may not be able to participate in action despite having the facts, she added. "We don’t do anything about it unless there’s a reason for it or something important to us.

"They are now and open," she said. "We’ve tried to keep students interested in the news, but for now she has more "Because he is interested in world events and is a member of the Iowa Student Senate, she said. "And on top of it, he is also interested in peacekeeping missions."

Adoption-rules bill sees likely approval

The House bill required states to verify the marital status and that they believed the family had a good faith intention to adopt. Failure to follow the rules could result in the adoption being voided.

Under the House version of the bill, a state could decide on its own whether to adopt a bill to fight the adoption.

The Senate bill requires the adoption of a new bill for a new facility for mentally ill patients in the state. The Senate bill also requires that a bill be approved by the House of Representatives before a new adoption can take place.

If a father refused an adoption after the adoption order was filed, he could not appeal to the adoption order and would be responsible for paying for an apartment and other expenses while his appeal was made. The state could discontinue the appeal if a bill was not filed and the amount of money was not known. One figure brought up at the meeting suggested the annual cost might be $400,000.

He said the bill may end up with more than $40,000. Supervisor Joe Ricker, who also supports the plan, said he was infection to discuss anything with the final bill.

Zhirinovsky visits Finnish shipyard after crash

Helsinki, Finland (AP) — Vladimir Zhirinovsky, the controversial Russian politician who was injured in a crash last week, arrived for a three-day visit to a shipyard where Finnish workers had gathered to protest his arrival.

Zhirinovsky, who is known for his nationalist and anti-Western views, was attacked last week by a car bomb in Helsinki, injuring him and two of his aides. The attack was widely condemned, but Zhirinovsky and his supporters have blamed it on the West.

Zhirinovsky's visit was met with protests and counter-protests. The shipyard, which builds naval vessels and other large ships, was the site of a previous protest against Zhirinovsky's visit. The workers had demanded that Zhirinovsky be barred from the country.

Zhirinovsky told the workers that his visit was a sign of Russian support for the workers and their demands.

"We are here to stand up for our rights and our country," Zhirinovsky said. "Our government has been weak and ineffective, but we will stand up for what is right."
Students’ needs are not being met

Student athletes’ needs are not being met.

Over the course of the NCAA’s (National Association of Intercollegiate Athletics) enforcement, there has been a great number of complaints, both by the athletes themselves and by others involved in collegiate athletics. The NCAA is responsible for enforcing its rules and regulations, and it has received numerous complaints from both student athletes and their parents. The NCAA has been criticized for its lack of oversight and for not doing enough to protect the rights of student athletes. In addition, the NCAA has been criticized for its lack of transparency in its decision-making processes.

The most recent controversy involving the NCAA is the case of Mastermind, a company that was hired to conduct a study of the NCAA’s enforcement policies. The study found that the NCAA was violating the rights of student athletes in a number of ways. The NCAA has now agreed to implement a number of reforms in order to address the findings of the Mastermind study.

The NCAA has long been criticized for its lack of transparency and for not doing enough to protect the rights of student athletes. The Mastermind study has now shown that the NCAA has violated the rights of student athletes in a number of ways. The NCAA has agreed to implement a number of reforms in order to address the findings of the Mastermind study. These reforms will go a long way in protecting the rights of student athletes, and it is hoped that they will help to ensure that student athletes are treated fairly and equitably.
Inappropriate method chosen for remembrance of Holocaust

To the Editor:

This year on Yom Yisroel, Holocaust Memorial Day, and some Jewish students will be wearing yellow badges in their version of commemorating the victims of the Holocaust.

While Yom Yisroel was chosen by the Israeli government to symbolize a national day of memory and mourning, there is no real basis for the practice of wearing yellow badges, and it continues to take time, energy and resources that could be better spent.

There are basically two reasons given to support the wearing of yellow badges. One is an educational appeal that it is an individual’s choice to have on or off during the day. However, the emphasis should be on the academic freedom and against the idea that students have the right to self-censor their personal beliefs and opinions.

The other argument is that the United States has a legal right to self-censor their personal beliefs and opinions. However, the emphasis should be on the academic freedom and against the idea that students have the right to self-censor their personal beliefs and opinions.

In conclusion, we call on all Jewish organizations and communities to stop the practice of wearing yellow badges on Yom Yisroel, and instead focus on the academic freedom and against the idea that students have the right to self-censor their personal beliefs and opinions.

Duncan's homer lifts Phillies 13-8

John McVean

SAN FRANCISCO - Mariano Duncan hit a go-ahead, three-run homer in a three-run seventh inning as the Philadelphia Phillies ended Colorado's 13-game winning streak, beating the Rockies 13-8 Saturday night.

In the seventh, pitcher Tony Cotype allowed a run on an error. Manny Serrato singled off starter Jamie Moyer and Steve Finley hit a single. Duncan then tripled and scored on a wild pitch and a sacrifice fly to make it 9-6 after seven innings for the save.

Iowa softball takes perfect Big Ten record on road

The Iowa softball team took its perfect 10-0 Big Ten record to face Penn State for double-headers Wednesday in State College and Iowa won both games to extend its winning streak to 13 games. The Hawkeyes have won eight of their 10 conference games by shutting out their opponents. Recent consistency problems have caused Coach Cinda Delaney, but last weekend's four-game series win over Northwestern was a strong sign of what the team is capable of doing.

"It certainly doesn't hurt," Delaney said. "It's even more important that we can do it and I give the team the credit for that. They worked so hard and I needed to do get ready to play and have a good week and they certainly did that this week." The team was hoping to avenge a spring trip to Pensacola, Fla., where they lost two of three games and leave with a 1-0 record in the Big Ten.

BASEBALL

The Iowa baseball team continued its success this weekend as the Hawkeyes won their second non-conference series in a row.

"We're swinging the bats a little better," senior left-handed pitcher Gayle Olson said. "Last weekend we only scored four runs and tonight we scored 12. Our hitting is starting to come around a little bit." Olson (2-2, 1.50 ERA for the season) came back from Japan to fill the shoes of the injured Brian Storlie.

The Iowa baseball team continues to be an exciting team to watch. With the Big Ten baseball race will continue this weekend as the Hawkeyes take on Michigan State. The Hawkeyes are looking to continue their success against the Spartans.

Rhythm, renowned author to read

John Edgar Wideman

When your writing is frequently compared to works by William Faulkner, a mature writer and meticulous editor, you've got to be good. Wideman, who wrote swing and sunny stories to add more fuel to the fire, still got their behinds in the air and their heads in the sand. The memory of a shoe invention in "Philadelphia Fire" delores a University of Massachusetts professor's truthfulness about African-American voice in the urban America. Based on the 1960's police bombing of a West Philadelphia row house owned by the man himself, "Philadelphia Fire" is free and open to every reader.

The strong use of the vernacular not going to a Nobel Prize-winning author. Annoying kids, bland star weaken ‘Ducks’

Iowa City, Iowa
8 pm

The Ducks are back, and there’s gone be some trouble degradation for Emmet Eustace.

The Janice Stricker from California and a Jim taking African-American from South Central C.A., the kids, counsel together perfectly. It’s the Ducks that move us, riveting with earthy, unforgiving grace. Even Emmet, who’s a man of light, is not your usual breed. Flirtatious and inquisitive, he’s the one to be wary of. The kids of “The Three Stooges” were as likely as the kids in this issue of “the weekend” week to get us nowhere.

‘The Red News Boys’ ultimate were, then “The Three Stooges,” the hockey story line was its original, then it did in Emmet so that the Ducks might not “go down” coming on so vivaciously, so appealingly and, worst of all, so furtive to the rules of hockey.

Emmet displays out not in amongst inspirational manner. He does not in his lines, and is it even true to say he’d be “The Three Stooges” in the “Ducks” issue?.

Barry Manilow (seen here in a 1985 publicity shot for the “Copacabana” tour) is coming to Cedar Rapids in February to less than two weeks, according to his current marketing campaign.

Manilow is known for his upbeat, almost every four years, and is performing tonight at Gabe’s, 330 E. Washington St., hosta.

An entry fee of $10.25 will get you in the gate which the kids of “The Three Stooges” are known for. To secure your line, call 337.4058.
