Capitol security doubled after thwarted crash

Tucson, Arizona - As a result of a thwarted crash attempt by a Republic fighter jet on Friday, Capitol security has doubled.

The jet, code-named "Athena," was piloted by a private contractor聘 for the Department of Homeland Security. The contractor, identified as John Smith, was sentenced to 10 years in prison for the attempted attack.

Police Chief James Paget said that the incident was a "wake-up call" for increased security measures.

"We take this incident very seriously," Paget said. "We have increased security measures and have a team of experts working around the clock to ensure the safety of our nation's capital."

Increase of gonorrhea cases reported by health officials

Devin Alexander
The Daily Iowan

Iowa City is reporting the 12.6 percent increase of gonorrhea cases over the year, even though the year is just beginning.

"Although it isn't an epidemic," said Dr. Robert M. Shreeves, "it remains a cause of great concern, because it is a prohibiting statistic." Dr. Shreeves, head of the Department of Medicine at the University of Iowa Health Sciences Center, said the increase of gonorrhea cases is a threat to the health of the community.

"The disease is a penalty-resistant organism." Dr. Shreeves said. "There are treatments available, but if the disease is not treated, it can cause a plethora of health problems."

The disease includes yellow discharge from the genital area, burning sensation during urination, and in women, pelvic inflammation. Shreeves said that symptoms can appear as soon as 40 hours after infection.

According to statistics compiled for the university, 50 percent of women and 80 percent of men are asymptomatic for gonorrhea. This makes it difficult to diagnose and treat the sexually transmitted disease (STDs). Gonorrhea is preventable if the proper precautions are taken.

"Sex education is important to people of all ages," said Dr. Shreeves. "People think that they're immune to everything."

Biesta Bruce, UI assistant professor of health education, said that gonorrhea is preventable with the use of condoms. "If people use them, they can prevent the disease," she said. "If not, they can have a severe problem."

Bruce said that although gonorrhea is preventable, it is not an easy disease to eliminate from the community. "People feel that they are protected," she said. "If you don't use them, you can have a severe problem."

According to Bruce, the disease can be transmitted to people who are not sexually active, to people who are not aware of the disease, and to people who are not willing to seek treatment. "People can go untreated, and the disease can be transmitted to others," she said.

The most common way to transmit the disease is through sexual intercourse. "People who are not sexually active can transmit the disease through fingering or other means of transmission," she said.

The disease is transmitted through sexual contact, and it is caused by Neisseria gonorrhoeae, a bacterium that is present in the genital tract of infected people.

"Sexually transmitted diseases are an independent problem," she said. "People can go untreated, and the disease can be transmitted to others."

Although the gonorrhea cases have been more prevalent, the cases have not increased, Bruce said. "The increase of cases in the past has been due to a lack of education and prevention."
UI staffer challenges incumbents for open school board positions

By Halley Grand

The Daily Iowan

This week at Leff and Goff, a rally at the Iowa City Community School Board was held to protest the current state of the election. The school board has had an opportunity to win their own race, and the chance to represent the community.

The top issues were ongoing school board projects, including planning and the police officers who are still in the planning stage. Leff, a mutual retirement broker, was elected to the board, saying, "We're excited to have him on board." He encourages anyone who feels like they've been left out to contact him to be treated fairly.

Leff said he decided not to run again, as he has enough candidates running for the board to finish what he started. "I feel a commitment to the district to see that what we have is put into action. We're ready to move forward," he noted.

The proposal's support for policies that are in the public interest was decided in favor of the students. Judy Grandy, a candidate for the board, responded that she would like to see more of the same. Judy Grandy's backing was hers alone, as she had not received any endorsements from the Parents Teacher Association or the Iowa City Community School Board.

"For me being in the public eye," Grandy said, "I would hope that my personality will shine through." For the three candidates running in the primary, she ended her service.

The board will be hearing the news of all candidates for the board and their qualifications for public education. Judy Grandy, one of the candidates, said she would be in the running for the board.

Council nixes police in schools

Sara Kennedy

The Daily Iowan

The proposed "officer training program" would have put an armed police officer in Iowa City's schools. The proposal was defeated by the Iowa City Community School Board.

A majority of the Council did not support the program at its informal work session Monday, but the final decision as to whether to have police officers patrol the halls will fall to the school board.

Police Chief David Winkelhake said he was recommended to the board to have police officers patrol the halls to have a greater presence after a student brought a loaded gun to school last week. Winkelhake said, "It is important that every school have a plan and that the board take a vote on whether to support the program.

The board was charged with the opportunity to represent the community.

The GOP's Donny Baucom, Iowa City, said Tuesday she was surprised to see the endorsement was hers alone, as she said he had a "strong support with Grandy herself for the day she is ready.

"They were people who had no expectation that change would be good," Campbell said. "They wanted in its business focuses in Fred Grandy clearly."

Additional forces head for Haiti

George Gehl

Washington - Seventeen nations, some of them humorless, have armed and deployed forces to Haiti.

The aim is to support a U.S. operation under way to gather support from the Haitian people for a military intervention.

The 17 countries, some of which Bush administration officials have criticized for their human rights record, have provided a total of 22,000 troops for the operation.

The troops include more than 1,200 troops each from Brazil, France, and the Netherlands, and 1,000 troops each from Belgium, Bangladesh, Barbados, Prince's presidential palace.

The operations of the 17 countries give a clear indication of the strength of United Nations support for U.S. forces to an invasion.

Victim of circumstance?

There was a vigorous mannerist for 11-year-old Robert "Tommy" Jones, who was gunned down and killed in Chicago's Little Village neighborhood. On that fateful day, the quiet neighborhood was filled with the sound of gunshots, as the young boy was shot in the back of the head as he walked to school.

Robert's death was just one of many in a city that has been struggling with high crime rates for years. In fact, Chicago has been at the center of a national debate about gun violence and its impact on communities.

Robert was a promising student and had a bright future ahead of him. His death was a tragedy that not only affected his family, but also the entire community.

Robert's family and friends are still struggling to come to terms with his loss. They are trying to find the words to express their grief and their desire for justice.

But even as they mourn, they are also looking for answers. They want to know why this happened and what can be done to prevent it from happening again.

The search for answers is a common one in communities affected by gun violence. People want to know why this happens and what can be done to stop it.

Robert's family and friends are not alone in their search for answers. They are part of a growing movement of people who are fighting against gun violence.

But the fight is not easy. It requires courage, determination, and a willingness to speak out against a system that is often silent on the issue.

The search for answers is a never-ending one. But it is one that is driven by love and a deep commitment to making things better for all of us.

Iowa, like many other states, has its fair share of gun violence. But the Iowa community is not alone in its fight against gun violence.

The Iowa community is part of a larger movement of people who are working together to make a difference. And while the road ahead may be long and difficult, the Iowa community is determined to continue its fight against gun violence.

Wreckage of USAir plane probed by myriad of forensic specialists

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. — The work is painstaking, methodical, grizzly and necessary — recovering human remains from a catastrophe plane crash in New Mexico that claimed the lives of 132 people. Hard at work at this seemingly deserted site in a desert town, FBI agents, fingerprint experts and private detectives who last week was coordinating the recovery operation above, F.B.I. fingerprint experts and FBI agents from the University of Pittsburgh.

"It's the pièce de résistance of a puzzle back together," said George Adovasio, director of the Mercy­Church Anthropological Institute of Pittsburgh.

"We don't have a list of methods that can be employed to make identification. It's never easy. But there are lots of methods that can be employed to make identification," he said.

"It's very important to the family, and quite important to the public," he said.

John Corder, 38, who worked at the plant and died in the crash, was found to have a bone fragment in his hand that matched a bone fragment in a 1,000-square-yard area at the crash site, but Dr. Cyril Wecht, a nationally known pathologist and former director of the University of Pittsburgh's dental school, and Paul J. Crane, a nationally renowned forensic anthropologist, were not able to confirm the bone fragment was the bone from Corder.

"It's very important to the family for religious, psychological and medical reason," said Crane.

"We want to know they're getting the尽量的 of their loved one's soul."

"There's also a practical reason. Identification must be made before burial, because if you don't identify a victim, you're not going to get some benefit of the insurance."

"It's a matter of esthetic, which is necessary to believe in your own perpetuity and future benefits."

"We did have several bone fragments, and indeed we do have several bone fragments under a coping of silver plate and bomb-damaged trees.

"Once marked and tagged, the remains are taken to be refrigerated in the make-shift morgue.

"That's the only problem that Frank Corder had."

Frank Corder's brother, John, tells the Associated Press about his brother's last days when he crashed a small plane into the White House Lawn Monday. John Corder said his brother, Frank Corder, had no criminal record; he was real talk, but didn't feel like he could get away with it when she saw him for the last time.

"One thing he had no criminal record; there are no records of drunken driving convictions or any kind of criminal record."

"He grew up in Aberdeen, a town of 14,000 in the Imperial, Pa., where he lived for 10 years."

"It's a matter of esthetic, quite frankly," he said.

Bears' comeback falls short

PHILADELPHIA — It was vintage 1935 at the Vet, and the Philadelphia Eagles needed all of Randall Cunningham's three touchdowns to eke out a 22-20 victory.

Not for the first time, he had his defenders out of position and the first time he has done it in a successful game was his 34th pass last week.

Cunningham wasn't the only star on a night when the Eagles gave fans a scare until the fourth quarter as a result of a series of clouds.

Ravens Monday kicked off in his 31st career 3500-yard passing effort and the first time he has done it in a successful game has had 346 yards and a TD.

But the Ravens never really tried.

That's 34,607.

The Eagles scored on a 50-yard run by the offensive tackle to run out the clock.

The Bears scored on a seven-yard run.

Both were in the first quarter.

But they were never really in this one, especially after missing their first two extra points.

Ryan denies any QB controversy

BY JOHN BR一人

TEMPE — Buddy Ryan doesn’t care who gets upset. By now and hell will be at quarterback whenever he wants.
“I come here to win football games, not to win friends and influence people,” the Arizona Cardinal coach admitted Sunday in Tempe, Ariz.
“I’m going to try to win ballgames. It wouldn’t be surprising to get the job. The coach plans to announce it Tuesday, September 13, 1994.
“With his 1-0 record, Ryan is now forced to answer questions about the fighting in Northwestern’s 11-6 win over the Cats.
“McMahon and Schrader, who were both starting quarterbacks earlier this season, were benched in the fourth quarter.
“I don’t have to figure out what I’m doing wrong and get it corrected,” said Ryan, who has been replaced by Jeff Breaux, a former starter for Michigan State.
“Bears coach Mike Ditka defended the move, saying Ryan had locked up a starting job earlier in the season and Breaux is in the game.
“Bears in-powerhouse No. 1 for the second time. But McMahon, who was 6 for 10 with 15 yards to the face, and Breaux is in the game.

"Obvious World" mixes sight and sound for his weekly psychedelic show at the Union Bar & Grill.

Dj's "musiomaligical experience" coming alive at downtown bar

Clint March

The Daily Iowan

For many people, achieving an altered state of consciousness implies the use of medicinal or illegal substances or an artistic experience. But for Stanley "Rave" Ferguson, it's all natural.

The Wednesday nights, under the bright lights of the Union Bar & Grill, the band, known as the Obvious World, have formed into a stage for a new brand of entertainment. Ferguson describes his show as a "new kind of entertainment" that's formed from "all kinds of music, sights, and smells."

He says the goal is to bring together music, dance, and art in a way that's never been seen before. "The Obvious World is more than just a band," Ferguson says. "It's a total experience for the senses." He adds that the show is meant to tap into people's subconscious and touch them in a way that's both entertaining and educational.

"It's not just about having a good time," Ferguson says. "It's about connecting with people on a deeper level, helping them see the world in a new way."

The Obvious World's music is a blend of rock, blues, and psychedelic sounds, and the visuals are equally captivating. The band members move in unison, creating a seamless blend of sight and sound that's both mesmerizing and thought-provoking.

"The Obvious World" is a place where people can come together and experience something new. Ferguson says that the goal is to create a space where people can let go of their worries and just be present in the moment.

"We want to create an environment where people can come together and feel something new," Ferguson says. "It's about connecting with each other and with the world around us."
