Residents relocated after fire flares Friday

An estimated $50,000 in fire damage was caused by a short circuit in the attic's electrical wiring at the apartment complex at 412 N. Linn St. Friday night.

The fire began around 10:30 p.m., and the fire report said it quickly spread to the first floor. It took firefighters two and a half hours to extinguish the fire and another three hours to put out all the "hot spots."

Although there were no injuries, five residents were relocated to the Red Cross, 120 N. Dubuque St.

Woman hospitalized after weekend car crash

A 29-year-old Iowa City woman had to be removed from her car Saturday morning after a two-car accident at the intersection of Highway 1 and Interstate 80.

Dawn Hartig was rescued by fire officials and transported to UI Hospitals and Clinics with serious facial injuries after her car crossed the center line and collided with another vehicle, driven by Iowa City resident Barbara Kennedy, 50.

Kennedy and her passenger, Nadine Kochinski, 73, of Paso Robles, Calif., suffered torso injuries and were taken by ambulance to Mercy Hospital, where they were treated and released.

Hartig remains hospitalized at UIHC, and charges against her are pending following completion of the accident investigation.

TCI to pick up Fox shows

Although Fox's Cedar Rapids affiliate KOCR Channel 28 has been shut down, Iowa City residents with cable will still be able to watch "Beverly Hills 90210" and their other Fox favorites.

However, Iowa City residents without a strong TV antenna or cable will no longer receive the Fox network.

TCI Cable in Iowa City will be operating from the same direct feed as Cox Cable in Cedar Rapids. Programming is expected to follow Fox's regular network schedule, said Bill Blough, TCI's general manager.

Channel 28 was shut down Oct. 6 due to delinquent bill payments.

More than $45,000 in electrical bills was owed to I.E.S. Utilities in Cedar Rapids and nearly $100,000 in back rent to Don Tauke, KOCR's building property owner.

7 RAs booted for policy violation

Resident Assistants ordered to vacate their rooms by 5 p.m. today

Mick Klemesrud
The Daily Iowan

Seven UI Resident Assistants have been fired and given until 5 p.m. today to move out of their rooms for breaking the UI's policy banning alcohol in rooms where minors are present.

Residents of the 5600s and 5800s of Daum Residence Hall and the 1100s, 2000s and 2100s of Burge Residence Hall — all served by one RA — and of the 2200s, 3200s, 1400s and 3500s of Burge Residence Hall will be receiving new RAs as soon as possible, said Resident Services director George Droll. Droll said the dismissals are a personnel matter and therefore confidential. He also said the process to replace the RAs will begin immediately, starting with the pool of candidates from last year.

The fired RAs are Michele Beverly, Chad Hill, Anji Newall, Greg Jones, CeeCee Najera, Tara Tracy and Doug Marolla.

UI officials are tightlipped regarding the infraction, but according to Beverly, a UI junior and a former RA in 3200s of Burge Residence Hall, the group of RAs gathered to watch a movie Sept. 30. Although some people were drinking alcohol, not everyone participated, she said.

Marolla, the former RA of the 1400s of Burge Residence Hall, said whether the people drinking in the room were legally of age didn't matter.

"The policy dictates that since I'm 22 and if you're 18 and you come into my room and I'm drinking, it's no longer a legal room," he said.

The RAs who were interviewed acknowledged their mistake but felt the consequences were excessive.

EFFORTS PARED DOWN

Searchers fail to locate Inghram's body

Patricia Harris
The Daily Iowan

Searchers discovered just about everything in the Iowa River this weekend except Cameron Inghram's body, including rusted bicycles, bricks and a standup figure of Herky the Hawkeye.

Inghram, 22, an Iowa City resident, reportedly fell into the river last Monday night after he attempted to jump across the 6-foot-11-inch gap between the eastbound and westbound lanes of the Burlington Street bridge.

During the weeklong search, bricks, items of clothing (of which only a hat and a jacket were confirmed to be Inghram's), bicycles and other miscellaneous items were found in the river.

All items were removed from the river and thrown away, except for the figure of Herky. The figure survived the purge and was placed against a tree near the operation's command center.

The drag lines also proved to be effective fishing mechanisms over the six-day recovery mission, with police and firefighters bringing in fish as big as 12 inches long.

Discovering unusual objects in the river is a common occurrence in any riverbed scouring, Johnson County Sheriff Robert Carpenter said.

"There are all kinds of things in the river," Carpenter said. "You'd be surprised at what we pull up."

The search and rescue crews will continue their search today, but efforts were scaled down Saturday.

Johnson County Rescue continued the search without the help of volunteers from local fire departments, who were taken off the mission when the operation was scaled down. Search dogs were used for the last time Thursday, the hovercraft was pulled off after Friday and divers stopped after Saturday.

Two boats will continue to scan up and down the river south of the dam up to the town of Hills until the body is found. The length of time spent searching will remain the same: all day every day, beginning at 7 a.m. and ending at 6:30 p.m. Carpenter said the search will continue for as long as it takes.

"We'll go until we find him," Carpenter said Saturday.

ATTACK ON KUWAIT AWAITED

U.S. troops deployed to Persian Gulf front

Susanne Schafer
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The United States has assigned approximately 54,000 troops to duty in the Persian Gulf — and is poised to alert up to 15,000 more — as administration officials warned Iraqi leader Saddam Hussein Sunday that any attack against Kuwait would be soundly defeated.

President Clinton interrupted a Columbus Day holiday weekend at Camp David and met for an hour and a half at the White House with his national security team.

"It looks as though there is hostile intent," said U.N. Ambassador Madeleine Albright, pointing out that Iraq had amassed 60,000 to 70,000 troops near Kuwait — some within miles of the border — and that tanks were positioned to "indicate hostility, rather than just parking there."

"The main message ... to Saddam Hussein is, 'Do not make a mistake. Do not cross that border. Do not create circumstances that will force us to act,'" Albright added in an interview on CNN's "Late Edition."

At the Pentagon, a senior Defense Department official said that in addition to 18,000 Marines from Camp Pendleton, Calif., who will be sent to the Persian Gulf, an additional 12,000 members of the Army's 24th Infantry Division from Fort Stewart, Ga., will see duty in the Persian Gulf. While formal orders have yet to be issued for the

- A four-ship amphibious assault group carrying 2,000 Marines moving from the southern Persian Gulf north toward Kuwait.

USUAL LOCATION MAINTAINED

Abuse of cheerleaders subsides during game

Kathryn Phillips

Marshmallows flew, but the UI cheerleaders remained in front of the student section for the duration of the Homecoming game Saturday.

Flying raw chicken and beer bottles caused the cheerleaders to find a safer location to perform their routines at the Oct. 1 game against Michigan. The cheerleaders were going to sacrifice their student section cheering area to prevent possible injury from projectiles if student behavior did not improve.

Students who were aware of the relocation threat discouraged their peers from throwing objects at the cheerleaders on Saturday, said UI cheerleader Vu Nguyen.

"There were actually people standing up for us in the crowd," Nguyen said. "We didn't know what to expect going in, but we were able to do our regular routine. There was a lot less thrown." Projectiles were reduced to marshmallows, a beer can and a cigarette lighter, said Michele Anderson, UI cheerleading coach.

"It went a lot better. There were marshmallows thrown at the beginning, as normal, but there was no food and no chicken. Security was keeping an eye on the crowd. It was good to see them," Anderson said.

Security was increased at the game, frequently patrolling aisles and collecting empty bottles. Their presence apparently did not hamper student spirit.

"Everyone was kind of rowdy," UI sophomore Megan Knapp said. "People were drinking all around me. Overall, the crowd wasn't much different than at other games."

UI Department of Public Safety Lt. Duane Papke said he was pleased with the outcome.

"To my knowledge, no cans or bottles made it to the field," Papke said. "We appreciate the cooperation of the student section in using restraint on their part."

ID checker patrols patrons at local bar

Kirsten Scharnberg
The Daily Iowan

Being a bouncer is the easiest job in the bar, although maybe not the most pleasant when it comes time to clean up after sick customers, according to Neil Murrin.

"All I usually do is just sit on my butt and keep a bird's-eye view on the place," he said.

Cleaning up after customers who puke in the bar after overindulging is one of the least glamorous aspects of his job, said Murrin, 19, who checks IDs at The Vine Tavern, 330 E. Prentiss St.

"I have to clean up the puke because everyone else is busy," he said. "One time I saw a guy get barfed on, and it was the sickest thing I've ever seen. The guy who'd been puked on took off his shirt, and when I told him to put it back on I saw it was totally caked with chunks."

It's relatively easy to judge who is old enough to drink, Murrin said.

"I don't have much trouble telling who is legal," he said. "If they aren't old enough or have a really bad fake, they get all nervous and don't look me in the eye."

Each night he denies between 10 and 15 people entrance into the bar. Though some bars have a practice of confiscating fake IDs, Murrin said he doesn't.

"I realize the importance of a fake," he said. "I try not to be a jerk about it, but if they're not old enough it's pretty cut and dry. I usually tell them to try Fitzpatrick's."

Murrin said women are notorious for presenting obviously fake IDs.

"I hate to put all women into this category, but they come up with the worst IDs," he said. "I've been shown more shitty, stupid, ridiculous IDs from girls. They'll come up with ones that look nothing like them and that say they're 33."

After seeing so many bad fake IDs, Murrin said when he finds one where the picture looks a lot like the person attempting to get into

Joe Murphy/The Daily Iowan

Neil Murrin has spent the last six months of his life as a bouncer at The Vine Tavern, 330 E. Prentiss St. "People here are pretty mellow," he said. Murrin usually only has to escort "sick" people out of the bar.

the bar, he wants to commend them for the effort.

"It's like if someone has a really great fake ID, I just want to say, 'Good effort. Go on in,'" he said.

Excuses for getting into the bar are a dime a dozen, Murrin said. Some people say they are only going to eat or are looking for a friend, and a few girls attempt to flirt.

"It's not really blatant flirting," he said. "They usually will just flash you a cute little smile or something. It works once in a while."

His observatory seat in the bar has allowed him to reach some general conclusions about human nature.

"One thing I've noticed is that the younger crowd smokes more," he said. "I mean they'll chain smoke a pack in 20 minutes. The older people, who have gone to school awhile and are broke, tend to take it easy. They have to write out a bad check for a pack so they really sit back and enjoy the cigarette."

His duties seldom include breaking up barroom brawls because there is such a laid-back, mellow atmosphere at The Vine, Murrin said. He has only interfered in a few disputes in the six months he has worked there.

"It's usually just about stupid drunk stuff," he said. "They'll fight about things like 'You looked at my girlfriend funny,' or something like that. I usually try to be nice about it and just tell them to go sit somewhere else, but sometimes you have to tell them to hit the road."

Game weekends are especially busy, Murrin said. A steady stream of students and alumni flash Murrin their IDs before piling into The Vine.

"Game weekends it's standing room only," Murrin said. "But the crowd dies down really early because everyone gets so drunk during the day."

His job as a bouncer is to save the waitresses from having to take the time to card every customer and from being responsible for serving minors because theoretically none are allowed inside. It is a common occurrence to have underage clientele, however.

"Having minors in the bar is a part of the business," Murrin said. "You can go to any bar in Iowa City and find minors drinking."

He said dealing with drunks for a six-hour shift can get tiring.

"I don't mind people who are just out having fun," he said. "But those people who come up and start an hourlong conversation when they're so drunk they don't know what is going on is the worst. Some people are obnoxious as hell, and that really bugs me."

Murrin admitted he sometimes gets jealous of the customers who are having fun and getting drunk.

"I have fun when I'm working but, sure, it'd be more fun if I were stinking drunk," he said. "But I suppose I'd get in trouble if I did that."

Tim Allen refuses to make ratings war personal

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Tim Allen can hit the nail on the head, but he won't hammer Kelsey Grammer.

Allen

The "Home Improvement" star is playing down his ratings victory over his new prime-time rival in NBC's "Frasier."

"That's between NBC and ABC," Allen said. Both shows were among last year's highest-rated programs. The head-to-head Tuesday night schedule began last week.

"I called (Grammer) the day before all this happened, and I just said, 'No matter what you read in the press, I like your show. I think you're a very talented man, and I'm sorry this happened,'" Allen is quoted as saying in Sunday editions of the Los Angeles Times.

ABC's "Home Improvement" won a 22.7 rating last week, while "Frasier" had a 14.9 rating.

Melissa Gilbert laments lost loves

RADNOR, Pa. (AP) — Life was so much simpler on the prairie. A melancholy Melissa Gilbert has called off her marriage to actor Bruce Boxleitner for the second time.

But she'll have at least one memento.

"Last time I returned the ring. This time I'm keeping it. It's mine," the star of the old NBC series "Little House on the Prairie" told TV Guide in its Oct. 9 issue.

Entertainers pay tribute to the King

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — Some sported cowboy hats. Others had spiked hair in unnatural colors. But no matter what was on their heads, their hearts were all for Elvis, as Melissa Etheridge put it.

"I don't know of any rock musician who wasn't influenced by Elvis or influenced by someone who was influenced by Elvis," said Etheridge, one of dozens of singers at a concert Saturday devoted to the King's music.

Presley's daughter, Lisa Marie, was there with her new husband, Michael Jackson, as were 18,000 other people and performers as different as Tony Bennett, Dwight Yoakam and Aaron Neville.

"He opened the door for all of us," said Carl Perkins, who wrote the Presley hit "Blue Suede Shoes."

Also among the 33 singers and groups on the concert bill were Jerry Lee Lewis, Bryan Adams, Chet Atkins, Michael Bolton, Cheap Trick, Billy Ray Cyrus and Iggy Pop.

Although she says she knew she and the co-star of "Scarecrow and Mrs. King" were fundamentally different, it's been tough without him.

"My friends say, 'You'll find someone else. You're wonderful, you're smart, you're funny.' And I say, 'Yeah? Then why am I alone again?'"

Gilbert also laments the loss of her former fiancé, actor Rob Lowe. On her 30th birthday, Gilbert recalls reading that Lowe had cheated on her during their six-year relationship and engagement. He has since married.

Hugh Hefner plays it up at class reunion

CHICAGO (AP) — Hugh Hefner showed up with a luxury bus, bodyguards and TV cameras at his 50th anniversary high-school reunion, where classmates remembered a boy very different from the Playboy man.

"He was thin — scrawny almost," one classmate who requested anonymity said at the party Friday. "His best friend, a football player named Joe Brophy, got all the girls."

In the early '50s, Hefner founded Playboy magazine and soon became known for hanging out in pajamas surrounded by buxom beauties and famous friends.

Members of the class of 1944 at Steinmetz High School can still picture Hefner hanging out at the soda fountain at Guy's Drugstore.

So can he. "I can't believe it's been 50 years," said Hefner, 68. "I don't remember last Tuesday, but I remember my time here just like yesterday."

Lauren Bacall campaigns for celluloid conservation

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Lauren Bacall is sounding the alarm for an endangered species.

"We've got to realize that 50 percent of all movies made before 1950 are gone," said the 70-year-old actress, who starred in plenty of them. "We simply can't let that happen with any of the others."

Bacall hopes to rally support for efforts to preserve aging film classics, which were shot on nitrate-based film which deteriorates over time.

The American Movie Classics cable channel is working with director Martin Scorsese and The Film Foundation to raise money to transfer many of the classics to acetate to preserve them.

"The tragedy is that there just aren't enough people involved to really turn the tide for preservation," Bacall said in an interview Sunday in the Daily News.

WHEELROOM OPEN ALL NIGHT

Stressed students flock to 24-hour study hall

Karin Wahl-Jorgensen
The Daily Iowan

Kelly Brewer, Kathy Dressen and Angie Knoblauch said they were probably the noisiest group of students in the Union's 24-hour study area Wednesday. The three are roommates and have midterms this week.

They left their apartment together for the 24-hour study area and spent the night talking, drinking pop and moaning over hundreds of pages of reading they have yet to do for economics and pathology classes.

"We can't study at home because we get too tired and there are too many temptations. It's hard to keep away from the phone and the TV," Knoblauch said.

Although the trio spend a lot of their time chatting, they haven't been socializing with other students because most of them seem to be more interested in studying.

"It's after midnight, so now people want to get stuff done; otherwise they'll get screwed on their tests," Dressen said.

The three were among 31 students using the study area at 2 a.m. on Oct. 5.

While the rest of the campus was quiet, there was a loud humming of voices where groups of students were spread out over the Wheelroom. In the tense atmosphere, professional procrastinators were cramming for midterms, ingesting caffeine or resting their heads on textbooks.

Andrew Kruzick, a UI senior majoring in history, was one of those procrastinators. He had an eight-page book review due in 12 hours and was spending his time in the Wheelroom reading the book.

"I'm a procrastinator and a night owl," Kruzick said. "I put myself in situations where I have to get things done."

UI junior Ted Osterberger and UI seniors Thanh Vo and Brian Nelson were collaboratively attempting to muster the energy to study for a midterm in their UI junior Abbie Greene, a Spanish major, and Emilie Bray, a UI senior majoring in African-American studies major, use the Union's 24-hour study area to study Spanish. The study area will be open until midterms are over. "It should be open all the time," said Greene, who has already taken advantage of the new hours. Greene and Bray said they study in the area because it is quiet and they can eat, whereas they can't at the library.

Principles of Design I class. They had been studying in the Wheelroom since the UI Main Library closed at midnight, but planned to go home at 3 a.m.

"We needed a big space where we can work together and not have to be quiet," Nelson said.

The three were bent over their books, but said it was difficult to concentrate.

"I'd rather be out drinking. I'm getting way too stressed out studying," Osterberger said.

Dave Spaw, a UI junior majoring in business administration, was studying for a midterm in managerial economics and had another 10 hours to study. He planned to stay in the Wheelroom until 7 a.m.

"It's OK, but the chairs are kind of uncomfortable, and it could be quieter," he said. "If you're in here, you should be studying and not socializing."

Spaw had used the 24-hour study area once before, when he pulled another allnighter. He said that around 4 a.m. there are usually only two other people there. The last time he was there, he fell asleep for half an hour.

John Ealer, night manager of the study area, said staying awake is the greatest challenge of his job. With a can of iced tea in his hand, Ealer was studying for the Graduate Record Exam and speaking with a slur.

"Caffeine becomes the aqua vita of the 24-hour study area," he said.

He said that although the 24-hour study area is louder than he ideally wanted, it doesn't provide entertainment.

"It is definitely not the place for exciting going-ons," Ealer said. "It's more of an exercise in solemnity."

The 24-hour study area is sponsored by the UI Student Association.

RUDE MESSAGES SENT

Behavior on Internet inflames participants

Carrie Crumbaugh
The Daily Iowan

Most people remember being taught basic manners while they were playing in the sandbox, but when it comes to standards of etiquette on Internet, the golden rule may get tarnished.

The golden rule — which states, "Do unto others as you would have them do unto you" — may not apply to some Internet users. Many problems on the system stem from flaming, said Jason Welch, UI sophomore and Internet user.

Flaming occurs when a person leaves an inflammatory message, usually a personal attack caused by strong beliefs and views on a subject. Flaming can hurt people's feelings and has been known to start flame wars.

One UI student said he probably deserves to get flamed.

"People would flame me because I'd write stupid things down," UI sophomore Manuel Carr said.

Welch said that while being flamed bothers him, he does not adhere to the golden rule.

"This guy had written an article and all the information was wrong, so I just sent him a message and told him he was an idiot," he said.

Some users get flamed unintentionally, Carr said.

"The only way I've flamed anybody is by completely forgetting they were on-line with us and ignoring them," he said.

UI Internet users need to remember the nature of electronic communication in order to mind their manners, said Jeff Ollie, a Weeg Computing Center consultant.

"Internet is like mail because you write down messages and send them, but it's like a telephone also because it can be transmitted almost instantaneously and some people forget to think," he said.

To facilitate respect, there are two rules many UI students agree would help with Internet etiquette:

- If you don't want to be flamed, don't flame someone else. If you want to be treated with respect, respect others on-line, Welch said.

- Think of other users as humans and not just machines and words. Say only what you would say to their face. Think of the users as your friends and treat them accordingly.

VOLUNTEERS CLEAN FOR 4 HOURS

Homecoming festivities bring an influx of trash

Kathryn Phillips
The Daily Iowan

Forty student volunteers cleaned up pizza crusts, half-eaten sandwiches, beer bottles and plastic cups after Friday night's Homecoming events.

Trails of garbage were strewn on downtown streets and the Pentacrest lawn by people attending the parade, the pep rally and the fireworks show.

The first wave of cleanup began at 7:30 p.m., after the parade, and continued until midnight.

An estimated 1,000 students attended the pep rally at the Pentacrest, said Tim Howe, director of the Homecoming Council. The increased attendance led to an increase in garbage.

Midnight volunteers also cleaned up the west side of the river after the fireworks display at Hancher Auditorium.

"There was one live shell found in the ground. We were afraid it was going to go off in our faces," Howe said. "Most people don't notice the amount of work put into cleanup. When we draw as many people as we did, it takes a lot of work."

CIGARETTES EASILY PROCURED

Smoking age ignored in Iowa experiment

Associated Press
DES MOINES — Iowa teen-agers who volunteered to see how easy it is to illegally buy cigarettes didn't have much trouble. "It's what everybody expects — cigarettes are pretty accessible to kids," said A.J. Wineski, the tobacco control officer for the Iowa Department of Health. As part of the state's assault on underage smoking, Wineski got volunteers to visit hundreds of places where cigarettes are sold in late August and early September. He declined to reveal specifics, saying it would take several more weeks to analyze the results. Under federal law, Wineski said, states must show they're making progress in controlling smoking by minors. States that shrug off the assignment stand to lose federal money for substance-abuse programs. In an interview last summer, Wineski said he planned to find teen-agers to make 50 offers to buy tobacco products in each of eight counties. The counties would represent a cross section of the state. In an interview last week, he said investigators decided on a different number of counties. He declined to say how many. He said he had no trouble finding volunteers and that he coordinated the campaign with sheriffs. Wineski said there weren't any tricks. The teen-agers were not disguised to appear older, and each was given a standard script to use when trying to buy cigarettes. Wineski said officials in some states have found that children can buy cigarettes with ease. In South Carolina, 17-year-olds were successful 73 percent of the time. It is illegal to sell tobacco products to those under 18. Iowa law also imposes a fine of up to $100 for anyone under age 18 caught possessing tobacco products, but the law is rarely enforced.

WOMAN FOUND DEAD AT ROADSIDE

Four youths jailed in death of Iowan

Associated Press
LISCOMB, Iowa — Four boys were arrested Saturday in the slaying of a rural Iowa woman, and Marshall County officials charged each of them Sunday with murder and robbery. Marshall County Sheriff Ted Kamatchus said Sunday that each of the boys was being charged with one count of first-degree murder and one count of first-degree robbery. However, Kamatchus said he would not be able to release any further information about the boys until a news conference at 10:30 a.m. today at his Marshalltown office. Marshall County officials found Rebecca Hauser, 32, dead in her car early Wednesday after getting a tip from a passing driver. The mother of four died of multiple stab wounds to the chest, but she also had been shot several times. Kamatchus said Hauser had been in Marshalltown on Tuesday night and later went to the Mesquaki Bingo and Casino, near Tama. The sheriff said that the boys were arrested after investigators following leads went to Kirksville, Mo., Saturday and interviewed people who had been in the Marshalltown area Tuesday night. Kamatchus also said several search warrants had been issued in the case. Hauser's car was found on the shoulder of county road E-18, a route that's normally sparsely traveled. But the road is now part of a detour carrying traffic from Iowa Highway 14, a main route from Marshalltown and Des Moines to Waterloo. Hauser, her husband, Dan, and their family lived near Union. Dan Hauser is a farmer who was recently elected to the school board.

Investigation of cult deaths expands into France

GENEVA (AP) — The investigation into the cult deaths of 53 people in Switzerland and Canada has spread to France and Australia amid unconfirmed reports that the group's leaders were involved in arms trafficking and money laundering.

Adding to the mystery surrounding the murders and possible suicides, the passports of Joseph di Mambro, a cult leader, and his wife, Jocelyne, were delivered to the French Interior Ministry in Paris.

The ministry would not say if it knew who sent the passports or why.

The bodies of 48 cult followers, some of them shot in the head and hooded with plastic bags, were discovered last week in the rubble of fires at three chalets and a farm in Switzerland. Five other bodies were found in a charred chalet the cult leaders owned north of Montreal.

Some of the victims were obviously murdered, but Swiss officials left open the possibility that some took their own lives.

Authorities have suggested the fires were set to hide evidence of the deaths. It is not known whether di Mambro, a French-Canadian who lived in Switzerland, and the cult's other leader, Luc Jouret, a Belgian physician who lived in Switzerland and Canada, were among the dead.

The French connection first surfaced Saturday, when police uncovered an intricate incendiary device at an empty villa the cult used in southern France.

The device, which could have been triggered by a coded telephone call, was like the bombs that set off the fires last week in Switzerland and Canada.

Ad offering money believed to be fraudulent

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn. (AP) — The ad read, "Dying billionaire. Wants to give money to deserving people."

Applicants were to send $2 and a self-addressed stamped envelope to a P. Jackson at a Chattanooga mailbox, then wait for word of a windfall.

They're still waiting. And the check to pay for the advertisement, which ran in Atlanta newspapers for 10 days last month, bounced, according to a classified advertising department supervisor at the Atlanta Journal and Constitution.

"We've run into things kind of like this that ask for money and then ask for more money and string somebody along," said Kathryn Conklin, director of the Chattanooga Better Business Bureau.

The U.S. Postal Service is planning a mail fraud investigation.

CEREMONY EXPECTED TODAY

Haitian coup leader to vacate post

Anita Snow
Associated Press

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti — Lt. Gen. Raoul Cedras will step down today as Haiti's military leader, transferring power to the army's No. 2 commander, the Haitian army said Sunday.

Maj. Gen. Jean-Claude Dupervalv replaces Cedras under a plan approved Saturday in Washington by Haitian officers and representatives of exiled President Jean-Bertrand Aristide, said Col. Jean-Robert Gabriel, a spokesman for the Haitian high command.

Also set to leave is Brig. Gen. Philippe Biambry, the army chief of staff and a leader of the September 1991 coup that ousted Aristide. The resignations will pave the way for Aristide's expected homecoming on Oct. 15.

Gabriel, speaking to reporters from the second-floor balcony of army headquarters, said the ceremony will be held sometime this morning. He declined to elaborate.

Cedras met Sunday with provisional President Emile Jonaissant, but details of their discussions were not disclosed.

Defense Secretary William Perry and Gen. John Shalikashvili, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, met with Cedras Saturday in Port-au-

Prince, but U.S. officials had no immediate comment on the resignation date.

A Clinton administration official said Cedras indicated he was going to resign in the next few days. The official, speaking Sunday on condition of anonymity, didn't deny reports that Cedras will resign today, but said, "Nothing is clear until he does it."

Perry and Shalikashvili did not discuss whether Cedras would leave the country, although U.S. officials have said they expect he eventually will do so. Cedras has vowed to remain in Haiti.

Secretary of State Warren Christopher said the transition would "pick up even more momentum and steam" this week, although he couldn't confirm when Cedras and Biambry would leave.

"I am confident they'll be leaving office, and I think that as a practical matter that they will be leaving the country," he said upon arriving in Jerusalem.

Parishioners at St. Gerard Roman Catholic Church cheered when the Rev. Gerard Jean-Juste, an official in the Aristide government that was toppled three years ago, announced Cedras' imminent departure.

"Tomorrow we should hear that Cedras has left," Jean-Juste said

Sunday. "But don't clap your hands too much, there is still much work to do."

Under a U.S.-Haiti agreement that averted an invasion, Cedras and Biambry have to leave power by Oct. 15.

The Haitian sources said Cedras was working Sunday on final preparations for the power transfer.

A leading business backer of Cedras told the Associated Press that Cedras' continued presence in Haiti was necessary to assure Aristide's opponents they would be safe from retribution under the new civilian administration.

SALES CUT OFF BY WALKOUT

Concessions vendors suffer in sports strikes

David Germain
Associated Press

BUFFALO, N.Y. — First baseball took a hike. Then hockey. As a result, the people who sell hot dogs, beer and peanuts are on an unwilling furlough instead of enjoying a busy fall.

"We should have been having the beginning of the hockey season and the end of an exciting baseball season and the start of the playoffs," said Bob Schwartz, vice president of sales for Chicago-based Vienna Sausage Manufacturing Co., which supplies hot dogs to vendors at Chicago White Sox, Cubs and Blackhawks games.

"Instead, there's nothing," he said. Perhaps no business has been harder hit than Delaware North Companies Inc. of Buffalo. It handles concessions at seven major-league ballparks and four National Hockey League arenas.

The company also owns the Boston Garden, where the Bruins play, and Delaware North Chairman Jeremy Jacobs owns the Bruins.

"We are a large and a very healthy company, but those kinds of losses are felt by an organization of any size," company Vice President Samuel Gifford said.

Those hardest hit are the little guys, vendors who might only work a few hours a week selling goods at a ballpark. Many are schoolteachers off for the summer or college students earning money for the fall semester. Some depend on stadium concessions for all their income.

"That's their living," said Barry

Murov, a spokesman for Anheuser-Busch, the company which makes Budweiser beer and owns the St. Louis Cardinals. "They're the people who really got hurt."

Sandy Pecoraro, who works at a roast beef concession stand at Memorial Auditorium in Buffalo, said she depends on money from the part-time job to help raise her two children.

"This is killing me financially," she said of the postponed hockey season. "What do I do, get another job then quit if the season finally starts? I'm just disgusted with sports in general."

Delaware North figured to have $100 million in sales this year from its baseball concessions. But with baseball canceled in the wake of the strike that began Aug. 12, Delaware North lost $25 million to $30 million in sales, Gifford said.

Delaware North stands to lose $2.5 million from its hockey concessions if the games aren't made up.

Delaware North isn't exactly reeling, however. It provides concessions at other sports facilities, airports and parks, and has food-service operations in Australia, Europe and the Middle East. It also owns a publishing business and nine horse-racing tracks.

The same is true for most big concessionaires.

"It's going to have minimal impact on the Anheuser-Busch Co.," Murov said. "We've figured people would turn to other forms of entertainment, and while they're doing other things, they'll still be drinking beer."

BURLINGTON STREET DAM

Taking safety measures

Iowa City's Burlington Street dam has taken another life. Last week, as volunteers scoured the cold murky water for the latest drowning victim, The Daily Iowan quoted Johnson County Sheriff Robert Carpenter as saying, "I'm sure we'll have another one just like this next year."

This is not acceptable. We can only hope that he said this after countless exhausting hours of searching and didn't realize how insensitive and thoughtless his statement was.

The Burlington Street dam has claimed two victims in less than a year. Last summer, the nation watched the pictures of Iowa's finest law enforcement officials risking their lives to save two students trapped against the bridge supports by the force of the rushing water.

The sheriff is sure there will be another death next year. Most people in the city probably think there will be another death if something isn't done to prevent it. A course of action is clear — the city must do something to prevent the next death.

Just as the seat belt law protects Iowa drivers who would foolishly otherwise drive without them, the city must protect the ignorant fools and thrill seekers who will challenge the river next year.

In Iowa City, thousands of pedestrians cross the Iowa River daily, and access to the river's edge is unrestricted. Boaters and swimmers are on and in the water further upriver. When the surface of the river freezes in the winter, otherwise rational adults walk across the fragile crust and ignore the rushing water just a few inches under their feet.

Accidents happen because people fail to consider all the possibilities and ramifications of their actions. That's why they're called accidents rather than plans.

The Burlington Street bridge does have chains hanging underneath it. It is the last safety measure before the dam, but chains do little good if the current is too strong or if the victim is too exhausted.

A feasible, inexpensive solution is relatively simple: a fence. The city should run a pipe or cable across the river and hang in the water a partially submerged 7-foot chain-link fence. The fence should extend 4 feet up from the water and 3 feet below the river's average surface.

A fence in the river would serve as a filter and effectively prevent the deadly ride over the dam that we know someone will take next year. With a fence to stop them, potential drowning victims floating down the river — trapped in the throes of stupidity, ignorance or fear — wouldn't have the additional worry of trying to reach out and grab a thin cable.

If the fence extends only 3 feet beneath the surface, aquatic animals and ice will fit under it. In addition to people, rafts and boats, a fence also would catch logs and other garbage.

Therefore, cables or lines need to be attached to each end of the fence and winches need to be mounted on either bank. When the fence becomes too obstructed, city workers can simply reel it in like a giant curtain or fishing net and the garbage can be disposed of properly.

The costs of a fence in materials, installation and employee maintenance probably would be a fraction of the money spent each year to recover bodies. For every opponent who says a fence in the Iowa River wouldn't be practical, there are just as many friends and family members of drowning victims who probably wish it was installed a long time ago.

Argument ineffective

To the Editor:
Regarding "Lecture hall nightmare" (DI, Sept. 27), if Jessy Flammang is sick and tired of listening to faculty take up class time bitching about their rotten pay and lousy working conditions, she should say so.

That would have been an effective argument. Her turgid exercise in sucking up to the administration and the Iowa state Board of Regents is not. She did, however, raise a number of issues which need to be addressed, among them the idea of the university as benefactor to those it hires, the form and function of education, and the delicate sensibilities of hero-worshipping students.

As a member of the profession, I flat out do not want to think of my employer as my benefactor. That is not the nature of our relationship, nor should it be. The relationship is contractual. I have a right and a duty to speak if my employer fails to live up to contractual obligations — fair compensation, adequate support and decent conditions, so that I may do the job I was hired to do. To regard my employer as my benefactor is to obligate myself to be grateful for whatever crumbs get thrown my way. This is the attitude of a slave, not that of a free human being. And while some of my employers have acted as if they thought otherwise, I can assure you I am no one's property.

Further, I have a responsibility to my students, and if I feel that something in the system is hurting them, I have a right and a duty to talk to them about it. There's more to education than just learning how to replicate Greek verse. We all have to go out into the world eventually, and it's best we learn about these "systems" within which we work and live in order that we may better survive. If this means taking a few minutes to lay bare the innards and ugly underside of the education business, then so be it. The rest of the world, trust me, is not any prettier.

As I have responsibilities toward my students, please do not tell me that they regard me in an heroic light. I am not God, nor do I presume to speak for Him. I am a human being. My feet are clay. I do not want the kind of awful burden Flammang wishes to dump on me. I want my students to grow up, to stand on their own, to walk on their own, think on their own, to take responsibility for themselves. They cannot — they will not — do this if their attitude toward me or any other teacher is one of reverence and awe. I'd rather they hated my guts. At least it would show they had some of their own.

Last point, Flammang's writing style, no matter how much she may like large lecture halls, is a more than adequate argument for smaller classes. She really needs to sit down with a competent writing teacher — not a distant hero or a multiple guess midterm exam — and work out some of those problems, like the "totally immersed professor." Fifty minutes of that, and I should wonder the poor man hasn't drowned.

Picolette Marie learns where the bad cats go

The occasional sentimentality I feel for my cat is offset most of the time by the harsher realities of living with a feline. Consider poop on the rug. Yes, poop. Excrement. Fecal matter. On the rug. I was about to put my shoe on one morning. As I sat on a chair, my foot touched momentarily on something moist. I knew at my cat as I retracted my bare foot.

"Picolette Marie!" Like any parent in fury, I used her longest given name accompanied by the emphasized middle name. Picasso looked at me and blinked. I found her glance condescending and reacted poorly to being mocked.

"Bad!" I hissed. "Very bad!" I was bewildered. Pico had only done this once or twice before in four years. Never could I determine to my satisfaction a motivation for such bowel-driven protest. It was not restricted to the aftermath of overnight absences, nor was it limited to the few times the litter box went longer than 24 hours without a thorough combing. Still the fact remained. My cat, my princess kitty, had pooped on the floor.

For the rest of the day, our relationship was strained. I did not look at her. I scowled and grumbled "bad" often and without heat, as if the defeat of having to pick up a section of cat poop in a Kleenex had sapped me.

She meowed to go out. Once out, she looked around at the world and meowed to come in again. She yowled at the neighbor's back door, making a forlorn sound normally used after her placement in a carrier for transport to the vet — a plaintive yowl, a hollow little sound of mourning. It gets to me, and she knows it. I made a face at her through the screen door.

"What's wrong with you today?" I asked. "First you poop on the floor, and now you're crying. You're goofy." She is not off her feed, so I assume illness is not an issue. It is purely psychological. Feline psychology is the reason cat people love cats, and dog people despise them.

Dog people crave unconditional love. To this end they tolerate drool, incessant eagerness and attention, and bizarre canine sex attempts centered on the nearest human thigh or calf.

Cat people know the best things in life are not free and frequently cause pain. They tend toward sadomasochism and prefer to be the tortured party. They freely accept the humiliation cats offer in exchange for the sublime joys of cat ownership (insert maniacal cosmic laugh after the word ownership preceded by word cat). Said joys include but are not limited to scratched flesh and furniture, willingness to get out of bed whenever a cat paws your face in the morning, absence when you long for them and presence when you are trying to do something they can't help but interfere with, and poop in odd places at unpredictable moments.

Atmospheric conditions are a significant cause of cat goofiness. When the barometric pressure rises before a storm, Pico's ears go back, and her eyes dilate. Just when the funnel cloud symbol appears in the lower right-hand side of my TV screen, I look at my cat and see a demonic presence. In response to my stare, Pico hunkers down, sets her ear flaps back for maximum aerodynamic efficiency and takes off down the hallway of my apartment at a terrifying rate of speed. She makes the noise of several horses galloping into the distance.

"Okay, Miss Picolette, that does it." I use my warning voice. "If you don't settle down I'm going to give you to the gypsies." She pauses and pivots to face me, an ineffable delicacy of motion interrupting her stampe. I will try to frighten her into behaving through the use of a scary fable I invented for just that purpose.

"Oh, yes," I nod. "And you know what they will do with you. They will use you to make ... bad cat soup." Pico has been tainted by cultural insensitivity. Gypsy culture embodies a fascinating history, which I have reduced to threats to keep her in line.

"It is the season for the Bad Cat Festival," I say, picking up my unnerved cat. Pico glances over her shoulder.

"Every autumn, the gypsies gather for a celebration," I intone. "On the way, people give them their bad cats. Cats must be very bad to be given to the gypsies." We proceed to the sofa, where Pico curls in my lap.

"On the biggest night of the festival, all the bad cats are thrown into a huge pot, and the gypsies dance and sing the bad cat song until the soup is done. Do you remember that song?" She delivers a placid but sarcastic stare. And you call me goofy?

As the scene fades, our demented owner and now calm cat sit heedless of the TV screen. The poop on the rug long forgotten, a Slavic tune fills the air of the apartment as the woman sings the bad cat song, the very self-same song the gypsies sing as they dance around the bad cat soup pot. The cat is content with the tune's rhythm and melody and falls asleep, kneading its claws into the woman's thigh just a bit. Just enough to show she has them.

DAVID M. MASTIO

The will of the majority is stopped in a republic

The 103rd Congress is home after one of the most successful sessions in recent memory. Mired in gridlock and partisan division, the Congress did virtually nothing but spew hot air, exactly as the Founding Fathers intended.

It was the firm belief of all of the Founding Fathers that democracy should be thwarted at every turn. When it is the will of the people to change the status quo, the people should only prevail when their majority is large and sustained over a long period of time. Gridlock is what the Founding Fathers wanted and what the U.S. Constitution was designed to create.

I can just hear the gasp from the masses as they stammer things like, "D-d-democracy. We live in a democracy. The majority rules."

We have never been a democracy and hopefully never will become one. We live in a republic. Just read the Constitution; nearly every provision of the document is designed to thwart the will of the people. Here, the minority rules.

The Bill of Rights, commonly thought to protect democracy, in fact limits the scope of democratic action. If the people want to put any new limits on individual liberty, it forces majorities to leap through a series of procedural hoops that demand the majority consist of at least half of the voters spread through at least two thirds of the states over several years' time.

The Senate is designed as a counterbalance to the House of Representatives. If you think about it, the majority of seats in the Senate are elected by a minority of the population. In other words, the Senate is designed to give the minority of the population an equal voice with the majority.

The Supreme Court is the ultimate anti-democratic institution. Nine men and women decide issues from gay rights to abortion and the death penalty, and though they have to at least pretend they base their decisions on the Constitution they never have to answer to the electorate.

Despite the historical and legal fact that we live in a republic and not a democracy, the national media and the Democratic Party continue to lambaste "gridlock" in Washington. Most often the Democrats whine that democracy is being thwarted by obstructionist Republicans. The irony is that when Democrats and their friends in the liberal special-interest groups can't get their way through the democratic process, they have no qualms about using the Supreme Court or other undemocratic parts of our government to enact their will.

The Supreme Court outlawed the death penalty at the instigation of liberal groups, yet none of them ever paused to consider the anti-democratic tenor of their actions. Abortion is legal in all 50 states today because of a Supreme Court decision. Do any pro-choice care that their "right" was protected through undemocratic means?

Rep. Thomas Foley, D-Wash., the speaker of the House, is often the most vocal critic of "gridlock" and the undemocratic tactics Republicans use to ensure it. When the overwhelming majority of the electorate of Washington voted for term limits, Foley ran to the courts to have the new law nullified as unconstitutional. Sen. George Mitchell, D-Maine, another outraged critic of Republican gridlock, used exactly the same tactics Republicans are using today to prevent President Bush from lowering the capital gains tax.

Though the Democrats are lambasting the Republicans for being undemocratic, both parties behave exactly as our constitutional system was designed to make them behave. Both parties thwart democracy whenever it is to their advantage. And democracy is what the Founding Fathers wanted to avoid at all costs.

The Founding Fathers believed that the general public — even when limited to property-owning white males, as it was at the time — was prone to being immoral, emotional and highly uninformed. Those characteristics would invariably lead to bad governance and increasing violation of minorities' individual rights.

The political theorists who shaped the beliefs of our nation's Founding Fathers knew that it didn't pay for most people to become informed about their government. Even today with the "information revolution" it doesn't pay. If the government is about to pass a bill that will waste $100 million, it doesn't make economic sense to buy a national newspaper to find out about the problem and then make a long-distance phone call to your representative. The newspaper and phone call will cost about $2, but your share of the wasted government spending come to only 40 cents. Even then, there is only a small chance that your call will make a difference in your representative's vote and that your representative's vote will make a difference in the outcome.

In addition, though the Founding Fathers belonged to several different Protestant groups, the vast majority of them shared the belief that man was inherently sinful. Because of that religious belief, they knew that given the chance the majority would vote to oppress the minority, whether it was through confiscatory taxes on people who had too much money or people whose religious beliefs differed from the majority.

We are lucky we live in a republic where the minority is given the political power to stop the will of the majority.

Entertainment industry not meant for guidance

To the Editor:
In response to Jessy Flammang's editorial regarding "Natural Born Killers" (DI, Sept. 22), every generation has its rebels, and in a time period when we are spoon-fed loads of crap like O.J., Tonya and Ollie North by talking heads like Dan and Connie, well, it's not surprising that our generation has rebels / heroes like Mickey and Mallory. And I'm not ashamed to have them.

If today's societal structure sucks, then why not rebel? What are we supposed to do? Put on suits and pander to the boss like Daddy? Bow down and have a cup of tea with King George? I certainly don't condone blowing people away, but "Natural Born Killers" was not a movie fraught with realism. There was a definite tripped-out, cartoonlike, surreal feel to this show. Rooting for Mickey and Mallory is similar to rooting for the Roadrunner when he drops an anvil in Wile E. Coyote's head. The society in which Mickey and Mallory live stinks, so people cheer when they use and abuse it. It's nothing we would try at home, but my, is it grand to see it on the silver screen. (Nothing like a little ultraviolence to grab people's attention and make them think.)

What would Jessy Flammang suggest as a plot for Mickey and Mallory? Idea: After Mallory is sexually assaulted by her father repeatedly, an understanding guidance counselor at school helps Mallory. She gets straight A's in school, volunteers at a nursing home and wins a scholarship to Stanford. She goes through therapy, writes a self-help book about incest, and in the culmination of her career becomes rich, famous and appears on Oprah.

After Mickey is viciously beaten during his formative years and abandoned, he is reformed by social services and a stay at a juvenile detention home. He becomes a plumber's apprentice and eventually settles down with his male lover in a nice middle-class suburb of Cleveland, where later they adopt a child.

Although heart-warming, these are scenarios that would probably make for a boring movie with a lame message that "today's youth" would ignore. Nobody was there for Mickey and Mallory, just like nobody is there for thousands of kids trying to grow up today. Mickey and Mallory were crapped on by every facet of their society, so they grew up to have a very crappy attitude. They found a way out and took it, but I certainly don't think we were supposed to believe that it is the right way for us to take.

I do not worship the god Oliver Stone, and I do not expect him to teach me or my peers morality. People who look to the entertainment industry for moral guidance are stupid for looking there.

Policy does not affect academic freedom

To the Editor:
I must say, if Patricia Harris' article "Policy enforcement perplexes officials" (DI, Sept. 22) accurately states how the UI's administration officials feel concerning enforcement of their student information policy, then we are living in a very sad time. Harris states, "Policy-free zones" have the UI administration baffled concerning enforcement of the sex act policy." Well, if the administration is truly "baffled," let me help you.

Most if not all companies / organizations operate within certain policy guidelines. A verbal reprimand is usually the first step when a person refuses to comply with company policy. If the refusal continues, it will lead to firing of that employee. Even if new policies come about after hiring an employee, they must be followed. Once the policy takes effect, all employees must comply or face the consequences.

I've always felt that universities live / operate in a world all their own. But folks, let's get serious. If you don't like the parking meter fees around the university, do you declare them "policy-free zones" and park without paying? If you do, is the city "baffled" what action it should take?

You, the university administration, have the responsibility to state policy and to make clear the consequences of not supporting that policy. I gather from Harris' article you have not done so. In addition, making the consequences clear is not the final step. You are in charge, therefore you must take swift corrective actions against all who refuse to obey policy. Inaction leads one to assume refusal to obey is acceptable. Is it? If so, you are setting a very dangerous precedence.

You, the university faculty, have a responsibility to impart knowledge / set an example for your students — that is why they pay you! If you don't like a policy, do you honestly feel it is proper to refuse to obey it? What type of example do you then set for your students? What knowledge are you now imparting to them? Confused? Well, again let me help you. By declaring you will not follow the university's policy, you are saying it is all right for a person to willfully disobey anything they don't agree with. If you really feel that way, then get the hell out of a position of authority because I sure do not want you setting that example for my kids!

I would like to close with one final note: To willfully disobey an established policy is not academic freedom, it is juvenile rebellion!

Thanks and gratitude extended to community

To the Editor:
I want to thank all of you who have been tremendous support to me before, during and recovering from my bone marrow transplant last January. Generous donations were sent for my medical account at the University of Iowa Community Credit Union, while many university merit employees donated their vacation time to my sick leave pool to cover until disability kicked in. (Thanks also to the many professional and P & S employees who tried but were unable to contribute to the pool due to status.)

I have now returned to full-time work and my music. In recognition of your generosity, I have donated part of the medical fund to create the Cancer Prevention Fund for free / sliding-scale cancer detection tests to people who cannot afford these, especially women 40 and under for potential breast cancer. The fund is established at the Free Medical Clinic of Iowa City.

So I thank you who organized the sick leave pool, fund-raisers and benefit concerts. And to the many who attended; who contributed time, talent and effort; who sent me cards, comics and gifts; who called, visited, spiritually and generally "swamping" me with care and concern, I extend my gratitude.

I am a student at the UI and a veteran of the U.S. Army. As a student on a limited budget, I rely on the Veterans Administration Medical Center for my health care. I assumed that this care would be provided for me and all veterans at no cost. This is not the case, however.

Athletes deserve subsidized housing

To the Editor:

The article titled "Athletes cash in on subsidized housing" (DI, Oct. 4) was one of the most slanted pieces of journalism that I have ever encountered. The football players were made out to be common criminals, when in fact they are not. They receive approximately $400 per month from the football program. In 1991, the official poverty level was at $590.50 per month for individuals. The article should not have been written to say they have no business to live in subsidi-denied our entitlement to cost free health care.

Who is and who is not receiving free health care at this time is irrelevant. What is relevant is that the free health care promised to veterans is not being provided. I understand how difficult it is trying to allocate funds to different sources in the government, but I feel someone somewhere has forgotten their priorities. We were promised free health care, and now we are not getting it.

Would a veteran in the White House allow this to happen?

dized housing, because in fact they have a legal right to do so.

The problem lies with the NCAA. Not only does the NCAA refuse to pay the football players, but they also do not allow a player to obtain a job outside of football to support themselves. The universities, on the other hand, sit back and collect millions of dollars on Saturday afternoons for their efforts. Do not blame the football players for getting the most out of their dollar but blame the NCAA for making it a necessity.

Hawkeyes hail Homecoming hysteria

Tailgaters congregate come rain or shine

Wayne Drash
Special to The Daily Iowan

At the northwest corner of Melrose Avenue Saturday, the smell of grilled food permeated the air, the sound of happy voices and upbeat music reverberated, and the spirit of Hawkeye football converged on the typically quiet staff lot 14.

"Good food, good beer and good company. That's what Saturdays are all about," said Matt MacAllister, a 1985 UI alumnus, as he took a swig of his homemade brew.

His Des Moines tailgating buddy Mark Opsal said with a laugh, "We get pumped up, have a few beverages and talk trash about the opponent."

Fifty feet from MacAllister and Opsal's party, a longtime Hawkeye supporter boasted that tailgaters are like mail carriers while sniffing his batch of barbecued pork made for the nine others in his group. "You'll come whether it's rain or shine, cold or hot, sleet or snow," he said.

It took a treacherous snowstorm to keep Bonny Bauer of Anamosa, Iowa, and her husband from tailgating.

"We were on our honeymoon, and we came down here to Iowa City. Iowa was playing Nebraska, and we sat in a blizzard and we could hardly see the players on the field. That was one time that it was too cold to tailgate, but we still made it to the game," said Bauer, who has religiously tailgated for more than 30 years.

The one subject that the Hawkeye diehards spoke out the most about was coach Fry. When his name was mentioned, the tailgaters bustled with pride.

"If Hayden Fry quits, I quit," said Carl Moe of Waverly, Iowa.

MYRIAD OF QUESTIONS ANSWERED

Foreign students catch football fever

Justin Data
Special to The Daily Iowan

UI football season can be a confusing time for foreign students, who often don't know football basics, such as whether it's OK to kick a blocker or where the spot got its name.

For international students, finding out about football was as simple as attending Football for Foreigners, a program sponsored by the Office of International Education and Services (OIES) Friday afternoon.

The presentation has been held the day of the Homecoming parade at the International Center's main lounge for the past five years so foreign students can learn more about the rules of football and how it is played.

UI freshman and OIES work-study employee Pat Enright led the presentation, which quickly turned into a question-and-answer session as international students tried to clarify their football uncertainties.

"The questions were very complex," Enright said. "Some people who watch football a lot wouldn't even know so many things to ask."

Liz Pearce-Burton, assistant director of the OIES, said that last year there was a woman from India in the audience who fired a ton of technical questions at the presenter.

"I really think she could have asked Hayden Fry questions, and he would have struggled," she said.

This year's questions didn't seem to faze Enright. Some of the questions were:

- "Why call it football? You hardly use your feet."
- "A spiral, is that when you put a spin on it?"

• "Why not let everyone catch the ball? It would be more fun."

While Enright explained blocking, Joseph Chin, a visiting scholar from Taiwan, asked about the person being blocked, "Can you kick him?"

Enright told Chin he could kick him after the game if he wanted to, but not while blocking.

Hui Xiao, a student from China, volunteered to wear a Hawkeye uniform with shoulder pads to help demonstrate blocking and tackling with Enright.

During the fall, the UI is heavily oriented toward football, Pearce-Burton said. If foreign students know more about it, they can feel more a part of the American college culture.

"Here, they can feel like they're Hawkeyes," she said.

FANS PACK BUSES

Cambus crammed beyond capacity

Dana Lipkin
Special to The Daily Iowan

Driving an overfilled Cambus loaded with the losing team's fans may not be an ideal football Saturday, but Nate Kling said being a Hawk fan helps him cope.

"I say, 'Go Hawks' and show spirit, and it peps them up," Kling said.

He drove pregame and postgame shifts and also transported some of the Cambus staff to the game so they could watch some of the Homecoming game between their shifts.

On football Saturdays, Cambus usually employs support personnel to help direct people and load the buses. It was understaffed for Homecoming because many employees took advantage of the free football tickets provided by Cambus.

Even without support staff, drivers didn't seem too concerned about trouble from passengers.

"You expect people to be rowdy," said Dave Schultz, Cambus maintenance supervisor.

Although he usually fixes the buses rather than drive them, because of the understaffing he drove Saturday.

"Most people are kind of obnoxious, but they won't cause problems," Schultz said. "It's a lot worse when Iowa wins."

Alumni and other fans weren't out of control after the game, said Jennifer Joslin, Cambus driver and scheduling supervisor.

"The situation is pretty orderly," Joslin said.

Joe Murphy/The Daily Iowan

Mary Geasano and Nancy Freeman braved Saturday's weather to get together with friends and enjoy plenty of hors d'oeuvres and drinks before the Iowa-Indiana game.

Bookworms sidestep throng of gamegoers

Jennifer Nathanson
Special to The Daily Iowan

The roar of the crowd at Kinnick Stadium didn't pierce the silence of the UI Main Library Saturday, where hearty students resisted Homecoming madness for the sake of their studies.

Some UI students spent the weekend hitting the books, not screaming for the Hawkeyes, and the library provided the ideal atmosphere.

"It's a lot quieter here than usual, that's for sure," said Christa Starck, a graduate student in library science.

Pointing towards the books sprawled across the table, Starck said she had a lot of work to get done. In the 20 years she's lived in Iowa City, she has only gone to one football game. "And then I left at halftime," she said. "I find football boring and obnoxious."

Matt Ruble, a second-year UI medical student, said his enthusiasm for UI athletics has waned since he entered medical school.

"I've gotten further from the athletic setting of the college," he said. "I'm not a die-hard Hawkeyes fan. But I would love it if Iowa won and became a Big Ten power again."

Seeing a "gleam" in the eyes of Hawkeye fans as they headed to the stadium was exciting, but Ruble said he planned to study for a pathology exam at the library.

"I knew nobody would be here because of the game," he said.

crime," Marolla said. "Out of all the possible options, can this be the best one?"

RAs are supposed to be role models for the students, and they weren't given a chance to right their wrong, he said.

"We broke the residence hall alcohol policy," Marolla said. "The rules were here to uphold were broken."

Affected residents in Burge and Daum residence halls were notified of the dismissal by a letter from Burge / Daum hall coordinator Cheryl Hoogerwerf-Reardon. The letter informed students they will have a temporary RA from an adjoining floor while the administration searches for replacements.

Many students taped the letter to the outside of their doors and wrote profanity and support for their RAs on it.

The residents of the 1400s of Burge Residence Hall wrote a letter and signed a petition, which they plan to present to Hoogerwerf-Reardon, objecting to the dismissal of Marolla. Other floors have also signed petitions and written letters of protest to Hoogerwerf-Reardon, but Beverly believes the petitions won't draw administrative interest.

"I don't think they will actually pay attention to these petitions, to be honest with you," she said.

For some students, their RA has been a stabilizing factor in an often chaotic first year. Adam Loops, a UI freshman living in the 1400s of Burge Residence Hall, said residents are angry about the decision but will get over it in time.

"I don't think (the next RA) will be as accepted as Doug," Loops said. "Doug was a great guy. Whenever we were doing something wrong he would tell us, but he did it in a good way."

Loops said the punishment is too severe.

Jill King, a UI freshman living in the 3500s of Burge Residence Hall, was animated about the dismissal of her RA, Tara Tracy.

"We get a number of chances to screw up, and she only gets one," King said. "She's a good friend and is probably half the reason I'm still in school."

The seven were given the option of remaining in the residence halls or moving out completely.

Some of the RAs are going to move into apartments together, and some are staying in the residence halls, but all are hoping to put this behind them.

The six days between when the group of RAs was caught and the decision was made were frustrating and were a distraction from studying, Beverly said.

She spent Thursday and Friday looking for an apartment, Saturday packing and Sunday preparing for a midterm.

"I'm still kind of in shock," Beverly said. "I made a mistake. It was my fault. I just don't think it was that harsh of a mistake."

additional 30,000 Marines and soldiers — still technically on alert status — the official said the decision has been made to dispatch them.

In addition, the official said the Pentagon "will also be alerting additional ground forces on a divisional scale," meaning that up to 15,000 additional forces could be called to support the deployment of the other divisions.

Some 4,000 members of the 24th began flying from Georgia to Kuwait Sunday.

As of Friday there were about 12,000 soldiers, sailors, airmen and Marines in the Persian Gulf region. Over the weekend, some 2,000 Marines entered the northern Persian Gulf, and some 6,000 Navy men and women were slated to enter the Red Sea on board the USS George Washington and its battle group.

After the additional buildup disclosed Sunday evening, the size of the U.S. force either in the region, en route, awaiting orders to leave or on alert was 69,000.

Florida, Nebraska stay on top of latest poll

(AP) — Miami moved back into the Top 10, while Florida State, Arizona and Notre Dame dropped out of the elite group Sunday in The Associated Press college football poll.

Florida and Nebraska remained 1-2 for the fifth straight week. The Gators received 44 first-place votes and 1,527 points after beating LSU 42-18 Saturday. The Cornhuskers got 12 firsts and 1,461 points after defeating Oklahoma State 32-3.

Idle Penn State moved up one spot to No. 3 and Colorado rose one place to No. 4 after downing Missouri 38-23. Penn State received two first-place votes and 1,427 points.

Michigan climbed two notches to No. 5 with a 40-20 victory over Michigan State, Auburn jumped three spots to No. 6 following a 42-18 win over Mississippi State, and Texas A&M rose three places to No. 7 after humbling Houston 38-7.

Miami, which fell out of the Top 10 two weeks ago after losing to Washington, jumped from No. 13 to No. 8 after beating Florida State 34-20. The Seminoles dropped from No. 3 to No. 11, the first time they've been out of the Top 10 since 1990.

Maleeva wins European Indoors despite injury

ZURICH, Switzerland (AP) — Fifth-seeded Magdalena Maleeva of Bulgaria defeated No. 3 Natalia Zvereva of Belarus, 7-5, 3-6, 6-4 Sunday to win the $750,000 European Indoors.

The victory for the 19-year-old Maleeva, ranked 13th on the WTA Tour, came a year after her older sister, Manuela Maleeva-Fragniere, won the same event.

Maleeva said she nearly didn't play on Sunday because of a muscle tear in her ribs sustained in her 6-2, 7-5 semifinal victory over Helena Sukova.

"The pain woke me up at 4 o'clock in the morning, and I couldn't get back to sleep," she said.

Hayden Fry is back at square one.

When the Iowa football coach chose Ryan Driscoll as his starting quarterback, he envisioned the sophomore developing into a winner over the course of three seasons.

Driscoll was on the right track until he broke his collar bone Saturday in the Hawkeyes' 27-20 loss to Indiana. A crowd of 67,138 witnessed the Hawkeyes' third straight homecoming defeat.

With Iowa trailing 14-7 late in the second half, Driscoll scrambled for nine yards to the Hoosier 23. He left the game clutching his shoulder and will miss the rest of the season.

With Matt Sherman out with a fractured foot and Jefferson Bates nursing a sore elbow, Fry inserted fourth-string junior quarterback Mike Duprey into the ball game.

Iowa, 2-4 and 0-3 in the Big Ten, had a chance to win the game with 2:04 left. But Duprey's pass intended for Harold Jasper was intercepted on the Hawkeyes' second play, and Indiana ran out the clock to secure the victory.

"It was just a terrible throw on my part," Duprey said. "Everybody did their job and I just didn't com-

Hawkeye rally ends dry spell

Mike Triplett
The Daily Iowan

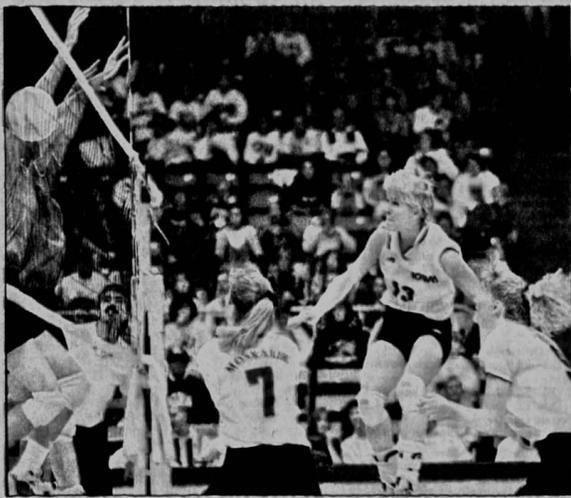

The Iowa volleyball team pulled itself out of a slump Saturday night, winning its first match since Sept. 24.

The Hawkeyes defeated the visiting Indiana Hoosiers, 16-14, 14-16, 15-9, 15-13. Iowa evened its Big Ten record at 3-3 with the win. Overall, the Hawkeyes are 13-5.

The Hawkeyes showed Saturday night what they had been missing. Sophomore Jill Oelschlager ended a personal slump with 21 kills. Sophomores Katy Fawbush and Jennifer Webb added 22 and 16, respectively.

"We were able to keep them off balance tonight," Iowa coach Linda Schoenstedt said. "I felt that (Indiana) used just two hitters, while we used four or five hitters. We were very well balanced."

Indiana's total of 82 kills outnumbered Iowa's total of 78. Anne Eastman and Lynn Crawley picked up most of the load for Indiana with 49 kills between them. The match was close from the start. Iowa rallied from deficits of 12-8 and 14-12 before edging the Hoosiers 16-14 in the first game. In the second game, Iowa again rallied with seven straight points to take a 12-10 lead, but this time Indiana scored the final four points to take a 16-14 game of its own.

Indiana got no closer than 10-8 in the third game as Iowa took control. And in the final game, Iowa was able to hold off a late Hoosier rally for the 15-13 win, despite the fact that Indiana came back from being down 14-10. "With a young team, confidence is always a question," Schoenstedt said in reference to the Hawkeyes' recent slump. "But they worked very hard to get over this hurdle. "We're obviously pleased with the results, because we did work them very hard in practice." Oelschlager also mentioned the

NHL LABOR

Postponed games close to being cut

Ken Rappoport
Associated Press

NEW YORK — So far, 49 games have been postponed because of the NHL labor strife. How many more days before games will be lost for good?

Many agree Wednesday will be D-Day for the NHL — Decision Day as far as considering an abbreviated schedule.

"They'll probably have to come to an agreement by the middle of the week (in order for the NHL to salvage the entire 84-game schedule)," Jack Ferreira, general manager of the Mighty Ducks of Anaheim, said Sunday in a telephone interview. "The guys have to be skating for a couple of days (to be in game-ready shape)."

Randy Ladouceur, the Ducks' captain, also felt an agreement would have to be reached by Wednesday if the NHL hoped to play a full schedule.

"I would think after Wednesday that teams would start running into logistical problems," Ladouceur said. "Ideally, Wednesday would give us enough time to prepare by Saturday."

But the league may have already reached the point of no return in trying to salvage the entire season.

Negotiators aren't expected to meet before today, at the very least. The NHL Players Association worked through the weekend to have a new contract proposal ready for the NHL.

The league has to consider it, which won't be until Tuesday when NHL commissioner Gary Bettman will meet with the board of governors in New York. It will take some time for the 26 governors to talk about the union's proposal, which is expected to be complex.

In their meeting on Tuesday, the NHL governors will be talking about the viability of playing on Oct. 15, Bettman's target date to restart the season so that an entire schedule can be played.

Bettman had postponed the original Oct. 1 start of the season for two weeks in the hopes that a new labor agreement could be worked out. However, Bettman has said the season could start on Oct. 15 if there is "meaningful" movement toward a contract settlement.

Banks explodes for 60-yard kickoff return

Patrick Regan
The Daily Iowan

Iowa running back Tavian Banks showed his explosiveness once again in limited action against the Hoosiers.

Banks ran for 17 yards and a touchdown on three carries. He had 126 yards on 5 kickoff returns, including a 60 yarder in the third quarter.

"To me, Tavian Banks is unreal," Iowa coach Hayden Fry said. "He only worked out one day this week. He had a bad ankle. But you'd never know he had a bad ankle on that kickoff return."

Fry, who nicknamed Banks "magic," said he wants to see more of the redshirt freshman in the future. Fry delegates that authority to his position coaches, meaning running backs coach Dave Triplett is responsible for substituting Banks.

"I'm sure based on his performance, he's got to play more," Fry said. "I just told Coach Triplett in the lockerroom a little while ago, 'Trip, you've just got to get him in there and if he fouls up, he fouls up. But let's give him a chance. Look at all the good things he does.'"

Off the mark - Iowa's kicking game continues to struggle.

Brion Hurley missed a 40-yard field-goal attempt near the end of the first half and his extra point try in the fourth quarter hit the left upright.

"We just don't have the consistency with the kicking game to win a close ball game," Fry said.

Since taking over as the No. 1 place kicker against Oregon, Hurley is 4 for 7 on extra points and 0 for 2 on field goals.

For the season, Iowa is 2 of 7 on field goal attempts and 16 of 21 on extra points.

Indiana's Alex Smith goes head on with Iowa line-backer Bobby Diaco during the third quarter Saturday. Smith, who rushed for 232 yards, set a Kinnick Stadium record with 43 carries.

The Daily Iowan

Indiana's Alex Smith made his first game at Kinnick Stadium a memorable one.

The Hoosier redshirt freshman gained 232 yards Saturday in Indiana's 27-20 win over Iowa. His 43 rushing attempts set a new Kinnick record, breaking the previous high of 39 attempts.

"He's just like the (Tyron) Wheatley's and the other guys we play against in the Big Ten. He's a hard runner."

Bo Porter, Iowa free safety

Although Smith is only six games into his college career, Indiana coach Bill Mallory said he had no reservations in playing a freshman.

"If I feel they're the best, that's who we'll go with," Mallory said.

Smith was Indiana's best on Saturday. He had 99 yards at halftime and wasted little time in improving his numbers in the third quarter. He racked up 52 yards on 13 carries in the Hoosiers' opening drive of the second half.

Smith said Indiana's offensive line had a lot to do with his success.

"I was just trying to stay behind my big men," he said. "They were really surging off the line and I knew if I just followed them they'd get me some yards."

Coming into the game Smith was second in the Big Ten in rushing, averaging more than 130 yards per game. Iowa free safety Bo Porter said the freshman's high numbers and status among the conference's top rushers are no surprise.

"He's a real good back," Porter said after Saturday's game. "He's just like the (Tyron) Wheatley's and the other guys we play against in the Big Ten. He's a hard runner. He's just an excellent back."

The Hoosiers were coming off two games where defenses had virtually shut down Smith. Wisconsin crushed the Hoosiers 62-13 Sept. 24 and Minnesota held Smith to 22 yards on 16 carries on Oct. 1.

Smith said the Hoosier offense was looking to re-establish the running game.

"We feel like we're a good running football team and we just feel that the last two weeks have been flukes," Smith said. "We didn't run the ball that well (in the previous weeks) but none of the offensive players ever felt that we couldn't run the ball."

Smith often draws comparisons to former Indiana backs Vaughn Dunbar and Anthony Thompson. Mallory said Smith could be at the level of Hoosier greats, but not yet.

M. Scott Mahaskey/The Daily Iowan

Indiana quarterback John Paci sneaks in for a touchdown during the third quarter on a fourth-and-goal. The Hoosiers increased their lead to 21-7.

"Well it's early. I think again he's got that kind of potential but (Dunbar and Thompson) are finished products and had great careers for us," Mallory said. "I think Alex certainly has the potential to be in their class."

Smith said he's not ready to be compared.

"I've said all along I'm not trying to compare myself with any great back," he said.

"I have great linemen doing great things for me and we're just working well as a team."

plete the pass."

Duprey came into the game without warming up. His first play was an incomplete pass out of the back of the end zone.

"Michael (Duprey) will be OK," Fry said. "He's a big strong guy. He needs enough repetitions so he can read the coverages so he doesn't throw it to the wrong shirt."

Duprey played the entire second half and finished 2 of 6 for 57 yards with a touchdown and an interception.

"I felt as though I did some good things," Duprey said. "I have a lot to work on. The only way you get used to things like that is to play, of course."

The Hawkeyes held the Hoosiers to 31 yards passing on the day, but Indiana got all the yards it needed on the ground. Freshman Alex Smith mystified Iowa's defense throughout the game and finished with 232 rushing yards on a Kinnick Stadium record 43 carries.

"I'd get a double team and I'd look up and they would be 10 yards down field," defensive lineman Parker Wildeman said. "I don't know what's going. Maybe we're just not good enough. I don't know what the deal is."

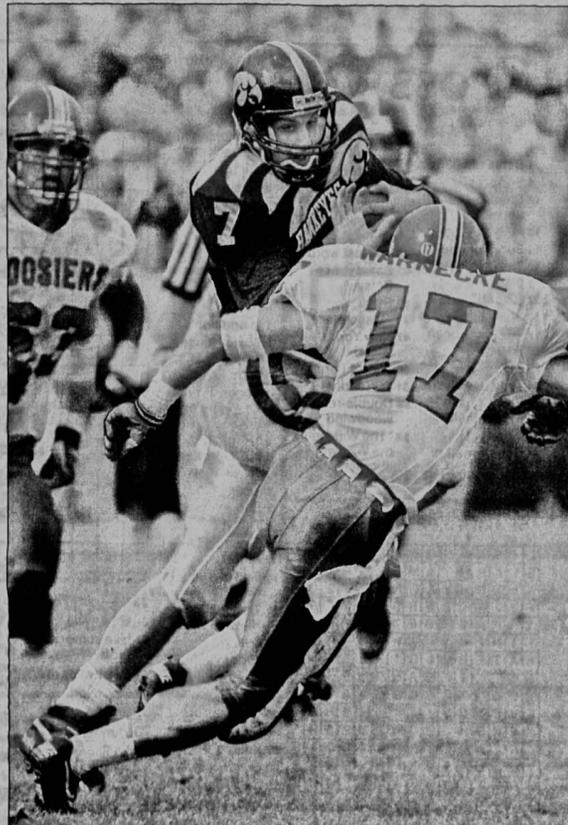

Indiana (5-1, 2-1) wore down Iowa with a 20-play 75-yard touchdown drive to open the second half.

The scoring march included a fake field goal for a first down, four third down conversions and culminated with a 1-yard quarterback sneak by John Paci on fourth-and-goal.

The extra point put Indiana up 21-7.

The methodical drive was typical of the way the game went. Indiana ran 82 offensive plays to Iowa's 52. The Hawkeyes total time of possession was 20 minutes 14 seconds.

It took the Hoosiers 11 minutes and 16 seconds to score, but Iowa answered just 37 seconds later.

Tavian Banks took the kickoff and returned it 60 yards to the Hoosier 27-yard line. One play later, Duprey completed a 27-yard pass to Willie Guy to a touchdown and Iowa was back in the game, down 21-14.

It was Duprey's first complete pass as a Hawkeye.

"It was just a fake and I boot out and I saw Willie (Guy) over the top," Duprey said. "It wasn't that tough of a throw. It was a nice first throw to start out with, somebody being wide open."

NFL ROUNDUP

Penalties shut down Lions

Wendy E. Lane
Associated Press

Associated Press

49ers quarterback Steve Young screams in pain as Detroit Lions defenders land on the quarterback in the first quarter.

The San Francisco 49ers needed to regroup as badly as the Detroit Lions did.

Early on, it looked like the Lions, who had lost two straight since beating Dallas, were doing it better. Detroit scored on its first two possessions Sunday before San Francisco came back to win 27-21 at Pontiac, Mich.

A slow start was the last thing the 49ers, coming off a 40-8 embarrassment by Philadelphia, wanted. But they capitalized on a crop of Detroit penalties to score two quick touchdowns and tie the score at halftime.

"Nothing is easy for us right now, but we're hanging in there," Young said. "It's not easy being down 14-0 on the road, but we've got some guys on the team who have been around a long time. We knew that we didn't need to scream and panic. We just had to get going."

Bears 17, Saints 7

At Chicago, Steve Walsh played his third straight game in place of the injured Erik Kramer and remained unbeaten as Chicago's starting quarterback.

Walsh directed two long second-half scoring drives, completing 16 of 26 passes for 174 yards. Lewis Tillman rushed for 100 yards and a touchdown for the Bears (4-2).

Packers 24, Rams 17

At Green Bay, Wis., Reggie White and the rest of the Packers defense held Jerome Bettis, the NFL's No. 2 rusher, to 65 yards and two carries as Green Bay (3-3) came from behind to win.

The Rams (2-4) led 17-3 at halftime before Green Bay scored 21 straight points in the second half.

Bills 21, Dolphins 11

At Orchard Park, N.Y., Thurman Thomas ran for two touchdowns as Buffalo (4-2) moved into a first-place tie with the Dolphins (4-2) in the AFC East.

Thomas ran 31 times for 125 yards.

Dan Marino was 20 of 43 for 212 yards and overthrew his receivers several times on key plays.

Jets 16, Colts 6

At East Rutherford, N.J., New York snapped a five-year home losing streak against Indianapolis in a game marked by fumbles, penalties and interceptions.

Backup running back Adrian Murrell keyed the decisive scoring drive late in the final quarter with a 19-yard run, and Boomer Esiason hit Johnny Mitchell with a 1-yard TD pass for the Jets' first TD against the Colts in three years.

Falcons 34, Buccaneers 13

At Atlanta, Ironhead Heyward scored two touchdowns in his first start of the season, and Winnie Clark returned interceptions 74 and 21 yards in the Falcons' third straight win.

Jeff George threw two touchdowns passes. Heyward rushed for 87 yards and a pair of short touchdowns as Atlanta (4-2) took a 24-0 lead late in the first half.

Broncos 16, Seattle 9

At Seattle, Denver (1-4) broke a seven-game losing streak dating to last season, leaving Cincinnati, which had a bye, as the NFL's only winless team.

John Elway scored on a short run, and Jason Elam kicked three field goals.

Chargers 20, Chiefs 6

At San Diego, Natrone Means ran for a career-high 125 yards and one touchdown on 19 carries as the Chargers (5-0) remained the NFL's only undefeated team.

The Chiefs (3-2) have lost two straight games for the first time since Montana moved over last season from San Francisco.

Cowboys 38, Cardinals 3

At Irving, Texas, Emmitt Smith scored twice and Troy Aikman threw two touchdowns passes as the Cowboys (4-1) snapped a seven-game losing streak to Buddy Ryan.

The Cowboys rocked the Cardinals (1-4) with four touchdowns in the first half, three of them following interceptions of Jay Schroeder by the NFL's best defense.

Raiders 21, Patriots 17

At Foxboro, Mass., cornerback Terry McDaniel returned an interception for a touchdown, and his second of three pickoffs set up the deciding score as Los Angeles (2-3) stopped New England's three-game winning streak.

Bledsoe threw for 321 yards, but his three interceptions were costly for New England (3-3).

Hawks cap weekend sweep

The Iowa women's tennis team completed a weekend sweep Sunday when it defeated Nebraska 7-2. The Hawkeyes defeated Western Illinois on Friday 9-0.

Iowa was led by senior Laura Dvorak as the Hawkeyes rolled past the Leathernecks. Dvorak won in straight sets over Adrienne Schultz 6-1, 6-1. Junior Sasha Boros, freshman Kristen Campbell, and sophomore Robin Niemeier all breezed through their first-round opponents as the Hawkeyes went on to victory.

The Hawkeyes completed the sweep by taking down Nebraska 7-2. Dvorak, playing in the No. 1 position, lost her first match of the season dropping a tough 6-1, 7-6 decision. The Campbell, Boros, and Niemeier combination came through again as all three defeated their Cornhusker opponents.

Dvorak was a thorn in the Cornhusker's side all afternoon. She came back to team with junior Nikki Willette to defeat Annie Yang and Lisa Hart in doubles play, 6-3, 6-2.

Coach Micki Schillig was extremely pleased with the way the Hawkeyes played. "We came in expecting to win both matches. For some teams that could have meant a let down. But we came out and really concentrated and played really well," Schillig said.

Senior Cara Cashon said the Hawkeyes came out a little flat but picked up the pace right away.

"We underestimated Western Illinois a bit and they played well early but once we got things going we dominated the rest of the match," Cashon said.

MEN'S TENNIS

The Iowa men's tennis team opened its season strong returning three singles champions from the Husker Invitational over the weekend.

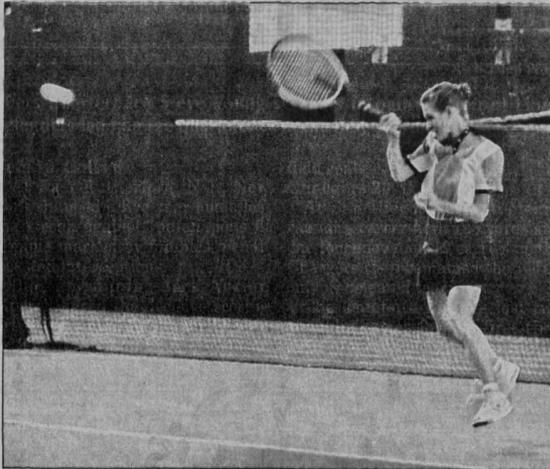

Juniors Marcus Eckstrand and Mattias Jonsson and sophomore Tom Derouin all won their single flight brackets.

The Hawkeyes also had senior Bob Zumph and sophomore Garrett Olson place second in their brackets for singles play.

All in all, Coach Steve Houghton said the Hawkeyes had a very strong weekend.

"They didn't keep track of team points in this tournament but if they did we would have come out on top," Houghton said.

"We came in here and had to face teams like Nebraska and Wichita State and we pretty much dominated the whole tournament."

Houghton said he was especially pleased with the team attitude and how well Iowa played in its first team match.

"This is the best effort we've had in an opening match. The guys were really trying to do well and it showed. They played excellent tennis," Houghton said.

WOMEN'S CROSS COUNTRY

South Florida pulled off an upset against a field of nine teams in the Maine Invitational Saturday.

South Florida captured four of the top 10 positions to defeat 25th-ranked Dartmouth. South Florida finished with a score of 47. Iowa finished fourth with 116.

"I was surprised to see a team that I've never heard of come out with a win. South Florida has a strong team and they had four or five runners finish in under 18 minutes," Iowa Coach Jerry Hassard said.

The Hawkeyes were once again plagued by injuries. Kiersten Pauling and Becky Coleman were unable to compete, but Hassard wasn't making any excuses.

"Our goal was to run with Dartmouth and Boston. We lost a little strength without Kiersten in the lineup, but a good team can rise to the occasion and we didn't do that," Hassard said.

Iowa was led by Erin Boland, who finished third with a personal best of 17:13.

-Shannon Stevens

FIELD HOCKEY

It took two overtimes, but No. 12 Iowa bowed to No. 5 Ohio State, 2-1, Sunday afternoon.

The loss was the Hawkeyes second of the weekend, after falling at Penn State, 2-0, on Friday.

Iowa's Anne Paré recorded the Hawkeye's only goal of the weekend, when she scored unassisted with 12:38 left in the second half against the Buckeyes. The goal knotted the game at 1-1, where it stayed for nearly two overtime periods.

With 2:42 to go in the second overtime, Ohio State's Dawn Peterson's shot attempt found the net, giving the Buckeyes the victory.

Overall, Iowa outshot the Buckeyes 16 to 14, taking nine penalty corners to Ohio State's four. Iowa goalkeeper Rachel Smith recorded 10 saves, as did Ohio State's Bev Porter.

Friday, Iowa created plenty of opportunities to score in the second half, but couldn't capitalize on them.

"I was happy with our intensity and emotion in the second half," Hawkeye coach Beth Beglin said after the game.

"Again, we're having trouble finishing the play. We had opportunities and didn't take advantage of them."

The colorful, extravagant '60s musical "Hair" continues its UI run through this weekend.

UI's 'Hair' lightweight but fun

Charles Monson
The Daily Iowan

A viewing of "Hair" 's final dress rehearsal revealed the show as a colorful, manic, lightweight snapshot of '60s radicalism framed by a series of catchy songs and gaudy visuals. It doesn't have much to say, but it is an entertaining look at a strange, giddy period in our nation's history.

"Hair" 's threadbare plot follows an "Everyteen" named Claude (Stephen Thorne), whose unfocused rebellion against parents and teachers is interrupted by the arrival of a draft notice ordering him to Vietnam. Writers Gerome Ragni and James Rado weren't really concerned with linear story progression; "Hair" is structured to evoke a mood rather than tell a tale. While the draft hangs over Claude's head throughout the show and provides material for the climax of each act, the better part of the musical is simply a taboo-shattering overview of the youth counterculture.

"Hair" touches on some weighty issues, but it does so in a facetious manner. Touchy topics like drugs, free love and racism are dealt with in songs that are simply lists of forbidden words ("Sodomy, fellatio, cunnilingus, masturbation ... ") or sarcastic rehashing of ethnic stereotypes. Collectively, these songs manage to immerse the audience members in the irreverent attitudes of the period without actually saying anything of substance. This superficiality may have been a deliberate move on Rado and Ragni's part, since "Hair" 's most subtle and poignant message lies in its references to the callousness and self-interest that tainted the idealism of that period.

Director Shelby Brammer and her crew have clearly acknowledged that "Hair" is a visceral show; the visual aspects of the production reflect a lot of thought and work. Costume designer Ellen McCartney wisely chose to give the lead characters relatively understated (but still dead-on authentic) outfits that wouldn't draw attention from their performances.

The background characters, however, are decked out in a wonderfully tacky array of lime-green bell-bottomed atrocities. Peter Sukovaty's flashy lighting designs are heavy on reds and greens and even incorporate some disco-ball action, while Eugene Anderson's slides add immediacy to a slightly dated script. The array of hellish images that come up when Claude ponders Vietnam also make it much easier for the audience to appreciate his plight.

Most of the actors seemed comfortable with their characters by Wednesday's rehearsal. All the leads gave crisp, energetic performances. Thorne's Claude is a likable (if somewhat spineless) fellow; Estlin Feigley's Berger nicely straddles the line between iconoclasm and obnoxiousness; and Julie Lynn Carozzi's Sheila is an interesting, three-dimensional character. The ensemble players also played their parts well; whether they were making out, taking up or dangling from the scaffolding of Joel Shepherd's ingeniously minimal set, almost all of them put forward the absolute lack of inhibitions necessary to make the material work.

"Hair" promises to be a pleasant, visually stimulating evening of theater. It doesn't hold any profound messages about the '60s, but it is detailed and thoughtful enough to bring the period to life for '90s audiences.

"Hair" plays in Mabie Theatre of the UI Theatre Building through Oct. 16. Call 335-2700 for ticket information.

Archers of Loaf's latest tour to zip through town tonight

Tom Vinson
The Daily Iowan

The past year has been a blur for the four North Carolina natives who make up the band Archers of Loaf.

Guitarists and vocalists Eric Bachman and Eric Johnson, bassist Matt Gentling and drummer Mark Price witnessed the rise of their debut album, Icky Mettle, to No. 18 on the College Music Journal charts. Their first single, "Web in Front," stayed on the CMJ charts for an unprecedented two months. Many fans and critics hailed the record as 1993's independent album of the year.

The Archers spent much of the next year on the road, recently completing their first European tour, which included performances in Germany, Scandinavia and England. Nonetheless, they found time to record two more singles and an EP, Archers of Loaf vs. the Greatest of All Time, which was released this past summer — again, to rave reviews.

Bachman claims the band continues to evolve its sound to avoid becoming bored. Their next full-length album, Vee Vee, is due in stores Jan. 23.

"I know this one's different than the first record. I can hear it myself in a sense that there's more guitar tones and drum tones. With Icky Mettle, we just plugged into a Crate amp, turned up to 10 and played through the songs," he said.

Band members describe their sound as guitar rock. Listening to it evokes visions of The Replacements or Superchunk. The sheer volume and interplay between the guitars is the definite focus of the band's music. The vocal harmonies, drums and bass have to pick their moments to shine through the wall of guitars.

Bachman cites several current bands as influences, including the Flaming Lips, Sebadoh and Sonic Youth, but he is quick to point out that the band listens to Henry Mancini and Frank Sinatra, too.

"Although I don't know if that comes through in our music," he said.

Archers of Loaf play with a passion that is clearly evident in the aggressive music but shouldn't be

Alias Records

Archers of Loaf will play tonight at Gabe's Oasis, 330 E. Washington St., as part of a U.S. tour following an extensive jaunt across Europe. "When you spend that long away from your country with no money, you kind of get disoriented and bummed out every once in a while," said guitarist/vocalist Eric Bachman.

overlooked in emotional lyrics such as "You're not the one who let me down, but thanks for offering."

"I write mostly about relationship stuff. It's probably the type of thing where it entertains me more than anybody else. I do spend more time than I'd like writing words, but if you're going to use words, you might as well spend time writing good ones," Bachman said.

Although the Archers of Loaf are grateful for their success, the political side of the music industry can be frustrating, especially for four college-town guys who just want to play music.

"I don't have any kind of indie-rock or punk-rock ethic, and I don't have any major-label support either. There's a lot of criticism of those things for all the right reasons. I don't think it matters. I think the music should matter, and it's a shame that these days it's the business things that matter more," Bachman said.

The band also takes any opportunity to pump other North Carolina bands who share their roots in the Chapel Hill, Raleigh and Greensboro music scenes.

"It's just a bunch of people who like to drink beer and play music. A lot of bands go see their friends' bands play. It's a shame only a few bands get the press. There's tons of bands that are equally as good; they just haven't gotten the business crap worked out yet," Bachman said.

The Archers of Loaf are currently on a three-week tour of the United States, which will bring them to Gabe's Oasis, 330 E. Washington St., tonight. Doors open at 9 p.m. Opening acts include Iowa City's Mold and New York's Roger Manning.

THIS WEEK ONLY

Memorial photo show honors former UI student

Carl Bonnett
The Daily Iowan

When Megan Mong's friends are asked how she would describe her work, they say she would probably look down at the floor, fumble with her words for a while and end up just showing people her photos and letting them figure it out for themselves. Now, the former UI student's photography will have to speak for itself. On Sept. 8, the 25-year-old Mong committed suicide.

A small group of Mong's friends and co-workers have organized a show of her work in the UI Art Building's Checkered Space. The show features three complete bodies of Mong's photography. In broad terms, the images relate to her family and herself. They consist of a group of color 8-millimeter stills from home movies of her family; an artist's photo book incorporating lyrics from The Throwing Muses; and a very dark, somewhat ambiguous group of black-and-white self-portraits.

The work is abstract, especially the movie stills, which have a sense of slow motion and uneasiness. One of Mong's co-workers and former photography teacher, John Bussey, said her self-portraits are "more about a mood than about documenting herself."

Another of her co-workers, Leandro Torres, described Mong's photos as visions that she was trying to make concrete. "She had sort of an end sight, but it was something she couldn't verbalize," he said.

Whether conscious and deliberate or not, Torres said Mong had a unifying theme running throughout her photographs. "The main thing that I get from (her work) is that it is about innocence and loss, loss of innocence," he said.

Another photography teacher of Mong's, UI art Professor Peter Feldstein, described her movie stills as "kind of vague ... sort of like the way you can't touch your dreams."

When looked at in light of Mong's suicide, the photos can take on a very haunting tone of self-analysis. Feldstein, however, does not see depression in Mong's work. "I thought (the photos) were rather fond of the past," he said. "I thought the work was very touching."

Bussey also hopes that Mong's work won't be interpreted in the wrong way. "The immediate sort of knee-jerk reaction of people when they look at (her work) might unfortunately be to read it with the veil of her suicide over it," he said. "If they do, that's a legitimate step, but a step beyond that is to realize that there could be other things besides that. I think there's much more besides that."

The Megan Mong exhibition will continue through Friday in the UI Art Building's Checkered Space.

'PRIVATE PARTS' MOVIE FORTHCOMING

Few attend Howard Stern film audition

Larry McShane
Associated Press

NEW YORK — Millions listen to Howard Stern. Far fewer want to act like him.

An open audition to portray the shock jock as a boy in his upcoming "Private Parts" movie drew only a handful of hopeful Howards Saturday.

"I definitely thought there'd be a lot more people," said 21-year-old Eric Tropiano of Nutley, N.J. "That's why I was here at 8 o'clock. I thought the line would be around the block."

But there was no queue outside the Palladium in Manhattan, where the marquee announced, "Private Parts — The Movie. Open Casting Call For Young Howard Stern."

Most of the would-be Howards — who were unflatteringly polite and well-mannered — shared at least one trait with their hero: a large nose.

"I like the big nose," said Jarred Weisfeld, 15, who skipped his cousin's bar mitzvah for a shot at Stern.

The movie version of the best-selling book will contain autobiographical scenes, and the producers were searching for a preteen, midteen and late teen Howard.

Auditions also were planned in Los Angeles, Chicago and Cleveland.

The possible association with Stern stigma — critics call him everything from racist to homophobic to misogynist — didn't scare off any of the aspiring actors.

"I would defend myself," promised Jay Galone of Bloomfield, N.J., a devoted Stern fan. "I like Howard. I listen to him every day. He's got a great personality, and he says what he means."

Nine Inch Nails fans brave rain for tickets

David Lee
Special to The Daily Iowan

Jonathan Meester/The Daily Iowan

While most of Iowa City was sleeping, at the bars or enjoying Homecoming-related events Friday night, a hardy crew gathered outside of the Union to celebrate a different event: the sale of Nine Inch Nails tickets Saturday morning.

The first person in line was 16-year-old Brynne Ray, who began her wait at 4:30 Friday afternoon.

"People kept walking by me with all my food and clothing, and they thought I was homeless," she said. "One guy who figured I was here for the tickets simply said to me, 'You're here already?'"

Joining Ray later was her friend Michelle Redlin, also 16. Redlin had to march in the Homecoming parade as part of the City High Marching Band.

Ray and Redlin had been driving by the Union since Wednesday to make sure that no one was lining up yet, they said. They began to panic, however, when they first saw the sign saying, "Nine Inch Nails ticket line begins here" on the east doors Friday morning.

Following Ray and Redlin in line were Cole Goepinger and Mike Sundberg of Boone, Iowa.

"We left Boone at about 2:45 and drove at about an average of 90 mph," said Sundberg. "And we did have a radar detector with us."

The first UI student in line, freshman Mary Morgan, was the lone member of her party. Friends provided her with supplies — including a pillow, a scarf, gloves, batteries for her CD headset and candles — throughout the night, and in return she bought their tickets. Morgan's friend Erica Slausen even traded shoes with her.

Nine Inch Nails fans brought food, blankets, candles and a couch to a weekend vigil outside the Union. Tickets for the group's Nov. 6 Iowa City performance went on sale Saturday at 10 a.m.; the line began forming at 4:30 p.m. Friday.

"Mary was wearing her leather boots," Slausen said. "I gave her my canvas shoes to wear, so her boots wouldn't get ruined in case it rained."

Other noticeable campers were Ryan Billheimer, Dave Luberda and Phil Maher, all freshmen. They brought a couch and were greeted by cheers when they arrived at midnight.

The couch turned out to be a hide-a-bed, but though they planned to sleep in comfort, they never did convert it to a bed.

"It was my couch, though," said Luberda. "If I wanted to go to sleep, (the other two) are off."

The night progressed with a partylike atmosphere. Ray and Redlin ordered pizza, and Sundberg read excerpts of a Vanilla Ice biography out loud, to the delight of the audience. Hacky-sackers and chess players were also present, and almost everyone stayed up the entire night.

"I'm surprised that no security guards or police officers have come out to check up on us," said Megan Romer, who came straight from watching "Swan Lake" at Hancher Auditorium to camp out.

Hardships did plague the group of devoted fans. Periodic rain dampened their supplies as well as their spirits, and although some people cheated near the Iowa River, the closest open bathroom was several blocks away.

The Union doors finally opened at 7 Saturday morning. Once inside, many of the group finally fell asleep.

"I felt so sorry for them," said Blake Davis, who showed up to buy tickets at about 8:30 a.m. "I knew it was supposed to rain that night, and I'm sure some of them weren't prepared for it."

"Some of the campers were wet, but most were happy to get in the door, get in line and get good tickets," said University Box Office manager Cindy Thrapp.

At 9:40 a.m., the crowd stood up and became restless as they heard noises from inside the box office. The moment they had been waiting for finally arrived when tickets went on sale 20 minutes later.

Although about half the tickets for the Nov. 6 show were still available Sunday night, few concertgoers will fare better than Ray and Redlin, who netted first-row seats. Redlin said their 18½-hour wait was definitely worth it, especially once they compared tickets with their less-determined friends.

"We had fun waiting," Redlin said, "and we got exactly what we wanted."
