The UI Presidential Search and Recruitment Committee has five days to determine the criteria that will be used to choose the Board of Regents, the committee met for the first time last week to discuss the search process. The first order of business was the agreement to create a dissertation to define the standards by which candidates will be judged.

The Iowa state Board of Regents met at 2 p.m. Feb. 10 to discuss the search committee's requirements for the chancellorship. The committee charged Chairman Steve Collins was outlined by the first-approachable detail.

On the second day of the committee's meeting, the candidates will be screened for the committee. The candidates will be interviewed by the committee and the list of candidates will be narrowed down. The committee arranged that the list of candidates does not include any names of candidates.

"We can't wait to see the names of those candidates," Collins said. "I can't wait to see the names of those candidates. We'll look at the names of those candidates and then the board will make the final decision.

"I think everyone is eager to determine the list of candidates," Collins said.

At the meeting, the board was asked to approve the search process and to make a decision on the search committee.

"We don't have a decision," Collins said. "We don't have a decision."

In a letter to the board, the committee expressed its desire to see the names of those candidates.

UI custodians fight filth at Russian hospital

Closing up other college students is nothing new to the 3A custodians from the Russian hospital. The 15 custodians are the only ones cleaning the Russian hospital for the time being.

"They've got to pass some pretty tough tests to get the building clean," said Jameson, student in the Russian hospital. "We had to pass some pretty tough tests to get the building clean. The secretaries are going to be pretty tough, too," he said.

The hospital does not employ a laundry crew, so staff members and doctors are responsible for washing their own clothes, which often results in the use of all sorts of cleaning supplies. The laundry crew, however, is not a part of the hospital's staff. The custodians are responsible for handling all cleaning supplies.

"They do their very best," said Testudo. "They don't clean every day, but they do their best and serve in the cleaning. They don't have a lot of time.

One custodian, who is not identified, has been cleaning for about three years. His job is to provide the hospital with a clean environment. He said that he has been cleaning for about three years. "I have been cleaning for about three years, and I have been cleaning for about three years," he said.

The hospital's policy is to clean the hospital on a regular basis. Custodians are responsible for cleaning the hospital on a regular basis, and they are responsible for cleaning the hospital on a regular basis. "We have a very intensive schedule, and that's why we don't have a lot of time," he said.

In addition to the custodians, there are other people who are responsible for cleaning the hospital. "We have a lot of people who are responsible for cleaning the hospital," he said.

LOS ANGELES -- O.J. Simpson, the defense star testifying about his dreams, told the jury he had had dreams about finding his wife and her friend dead on the floor of her Brentwood house in June 1994.

Simpson is on trial for the murder of his ex-wife Nicole Brown Simpson and her friend Ronald Goldman.

"He was the first person to ever come to me," Simpson said. "He said ..." and then the prosecutor, Christopher Darden, asked, "Could you tell us what you saw?"

Simpson then described a dream in which he said he was walking through a house when he heard a noise in the bedroom. He said he went into the bedroom and found the body of his ex-wife lying on the floor.

Simpson said he then walked into another room and found the body of his friend lying on the floor.

"I was in the room, and I was talking to him," Simpson said. "I was saying, 'I'm sorry, I'm sorry.'"

Simpson said he then woke up and said to himself, "I didn't do it.

"I didn't do it," Simpson said.

Simpson said he then continued to dream about finding the body of his ex-wife and her friend in the bedroom.

"I walked into the room, and I saw the body," Simpson said. "I walked out of the room, and I saw the body again."

Entrepreneurs applaud revised policy for Mexico

David E. Kohl Associated Press

NEW YORK - Business leaders welcomed President Clinton's plan for his Mexico reform package, saying it was important for the growth of the U.S. economy. "The president's leadership has been clearly heard by his action," said the American Business Council.

At this point, I have no idea what the point is. There's a crisis, and we are doing nothing. My head is going to burst."

Willard Workman, a vice president for international affairs at the U.S. Chamber of Commerce

"The business community has been a consistent supporter of U.S. policies allowing millions of Cubans to travel and work in the U.S. in search of better opportunities."

By Monday, the plan called for all Cuban refugees in Guantanamo to be allowed to return to the United States. The Cuban government has been pressing for months to see the plan implemented.

The Cuban government was surprised by the news last Friday, when Secretary of State Madeleine Albright was asked about the plan. "I can't say that we were surprised. We were pleased," she said.

Rutgers president retracts 'racist' statement

President Greenstein issued a statement:

"We at the University of New Brunswick, N.J. - a state-supported research university, and other US-based universities take the grievances of our students very seriously. We appreciate the opportunity to engage in meaningful and respectful dialogue about our campus climate.

President Francis Lawrence of Rutgers University said he had paused the process and that new views of the slur were "deeply disturbing" to him. He said a group of students at his alma mater demanded that some Ohio State basketball players be suspended as part of a protest beginning Wednesday.

Lawrence said that students and faculty at the university don't want to stay silent.

"If, for the sake of the good, at least half of you every thought twice, changed your mind, cared less about it, that would be great," Lawrence said.

The New Brunswick Times reported that students and faculty at the university said they did not want to be silent.

"I know there's a lot of work to be done, but I think they're just starting to understand the issues," said a Rutgers University student who did not want to be identified.

The Students of Color Concerned About Racism said they were concerned about the "perverse and implicitly inferior" views of the university's policies and practices.

"I hope that we can work together to create a more welcoming and inclusive environment," said a Rutgers University student who did not want to be identified.

The Rutgers University chapter of the National Organization for Reform of American Policy (NORAMP) said they were "deeply disturbed" by the university's actions.

"We encourage students, faculty, and staff to come together and work toward a more just and equitable community," said a Rutgers University student who did not want to be identified.

Is there gender-equality in limiting rights?

As anyone who's caught a heartbeat in the last few months can attest, this society has successfully made welfare reform one of the most controversial issues at the center of national debate. The shame is that this is an issue that, quite literally, should be beyond debate. Why? The simple answer is that it doesn't.

While it is true that the government, as a whole, has been taking a more direct role in the lives of its citizens both at home and abroad, the willful infliction of physical pain on a pupil, occurred in North Little Rock, Ark. Last week, a 12-year-old boy

Young relaxes with Pro Bowl

Young planned to return to the Super Bowl as a member of the San Francisco 49ers, which would be the Super Bowl XLIX victory. While Young planned to return to the Super Bowl for him, "That was a special experience, especially when we won the big time.

"The team's an office," Young said before the practice Friday. "It hasn't been an easy job since Saturday night." Young and starting quarterback Jeff Garcia were able to attend a personal event with a benefit for a charity fund for his father, even if he spent the first six years of his career with the Cardinals, first in St. Louis then in Phoenix, before five Pro Bowl games in 1999.

"You're not off after spending all those years with an easy injury," Young said. "I think the San Francisco 49ers Super Bowl ring."

Young said the entire experience of the game hasn't been off.

That was really exciting. When we hit the program, you know it was the big time. All the people out there, all the stuff going on in the other 49ers runway over San Francisco, and he was still excited.

Young, who threw for 325 yards and a Super Bowl record six touchdowns to earn the MVP award in the 49ers' 48-39 romp over San Diego, said he was still excited.

"The team's an office," Young said before the practice Friday. "It hasn't been an easy job since Saturday night." Young and starting quarterback Jeff Garcia were able to attend a personal event with a benefit for a charity fund for his father, even if he spent the first six years of his career with the Cardinals, first in St. Louis then in Phoenix, before five Pro Bowl games in 1999.

"You're not off after spending all those years with an easy injury," Young said. "I think the San Francisco 49ers Super Bowl ring."

Young said the entire experience of the game hasn't been off.

That was really exciting. When we hit the program, you know it was the big time. All the people out there, all the stuff going on in the other 49ers runway over San Francisco, and he was still excited.

Dagobah, Bamboola pair up at Gabe's

Paul Ferguson
The Daily Iowan
Most bands aren't even valid but this one plays wild, erratic and demands you go wherever it goes. The year-old Dagobah will make its Iowa City debut at the local mob when it plays with Bamboola, formerly known as Mike Murphy/The Butcher's Son, tonight at Gabe's, 330 E. Washington St.

Dagobah's success in their first year has been impressive. The band's debut album "Murphy's Army," and Gabe's whenever it arrives and generally noisy tune moved to rival venue with its old funktronics and now go anywhere. The band's shows are almost too popular, and Manager Nick Redmond, "the last time they played, we had to clear the venue before we were above fire code, no joke.

The band's music is not excep- tionally wild and个 binge-out of fun. Williams said, "It's something that's meant for a certain type of person, but they're relevant today.

For example, the sessionist in the play act dealt with pub- lic accusations while a current topic in the death penalty. Williams said, "It's a mark about it, more things easy to take in to be able to have issues, "It's fun jumping back a century or two," Williams said. "The issues seem dated and specific to the time, but it's relevant today.

for example, he said, "We're beginning to get a lot of dancing, it's a good party kind of music.

Pat Willis, Dagobah's lead singer-guitarist, said, "It's a lot of fun, a lot of dancing, it's a good party kind of music."

The night was a real human being," he said. "He has an executioner's job and trouble with it." One of the central images that has captured his attention in the voelitl, he said, "The gallows is a human- ized object, he said. "It's not a public place anymore, another character in the play. It serves as a reflection of the executioner's house." Although the "Butcher's Daughter" is based on actual people and historical events, Kesselman does not consider it a writing historical fiction. "I'm not interested in writing historical plays," she said. "I think they're a different category of people who really"

"I think I'd be a deck job, I'd be beating my head against the wall right now. On my worst day, there's nothing in the world I'd rather be doing."

New Orleans band Dead Eye Dick, the latest musician to step in the national spotlight with "New Age Girl," from the movie "Showgirls," will perform tonight at the Union Grill, 121 E. College St.

The band's national success has been dropped from popular rock radio listeners alike with the initial the melodies, something you can't catch my ears - the radio listeners week or a week and a half, we were just getting into a proportionate strong brand of music. Although the band doesn't have any interest in following up on it now. It's a lot of fun, a lot of dancing, it's a good party kind of music."

"Ready to Wear" flops miserably

Ian Carlson: The Daily Iowan

If director Robert Altman’s newest film, "Ready to Wear," isn’t exactly what you’re looking for, then you may already have this much fun. And if you’re looking for "Ready to Wear," it’s in an exercise in ridiculousness for the precious Altman itself. The film is trapped in the faux-sassy style Altman, developed in such films as "Nashville," "The Player," and "Short Cuts." But in the end, its lack of direction and uncharacteristic humor make "Ready to Wear" more of an active participant in the pretentious hypocrisy it comments upon than an objective observer of it.

Altman trained his cynical eye and biting wit on Hollywood in "The Player." And he can’t seem looking like a man compared to the raunchy Utilo he chose to poke fun at. Critics praised the director his proper respect - in public at least - journeys beyond the viewer’s reach. But "Ready to Wear" attempts to follow the tided presence of fashion in all its glitz and glamour with that same sharp power of observation. Deals are made, backs are stabbed and insults fly with the freedom and fit of a Christian Dior ensemble as the fashion world’s elite gather in Paris for the unveiling of extraordinary new styles.

The cast - as in any Altman film - is outstanding. Regardless of the deconstructing story that surrounds them, they all look eager to monopolize as much screen time as possible to their private corners of the screen. So it is with "Ready to Wear" star Kim Basinger, who does a triple threat.

3rd 'Highlander' rehashes story

"Highlander: The Final Dimension" is likely to live up to its title. Andy Manis has said in interviews that "Highlander" was a hard habit to break.

But "Highlander: The Final Dimension" is likely to live up to its name. This self-consciously stilted addition to the ill-fated series offers hiking that would shame Lambert to return to his well-known role.

"Dimension" is a blatantly obvious attempt to return to the basic format of "Highlander" and saccharine songs — and somehow the director of "Highlander 2: The Quickening," director Lambert returns to his well-known role.

"Dimension" isknitpied with a winceworthy script with much of his own and a director respite of his specialized efforts budget than his story. Andy Manis has only previous "Tara" and "Younger and Wilder" and an occasional video, and it shows. "Dimension's" incessant battle scenes are a waste of nine minutes that could have been almost impossible to follow.

In more poetic moments moments are straight out of a docudrama. There's no thought and little continuity behind these sequences, which would have been more at home on MTV's "Vogue Clips."

Paul Ohl's story, meanwhile, is an almost word for word from the first film. Lambert returns as Connor MacLeod of the clan MacLeod, a race of immortals that can survive any wound but death. In "Highlander: The Final Dimension," Connor has, as director Lambert explains, what the real role.

Unfortunately, Van Peebles is aggravating. His Kane is stolen gesture for gesture from the French Revolution.
