Even the Presidental Search and Screening Advisory Committee isn’t sure how much experience the next UI president should have in the health sciences, but some members of the UI community are eager to find one.

Steve Collins, chair of the search committee, said he received a number of names Tuesday from people concerned about an incursion of the presidential search committee into the health sciences. The committee approved a list of UI investigators Monday.

Cullors voted from that same committee would be eliminated from the presidential search because they weren’t health sciences doctors or nurses, he said. However, strong presidential candidates will not be rejected only because their

Credit hours bill receives backlash from those it would help

Metro & Iowa

Iowa House bill that would remove the college graduation requirement for some UI students may soon be heard in committee - for the second time. The proposal underestimates the students at the state's flagship campus in Iowa City, and is aimed at helping those who have already left school to get back on track.

The bill, House File 18, was drafted last January by some of the same UI students who spoke against its predecessor last year. It would eliminate the college requirement for UI students who have taken a certain number of credits but haven't otherwise finished their degrees.

"The bill is not going anywhere last year, and I'm getting the feeling it won't this year," Rep. Mary Mascher, D-Iowa City, said. "We do know how many people this will affect.

Other targets of Brunkhorst's bill are UI Senate Republicans who oppose the bill. They have done the same thing for major and minor are different.

"It is easier as a society to talk about these things," she said. "It is still full of victim blaming. When the people to talk about their personal experiences are met with, they're not right to recognize rape.

"It is easier as a society to talk about sexual assault because it is so much in the media," Mascher said. "People talk to their personal experiences. People grow up in the sexual assault and survivors who maybe it's not right to recognize rape.

"We are all old friends of radiation, and it is hard to figure out what is right," Mascher said. "It is why people keep going the critical fluids. Just because we are in the public eye does not mean we are immune to the consequences of any actions we take.

UHSC study shows hormones help reduce heart disease risks

Dennis Alexander

The low-density lipoproteins can be described as a special form of cholesterol. In the 1950s, a Florida group led by Dr. Ancel Keys showed that people who ate a diet high in fat and cholesterol were more likely to develop heart disease. The Florida group's work was confirmed by other researchers in the late 1950s and early 1960s, who showed that low-density lipoproteins are correlated with heart disease.

The Post-Menopausal Estrogen Replacement Study, a landmark clinical trial involving 4,500 post-menopausal women, was designed and carried out by the American Medical Association. Estrogens and these types of progestogens, when given alone or in combination affect the cholesterol levels of the women, said Dr. Susan Johnson, who reported the study's results in the February issue of the New England Journal of Medicine. The study involved 1,500 women who took estrogen, 1,600 who took estrogen and progestogen, and 1,400 who took placebo. The women were followed for 5 years, and at the end of the study there was no significant difference between the three groups in the incidence of heart disease.

The study was designed to test whether estrogen therapy reduces the risk of heart disease in post-menopausal women. The results show that estrogen therapy does not reduce the risk of heart disease in post-menopausal women. The study was designed and carried out by the American Medical Association. Estrogens are a special form of cholesterol. They are produced by the ovaries and are used by the body to build other hormones. They are also used by the body to build other hormones.

Quality of tap water irks groups

President names choice for CIA director

WASHINGTON (AP) — In a 3½-year battle for control that spanned from the White House to the Senate, President Clinton chose Thursday in a White House ceremony an intelligence officer whose track record led him to the职位 at the CIA.

In an address to employees of Central Intelligence Community headquarters, where the CIA's director will presumably move, President Clinton said: "We need a man who understands the importance of the mission, who is capable of leadership and has demonstrated the ability to handle crisis situations. We need a man who has integrity and who can work with Congress and the executive branch. We need a man who is committed to the mission of the CIA and to the protection of our country."

The selection Thursday of James A. Woolsey Jr. for the post of director of the CIA was announced by an administration official, who said the appointment will be announced later today. The official said Woolsey will not be available for comment until the announcement is made.

Woolsey, 64, is the former head of the National Intelligence Council, which advises the president on intelligence matters. He has also served as director of the Central Intelligence Agency and as director of the National Security Council.

The choice of Woolsey was widely praised by heath officials, who said he has a proven record of accomplishments. "We're thrilled with the choice," said Dr. Henry A. Kissinger, who served as director of the CIA during the Nixon administration. "He has a wealth of experience and we're confident that he will lead the CIA in the right direction.

The selection of Woolsey was also greeted with enthusiasm by the United Nations, which has been critical of the CIA's role in the intelligence community. "We welcome the appointment of a man with a proven track record," said UN Secretary-General Boutros Boutros-Ghali. "We're confident that he will lead the CIA in the right direction.

MEDIA GRASPING AT STRAWS

On Monday, President Clinton presented his final word on welfare reform. It was a stylized essay on poor people and was promptly branded by the media as a "take it or leave it" budget plan. In short, it was a misdirected, anti-poverty fraud.

Ironically, the administration was already adept at spinning successful welfare programs. The most recent example is the Clinton-sponsored "workfare" program. It was the same one that was written off as a failure last year when the defection rate from workfare was not high enough.

For example, Bruce Steinberg noted in the New York Times that the workfare program was a "good program" because it was "working." However, the program was not working because of the high unemployment rate, which is still very high.

In summary, the government's plan is to trade the poor against the rich in order to maintain the illusion of a balanced budget. The plan is not a solution to the poverty problem, but a solution to the political problem of how to maintain the illusion of a balanced budget.

Luis St. Germain, co-founder of Icebreakers cards.

"We didn't make money from the first day, but we have a place become in our market. Our goal now is to continue to grow, not just survive," he said.

However, some are skeptical about the success of the business. "I'm not sure if this is going to work," one person said.

St. Germain said, "We think people would get a bigger response to the Ice Breakers cards." However, he said that they are still in the testing phase.

"It gives people a chance to be creative and express themselves," he said.

Weiss said the hit was "due to a misunderstanding."

"The concept of the card is to promote the team and the players," he said.

Several other religious officials have said that they would support the use of the card. "We are not against anything that promotes peace and understanding," said Father John B. Jones, a Catholic priest.

"We believe that people can use the card to promote peace," he said.

"It's a great idea," said Rabbi Steven R. Greenberg, a Reform rabbi.

"I think people would just be interested in the card," he said.

"The cards have been popular in the break room," said St. Germain.

When she taped in the high jump, Becky Venues set Illinois record with a leap of 6-10. The distance barely missed her personal best. Her third time this season.

Grinnell coach Jerry Hassard said Kaza is a classic competitor who is already making her presence felt despite lacking some confidence. "This is a really big moment for her," Kaza said. "I'm not as confident as the other kids, but I know I can do it."

BASEBALL STRIKE

Sides remain deadlocked

Ronald Brum
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — They couldn’t get the World Series [last year] because they couldn’t get a deal. And this year they won’t work out a deal over the players because the National League couldn’t make them bridge with the strike. "It’s a shame.

After all the work and all the lobbying, the two sides realized the game of baseball is deadlocked.

On this, the 10th day of the strike, 13 1/2 hours after the commissioner asked the players and owners to have several baseball players "go out to the stands," the strike remained.

The next few days, believe it or not, the demands of the baseball league officials and the players who met in a closed session yesterday to try to get a deal were even more divergent than ever.

The commissioner’s plan would give the players a 54% increase in salaries after the third year of the five-year deal. But the owners rejected that. The lead players’ offer was for only a 37% increase.

"We’re ready to go," League President Bill Veeck said from Chicago this week after the league’s nine previous meetings. "But we’re still waiting for a deal."

Players have said they would lead the country this week and set the league up for baseball. But the league says it doesn’t have a plan yet.

"The players have offered to go to the league if the players would agree to make a deal," Mr. Veeck said.

"We’ve worked hard for more than three hours now, and we’ve come a long way," Players’ Union Director Lee Strother said.

"We’re not happy, but we’ve been very patient with this strike," Strother said yesterday. "It’s a long strike, but we’re coming to the end of the line."

"The players have offered to go to the league if the players would agree to make a deal," Mr. Veeck said.

TULSA, Okla. — Drake's basketball team is turning up for the meeting Saturday night.

That's how coach Rod Washington views a second-round showdown with the University of Arkansas at Little Rock, with the winner advancing to face the defending Big Eight Conference champions in the National Invitation Tournament.

"We're going to come ready to play," Washington said. "They're going to have to be ready for us too."... "They're a very good team, definitely one of the better teams in the SEC," Washington said.

Drake and Arkansas (21-7) square off at 7 p.m. (Central) Saturday in Little Rock, where the winner will face No. 6 Arkansas in the semifinals on Monday.

PISCATAWAY, N.J. — The Rutgers-Rutgers game, part of a weekend twin bill at the Rutgers University Athletics Center, will be played on Tuesday instead of Sunday because of the Rutgers-Rutgers game.

"Both athletic directors and coaches made it clear they wanted the game rescheduled and every effort was made to find a date that would accommodate both teams," Linda Bruns, Atlantic 10 Conference commissioner.

The game was at halftime Wednesday night when it was halted by a student protest over a remark by university President Franck Lawrence regarding race and test scores.

Conference commissioner Linda Bruns said the game would be rescheduled on March 5 at 2 p.m.

"Rutgers-Newark's men's basketball team will be playing Hampton on Tuesday, March 7, at 7 p.m. in Newark, N.J.," Lawrence said.

Maryland celebrates upset

David Glassberg

COLLEGE PARK, Md. — It wasn’t until after Maryland had defeated North Carolina — handily. The Terrapins ended their seven- game slide against the Tar Heels by getting 21 points apiece from Trevor Gaskins and Charles Mitchell, with the Terrapins winning 96-73 Tuesday night.

"I thought we could win but I thought we’d have to play really well," Maryland coach Gary Williams said. "And I thought we’d still play well, given the pressure we were under."

Maryland (18-4) beat North Carolina (19-3), which had the nation’s third-longest winning streak. The Terrapins trailed 31-24 at halftime and then scored the first 16 points of the second half, prompting North Carolina to call timeout.

"Either they were running a 2-3 or a 2-1 zone,\" Williams said. "Either they were running a 2-3 or a 2-1 zone.\" But North Carolina had no answer for Maryland’s quickness.

"I wish we could get going again," Williams said. \"Either they were running a 2-3 or a 2-1 zone.\"

Maryland’s 96 points were the most in an ACC regular-season game since 1986 over the Heels.

AP answers fans’ questions on strike

CONGRESS AND BASEBALL

Associated Press

Several questions and answers on congressional involvement in trying to end the baseball strike:

Q: Why do some members of Congress back players in the strike?

A: Many say they are, first of all, concerned that they give a mixed message to fans, including season-ticket holders, patriotic women and others, by being heard that only Congress can save the 1995 season.

Q: Really? How will they do that?

A: Lawmakers could move a bill favoring players by granting temporary antitrust exemption, enabling regular players on the field, and persuading owners who would have Congress for failing to settle the strike.

Q: Congress never passes legislation in a sporting event.

A: No. There is a nontraditional congressional strategy to end the strike.

Q: There’s a two-tiered strategy, based from ending the strike, and second from changing the long-term economic relationships between the owners, players and the fans.

A: There is a feeling that only Congress can save the 1995 season; the feeling that only Congress can save the 1995 season; the feeling that only Congress can save the 1995 season.

Q: Beyond that, they give a number to communities, interesting that only Congress can save the 1995 season; the feeling that only Congress can save the 1995 season.

CHAMPAIGN, Ill. — Sophomore center Jereme Anderson scored 24 points in leading Illinois to its 45- and 72-point victories over Penn State on Wednesday evening at Assembly Hall.

In the first game, Penn State held Illinois to 40 points, but the Illini used a 17-0 run in the last 1:46 to win 72-40. Anderson hit 10-of-15 shots from the field and also had eight rebounds in the victory.

In the second game, the Nittany Lions shot just 33 percent from the field and scored only 40 points. The Illini won 45-33 despite foul trouble for Anderson and former Illini guard Deron Williams. Williams (15-3 overall, 4 Big Ten games) scored 13 points and 11 assists in 40 minutes, but he also had eight turnovers.

"I told them before the game that they would be a much more mature team," said Illinois head coach Lou Henson. "They'd be able to handle us, and that's why we're playing a lot more than two games."

Looking at his talent and lack of experience, it's hurtful."

"We're a lot better than we're showing," said Illinois guard Steve Tulley, who hit 10-of-15 shots from the field and also had eight rebounds in the victory. "They're just not there, not there at all."

Tulley had 20 points off the bench to help the Illini overcome the Nittany Lions' defensive efforts.

Two dance pieces make splash at UI

Value, intrigue, image and the oceanic curiosity of nature are the elements in Susan Marshall & Company's "Operations at an Event," one of two works she and her company will be performing at Hancher Auditorium on Friday night.

Based on the 19th and '60s press photographs of Arthur Polt - a hero known as "Captain" from Dallas - for reasons which amount to more than a passing reference at the start of the piece - this piece explores the human aspect of the donnee. "It's about that uncommunicable feeling, not knowing when to get involved, when to lead," said Lake Gehart, a graduate of the UI Department of Theatre and one of three UI students involved in the performance. "It's like watching two people fight and wondering if they're really fighting, and if they are, should you help?"

Set to the music of Harvey Gersh, this work incorporates video prop-gress of Polt's photographs onto the dance floor. "It's really funny," said Gehart.
"Sometimes we are using don't just show the bead hair, she shows the people in the background looking on, and that is what this piece is about - "how we watch each other."

E! adds coverage of O.J. Simpson fanfare

MC Spader Monday, Aug 28, 1995

The Iowa "The O.J. Simpson story" began to build its audience Monday night as E! added coverage of O.J. Simpson fanfare.

Superstar stands trial on charges of murder of ex-wife and her friend.

O.J. Simpson and his attorneys Robert Shapiro, Johnnie Cochran, Johnnie Cochran, and Josephine Bambury have had some success with the "true crime" element of the Simpson trial.

Nicole Sullivan, when the producers were asked to do a show about her as host of Entertainment Tonight, she couldn't bring herself to do it. She was too close to the case and the thought of doing it was too overwhelming.

IF YOU DON'T GET IT, GET IT.™
A few THINGS you should know about CREDIT:

BEFORE you sign this application you should make sure you fully understand what you're getting into. A credit card can be a useful FINANCIAL TOOL that can make life easier to live. However, if used irresponsibly, it can become a tremendous burden. With this in mind, it's important to ASK yourself some QUESTIONS before signing anything.

Is there an annual fee? How much interest will be charged? What are the rewards for using this card? In addition to asking questions, make sure you READ everything on the application. UNDERSTANDING the terms of your credit agreement is important and will provide many of the answers you seek.

Finally the best ADVICE is to use common sense. You know how much you can afford to repay and how long it will take. For example, COMMON SENSE dictates if you only pay the minimum due each month it will take longer to pay off the balance.

Having a credit card is a commitment from which YOU can BENEFIT. We urge you to take the time to make sure you're prepared for this COMMITMENT.
