Presidential search nears end

Search-related costs expected to be $150,000

Shawn Cole
The Daily Iowan

UI administrators expect to have spent nearly $150,000 by the time the search for a new UI president is wrapped up.

As the search for a replacement for UI interim president Peter Nathan moves forward, the costs continue to rise, and are expected to surpass both the UI's 1987-1988 presidential search for Rawlings and the University of Northern Iowa's recently completed presidential search.

Former UI President Hunter Rawlings III left the UI in July to become president of Cornell University in Ithaca, N.Y.

UI Presidential Search Procedure

The procedure the Presidential Search and Screen Advisory Committee will follow to choose a new president:

■ Approximately six candidates will visit the UI campus over the next several weeks. The names of the candidates will be released shortly before each visit.

■ While on campus, candidates will interview with almost 190 members of the UI community and participate in three symposia open to the public.

■ After the on-campus interviews, the search committee will pick four finalists and forward their names, unranked, to the Iowa state Board of Regents.

■ The regents will then select the president, and negotiate the president's contract and salary.

The Daily Iowan

The search for former UI president Hunter Rawlings III's replacement enters the final stages next week when on-campus interviews will begin.

However, many UI students may have a hard time seeing the first candidate. The candidate is scheduled to meet with students from 8:45-9:30 a.m. — not a time students seem most likely to be out and about.

"It does seem like a bad time, because I know a lot of students have 8:30 classes or are in bed," said UI senior Tom Miller. "I have early classes. (It would be better) later on, like around lunch time or a little later because that's when students are usually up and about."

Steve Collins, chairman of the Presidential Search and Screen Advisory Committee, said the first three of "approximately six" candidates will visit the UI campus next week for two days each.

The first candidate will visit Sunday and Monday, Collins said, with two more next week and the rest in the next two or three weeks.

is being maintained, and all Collins would say of the first candidate was she or he was "a very strong candidate."

"Maintaining confidentiality is absolutely critical in attracting the very best people," he said, "especially when you are talking about a person who is in a leadership position. Early disclosure of their willingness to consider the president's job here could jeopardize their current position or diminish their effectiveness."

Friday afternoon the candidate's name will be released, and information about the finalists will be available on the World Wide Web at <http://www.uiowa.edu/pres.search>, Collins said.

Candidates will interview with almost 190

WASHINGTON — Eulogizing three fallen diplomats, President Clinton vowed Wednesday to carry on a struggle for peace in Bosnia and ordered a revamped U.S. diplomatic delegation to return to Europe this weekend.

The group, headed by Assistant Secretary of State Richard Holbrooke, will meet with Bosnia's president and allied governments in Paris, then go on to the Balkans in midweek. They will be carrying a seven-point U.S. plan aimed at ending the war in the former Yugoslav

Speaking at a memorial ceremony at Ft. Myer, Va., for three U.S. officials killed in a road accident Saturday near Sarajevo, the Bosnian capital, the president declared: "Let us resolve to carry on their struggle with the strength, determination and caring they brought to their families, their work, and their very grateful nation."

Clinton awarded Robert Frasure, Joseph Kurzel and S. Nelson Drew posthumous medals for their work in the Balkans. "Each represented the finest qualities of American citizenship," he said.

The president spoke separately with their families before the service. In his public remarks, he said to them, "The American people mourn your loss."

SEX SCANDAL 'DESTROYED' CAREER

Facing prison, Rep. may quit

CHICAGO — Rep. Mel Reynolds is considering resigning from Congress as he faces a prison sentence for sexual misconduct and a continuing federal investigation of his finances.

Reynolds was convicted Tuesday of criminal sexual assault, which carries a mandatory minimum four-year sentence, for having sex with a former campaign worker when she was 16 and 17. He also was found guilty of asking her to get him lewd photographs of a 15-year-old girl and trying to sabotage the investigation of the case.

Reynolds would not comment Wednesday and his attorneys did not return phone calls while preparing to appeal his case. Prosecutors want him jailed during the appeal process, but have not said what sentence they will seek.

The conviction does not automatically remove Reynolds from his House seat. But a Reynolds confi-

"He can hang on and try to weather an ethics committee investigation or inquiry, but he doesn't want to go through that," said Nate Clay, who said Reynolds called him several times Wednesday. "He didn't want to put his family through that."

"He does not want to prolong the agony and the pain by fighting it out in Congress, so he's going to resign," Clay told the AP.

Other observers questioned why Reynolds would be so quick to leave his $133,600 yearly salary.

Students reflect fondly on the good old days

Whether it was a roommate without bladder control or a late night streak through a residence hall, almost every UI student has a memory of their first week of school.

"I walked out of the bathroom in my dorm and went to pass out in my bed. When I woke up in the morning I was in some other bed sleeping with another guy. I still don't know who the hell that was, man."

UI junior Kerry Koberg

Although there may be a few lucky students whose first week of college was a smooth and effortless transition from high school, most freshmen probably dealt with a lot of embarrassment and getting lost more than once.

With this year's first week of school nearing its end, some UI students reminisced about their fond freshman memories of their first week of college.

UI junior Kerry Koberg remembered his first night after visiting Iowa City's fine pubs.

"I walked out of the bathroom in my dorm and went to pass out in my bed," he said. "When I woke up in the morning I was in some other bed sleeping with another guy. I still don't know who the hell that was, man."

UI sophomore Shannon Tillyer recounted the scenic walks she endured when she first started school.

"I didn't know where any of the exits were out of Hillcrest, so I ended up having to walk through the guys' wing every day," Tillyer said. "That was scary."

Many upperclassmen agreed their opening weeks of school

"Getting any assistance to them is going to be impossible, and we don't know how long they can last out there in those conditions," Ron Redmond, a spokesman for the U.N. refugee agency in Geneva, said Wednesday.

The Clinton administration demanded an immediate end to the expulsions. But Zaire — which had warned the United Nations of the expulsions — said it would continue to force the refugees back across the border, despite warnings of an epidemic similar to that which killed 50,000 refugees in Goma last year.

Zaire officials have complained the 1.8 million refugees on its soil — more than any other country — have disrupted normal life in border areas and caused considerable environmental damage.

Zaire also decided to expel the refugees because it felt they

Thousands of refugees were expelled from a camp near the Zairean town of Bukavu, Zaire, in central Africa, borders nine neighbors and has 1.8 million refugees, more than any other country in the world. It began repatriating Hutu refugees back to Rwanda and Burundi last weekend.

New plan to assess Big Apple's mental health

Larry McShane
Associated Press

NEW YORK — Crime, dirt, crowding. You'd have to be crazy to live in New York, right? Maybe the answer will come after the Big Apple puts itself on the psychiatrist's couch.

New York plans a $40,000 study to assess the mental health of a city synonymous with madness to millions of Americans.

"I think it's a very sensible thing to do," Mayor Rudolph Giuliani said of the city-financed plan Tuesday. Officials believe New York will be the nation's first city to subject itself to such an examination.

Giuliani, of course, is the same man who detailed millions of dollars in harrowing budget cuts during a February speech that closed with these words: "Happy Valentine's Day."

Clearly, this is a town in need of therapy.

"If you want to improve the mental health of New Yorkers, get a good bullpen for the Yankees," said Mitchell Moss, head of the New York University Urban Research Center, who dismissed the study as "the height of mental health madness."

The New York Post, reflecting on the study, ran a story detailing a week's worth of city-style insanity — everything from the latest on New York's crumbling schools to a pair of bus hijackings on a weekend afternoon.

"We don't need anybody to tell us we're crazy," its headline announced.

New York is where former Mayor Ed Koch became a hero by lambasting critics as "wackos" and "insane," where a mental patient dubbed "The Wild Man" became a pseudo-celebrity by terrorizing Manhattan's Upper West Side.

Sounds like this study is a no-brainer, huh?

"I really couldn't say anything about that," said Allen Wright of the city Department of Mental Health.

Is Wright still sane after nine years in New York? "I'd like to think so," he replied.

"If you want to improve the mental health of New Yorkers, get a good bullpen for the Yankees."

Mitchell Moss, head of the New York University Urban Research Center,

The folks involved in the study make it clear that the city's psychiatric well-being is no laughing matter.

"The headlines make it sound like a joke, but there's a whole variety of circumstances that create pressure on people that may contribute to their mental health — or lack thereof," said Yeshiva

University dean Sheldon Gelman.

Experts from Yeshiva's Wurzel School of Social Work will be conducting the survey for the city, developing an "Index of Mental Health." Their work will determine if a more in-depth study should be done.

The city of 7 million has long been a city of multiple personalities, where Staten Islanders hate Manhattanites, who look down their noses at Brooklyn and Queens. (The Bronx is a whole 'nother story.)

The city's diversity complicates the study, since different neighborhoods face different problems, Gelman said. But it will concentrate on factors affecting overall quality of life, he said: poverty, child abuse, crime, teen pregnancy, for example.

Gelman declined to make a non-scientific assessment of the city's mental well-being based on his own experiences as a city resident.

"No," he said, laughing. "I don't think so."

'Mockingbird' publisher includes author's letter without permission

NEW YORK (AP) — You can't judge the 35th-anniversary edition of "To Kill a Mockingbird" by its cover.

The cover of the Pulitzer Prize-winning book touts a "new foreword" by the author, Harper Lee. The "foreword" is actually a letter from Lee to her agent turning down a request for an introduction to a 1993 edition.

"Please spare 'Mockingbird' an introduction," wrote Lee, who has not published a novel since "Mockingbird" in 1960 and rarely gives interviews.

"I associate introductions with long-gone authors and works that are being brought back into print after decades of interment. Although 'Mockingbird' will be 33 this year, it has never been out of print and I am still alive, although very quiet."

The novel about racial injustice in the South has sold 16 million copies in the United States and was made into a movie starring Gregory Peck.

The reference to the new "foreword" was put on the cover without the author's permission, said a spokesman for the publisher, HarperCollins.

"Obviously, we would have been delighted if Miss Lee had written 10 pages, but she didn't," Hugh Van Dusen said.

Pop singer sets off on pilgrimage to find nanny

JERUSALEM (AP) — Stevie Wonder is going looking for his former nanny, who lives among the Black Hebrews sect in the Negev Desert.

The Chicago-based Black Hebrews believe they are descendants of the Lost Tribes of Israel and have been settling near the town of Dimona since the 1970s.

"His connection with Dimona is through the Black Hebrews, whom he supports," the town's mayor, Gaby Lalouche, said Wednesday on Israel army radio. "One of them is his nanny, who changed his diapers when he was a baby."

Wonder arrived in Israel on Tuesday and will give two concerts. The singer plans to meet Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin, an adviser to Yasser Arafat and the head of Israel's Ethiopian Jewish community.

"When I was very young, before my mother had accepted that I was visually impaired, she wanted to bring me to the Holy City in hopes I would get my sight," the Jerusalem Post quoted Wonder as saying.

'Dallas' star undergoes liver transplant

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Larry Hagman was in extremely critical condition Wednesday after getting a new liver and losing a few gallstones during a 15-hour operation.

"Mr. Hagman has done very well," said Dr. Leonard Makowka, director of the liver transplant program at Cedars-Sinai Medical Center. "I expect that he'll return and have a fully normal lifestyle."

The first 48 hours after the surgery, which began Tuesday night and ended around 2:30 p.m. Wednesday, are crucial to determining if his body rejects the donor organ, Makowka said.

Hagman, 63, the loathsome J.R. Ewing from the TV soap "Dallas" and the long-suffering astronaut on "I Dream of Jeannie," was diagnosed three years ago with cirrhosis of the liver, which he blamed on years of heavy drinking.

Makowka said the surgical team was surprised to find that Hagman's cirrhosis was much more advanced than believed. "We really did get the liver just in time," he said.

But a cancerous tumor in the liver was "completely dead" after a procedure earlier this month in which one of Hagman's arteries was short-circuited to prevent blood from feeding the tumor, Makowka said.

Doctors initially expected the surgery to take 12 hours. It took longer because surgeons had to reconstruct blood vessels for the transplant.

Makowka said he also found gallstones that had to be removed before the transplant could be done.

Press warned to leave prince alone at boarding school

LONDON (AP) — Prying journalists need to give the kid a break and let Prince William go off to Eton and do his own thing in peace, a media watchdog warned Wednesday.

"Prince William must be allowed to run, walk, study and play at Eton, free from the fear of prying cameras," Lord Wakeham, chairman of the Press Complaints Commission, said in a speech to media executives.

Wakeham is in charge of enforcing the voluntary code of practice agreed to by the industry. He can't punish violators, but the government has threatened legislation if self-regulation fails.

The 13-year-old son of Prince Charles and Princess Diana "must be allowed to make mistakes and learn the way we all did — without our reading consistently of his successes and failures in the columns of our newspapers," Wakeham said.

Dead's Garcia specifies one-third of estate for wife

SAN RAFAEL, Calif. (AP) — Jerry Garcia's widow will get the largest single share of his estate, including his art and comic book collection.

Under the terms of his 16-page will, signed in 1994 and filed on Friday in Marin County Superior Court, Deborah Garcia will get one-third of his estate, including many of the Grateful Dead guitarist's personal effects.

Most of the balance goes to Garcia's brother, Clifford; Garcia's four daughters from previous relationships; and the daughter of a former wife.

Garcia died Aug. 9 at a drug rehabilitation center at age 33.

Trial date set for Coralville man in alleged hate crime incident

The Daily Iowan

A UI graduate student charged with making false reports to Coralville Police that vandals spray-painted his car with racial slurs faces trial Oct. 4. If convicted, DeWayne Byrdsong, 32, could face jail time and a fine.

Byrdsong, a UI graduate student in the School of Social Work, reported to Coralville Police during the night of July 15 that someone spray-painted his 1983 Mercedes with racial slurs.

Byrdsong and his wife, Grayson, a UI dental student, moved to Coralville last January.

When reached, Byrdsong declined comment.

"I'm sorry I can't speak to you," Byrdsong said. "Because of legal reasons, I can't say anything to the press right now."

The police began investigating Byrdsong when they received anonymous tips that he had visited several local auto-body shops between February and June to get estimates for repainting his car. Police arrested Byrdsong on Aug. 10.

Byrdsong's lawyer, Jim McCarragher, entered a plea of not guilty for his client in the Johnson County District Court on August 11. The charge is a simple misdemeanor, with a maximum penalty of 30 days in jail and a $100 fine.

However, the estimated cost of repair to the car is $3,500, which could make the crime second-degree criminal mischief, a serious misdemeanor.

A new Iowa law states if a falsely reported crime was a serious misdemeanor or a felony, the charge can be elevated to a serious misdemeanor. The maximum penalty for a serious misdemeanor is a one-year jail term.

Assistant County Attorney Janet Lyness said she has not yet made a decision whether to elevate the charge's penalty. She has until Sept. 25 to decide.

Because the new law just took effect, Coralville Police weren't aware of the change when they arrested Byrdsong.

A fund of $2,700 established by community members to help repair Byrdsong's car has been frozen at Iowa State Bank & Trust Company, 102 S. Clinton St.

New York study grades Iowa lobbyists B-

Associated Press

DES MOINES — Iowa gets a B- when it comes to keeping Statehouse lobbyists in control, while South Dakota gets a failing grade and Wisconsin rates an A, according to a study.

The study released Tuesday by the New York Public Interest Research Group, of Albany, N.Y., gives the highest grades to states with the most restrictive laws on gift-giving and campaign-financing activities by lobbyists. The study reviewed lobbying laws in all 50 states and the District of Columbia.

"We believe the connection between lobbyists and legislators and top policy-makers needs to be severed," said Russ Haven, the group's legislative council.

Eight states have a higher rank than Iowa and five others share Iowa's mark on a traditional A-to-F grading scale.

Cyclists found in Utah canyon

Associated Press

MOAB, Utah — The bodies of two Iowa men were recovered from the side of a canyon cliff Wednesday, and it appeared the two had fallen 150 feet while hiking, said Doug Squire, Grand County's chief deputy sheriff.

Mark Irvin, 20, of Blairsburg, Iowa, and Chris Holt, 21, of Hampton, Iowa, had been missing for more than two weeks. They left Iowa by car on July 28, carrying their mountain bikes for riding in Colorado and Utah, and had agreed to call home every other night. Their families last heard from them Aug. 4, and they hadn't returned to Iowa on Aug. 8 as expected.

The bodies were spotted by a Utah National Guard helicopter about 4:30 p.m. Tuesday in a rugged wilderness study area about eight miles east of Moab, said Grand County Sheriff Jim Nyland.

They were on an undercut area of the cliff, about 2 1/2 miles from the Porcupine Rim mountain bike trail, an area dominated by sandstone mesas and canyons that is being studied for designation as wilderness.

Chief Deputy Doug Squire said the rescuers were able to drive to within about an hour from the bodies, and hiked from there. The crews then rappelled down to the bodies.

The climbers put the bodies into harnesses, and a hovering helicopter carried them out of the canyon. The rescuers had to use the ropes to climb out of the canyon.

The bodies have been taken to the Utah State Medical Examiners' office in Salt Lake City. It could not be determined immediately how long they had been on the cliff side.

The helicopter pilot who spotted the bodies said they could be seen only from a certain position in the air, said Nyland. He said searchers had been in the area earlier Tuesday but the ledge had an overhang that had prevented the bodies from being seen.

The men's bicycles still have not been found.

Searchers began taking to the bike trails around Moab last Wednesday, and the search gained steam since then.

On Aug. 16, Irvin's mother, Shirley Nelson, found the men's car parked in a picnic area near the Colorado River just north of Moab.

One loop of a Porcupine Rim trail ends at that picnic area, so that's why searchers concentrated on that area, Squire said.

Nelson said earlier Tuesday that she developed film found in her son's camera inside the car.

The pictures showed the two at the campground, posing with their bikes, and also on the Slick Rock Trail, the most popular in the area among mountain biking enthusiasts. Porcupine Rim is east of the Slick Rock Trail.

The families of the missing men hired a helicopter last week to search.

Holt's aunt, Carol Hinton, who came to Utah Aug. 17 to help in the search, said people in Moab had been kind to the family. "We are extremely grateful they were able to find the boys," she said. "We needed the closure."

Hinton, who lives in West Des Moines, Iowa, said family members believe the young men died more than two weeks ago.

Irvin's mother and stepfather were on their way home to Iowa Wednesday so they could be with their other children, she said.

Roommate horrors prove misleading

Christie Midthun
The Daily Iowan

They've heard the horror stories from older siblings ... they've seen "Single White Female" ... but how do students cope with the reality of the roommate from hell?

UI freshman Jace Bisgard said before he moved in he was worried about getting stuck with Uncle Fester for a roommate.

"My older brother had a roommate who showered twice in the whole month that he lived there," Bisgard said. "I was kind of worried that's what it was going to be like."

However, Bisgard said his fears were quickly dispelled. He and his roommate, UI freshman Tyler Casey, have many similar interests, he said.

"When I got here, (Casey's) stuff was already here," Bisgard said. "I saw a basketball and a baseball glove. I knew he couldn't be all that bad."

After lugging all of their worldly possessions up to a 9 feet by 12 feet room and saying a tearful goodbye to their parents, the last thing many students want to do is be consoled by a complete stranger. To remedy this dilemma, some students get in touch with their roomies-to-be before move-in day.

"We talked and wrote all summer long," UI freshman Amanda Bergeson said. "We talked about the things we like and don't like. We got all of that established right away."

But what can students do when their roommates pull a Dr. Jekyll / Mr. Hyde — make new friends named Snake and start throwing rave parties in their residence hall rooms?

UI junior Catherine Gates said the key to getting along is compromise.

"Try to be laid back about things," Gates said.

Free-thinking Leary lets UI in on his secrets tonight

Once labeled "the most dangerous man alive" by former President Richard Nixon, Dr. Timothy Leary will speak at Main Lounge in the Union tonight at 8 p.m.

The lecture, "How to Operate Your Brain," is part of the UI's Welcome Week and is free and open to the public.

The lecture will also be simulcast on UI cable channel 10, as lecture organizers expect to have to turn people away at the door.

"How to Operate Your Brain" is Leary's latest multimedia lecture in which he guides the audience into a trance state and teaches them how to program their minds. The presentation premiered on last year's Lollapalooza tour.

"He's a counter-cultural legend," said UI senior Andy Peebler, chairman of the UI Lecture Committee.

Leary received his doctorate in psychology from the University of California at Berkeley and since then has become a leader in psychological exploration and alternative thought, Peebler said. It was Leary who pioneered the use of acid and popularized yoga and eastern religion.

He was also a leader in the humanist psychology movement during the '50s, and in 1959 Leary was appointed director of the Harvard Psychedelic Research Project and served as a faculty member until he was dismissed 1963.

Leary's dismissal was due to his controversial methods of correcting behavior and clinical studies of psychedelic drugs, which were legally used to correct behavior until 1966.

Another controversial technique pioneered by Leary was group therapy, now a common psychotherapeutic practice. He also established a research center for free-thinkers and protest leaders in Millbrook, N.Y.

UI job fair helps those looking for extra cash

The UI Office of Student Financial Aid is sponsoring a Student Job Fair today for students interested in part-time and work-study employment for fall semester.

The fair will take place from 9:30 a.m. to 3 p.m. in the Main Lounge in the Union. It will feature about 40 on- and off-campus employers offering hourly part-time and work-study positions.

The fair is an excellent opportunity for UI students to find out more about job opportunities, said Cindy Seyfer, assistant director of the financial aid office.

More than 800 students attended the 1994 fair.

Staff from the financial aid office will be at the fair to issue the necessary payroll paperwork for students hired today. A UI student ID card is required for payroll employment paperwork.

For more information about the fair, or about job opportunities on-campus, contact the UI Office of Student Financial Aid at 335-1460.

The Student Job Fair is one of a series of activities taking place during "A Hawkeye Hello!" Week of Welcome, an annual tradition designed to acquaint new students with UI life.

Inmate charged with 7 counts

FORT MADISON, Iowa (AP) — An inmate who walked away from a minimum-security prison farm has been charged with seven criminal counts in his escape.

Lee County Attorney David Andrusyk and Assistant Attorney General Robert Glaser filed the charges Tuesday against Todd Allen Heard, 24, now an inmate at the Iowa State Penitentiary in Fort Madison. He is charged with first-degree kidnapping, second-degree kidnapping, first-degree burglary, second-degree sexual abuse, first-degree theft, third-degree burglary and escape.

Heard had served about nine years of a 25-year sentence for second-degree sexual abuse when he walked away from the prison farm in Fort Madison on Aug. 12. He was captured the next morning in Mount Pleasant after the Lee County sheriff's office received an emergency call from a Fort Madison woman.

Virtual reality on display in Iowa City

David Lee
The Daily Iowan

UI students got a chance to try out high-tech toys at Hubbard Park Wednesday as TechWorld, a collegiate virtual reality tour, came to Iowa.

"In a few years, virtual reality will be household items," said Doug Diers, manager of the "Cutting Edge" tour. "We want people to leave the exhibit with an idea of what the future will be like."

Although all of the virtual reality games were on normal computer screens, students had the chance to put on goggles and backpacks to add 3-D effects and feel like they were actually in a gunfight or racing down a NASCAR speedway.

UI junior Mike Wagner flew a simulated flight pattern when he tested out a fighter jet game, but didn't last very long before crashing.

"I can't even do it," he said. "And I was just doing it to play."

"In a few years, virtual reality will be household items. We want people to leave the exhibit with an idea of what the future will be like."

Doug Diers, manager of the "Cutting Edge" tour.

Wagner said he isn't really into computers, but often plays around with his roommate's.

Temperatures were in the upper-80s Wednesday afternoon, but Diers said he didn't expect the heat to bother the computers, which were outside all day. Backup machines were available in case anything went wrong.

"That was a concern at the beginning of the tour," he said. "With today's technology, they've been holding up pretty well. As long as it doesn't rain."

Joseph Strathman/The Daily Iowan

UI senior Jennifer Hemmingsen is amazed by the world of virtual reality. The computer simulation can allow people to participate in a synthetic environment in which one can hear sounds and reach for intangible objects. People may take the virtual reality endeavor today from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. at Hubbard Park.

Twelve-year-old David Young, of Iowa City, said one of the best things about the games was he didn't have to feed them another quarter in order to play again.

"It's the same as an arcade," he said. "They're pretty cool. It kind of depends on what game you use."

Young's father, UI senior Tony

Young, was also impressed with the games, but wasn't ready to buy one for his son yet.

"I like the technology, but I don't want to spend money on a game," he said. "But for educational purposes, yes."

The tour continues today, from 9:30 a.m. to 5 p.m., in Hubbard Park.

Author of unique teen novels dies of cancer

Roger Munns
Associated Press

DES MOINES — Lee Hadley, an author who collaborated with Annabelle Irwin to write the Hadley Irwin novels for teen-agers, died of cancer Tuesday at her Madrid home. She was 60.

The women wrote 13 novels over the last 15 years, all of them featuring lead characters rising above circumstances such as incest and racism.

"If you're going to write for kids, you have an obligation to be truthful but at the same time, there's no need for explicit material," Hadley said in an interview two years ago.

"What you also owe, and this sounds cheesy, but what you also owe is a sense of morality. We're not preaching, but there are certain things we believe in life.

"All of those things that are so awful, they have some value later in life if you can sort them out," she'd said. "Even in life is the pits, life still does go on and there are funny things that happen."

With laughter and sturdy values, their characters survive hurtful situations simpler than the "training bra" novels, as the authors called them, rarely address.

"I'm not putting down the training bra novels," Irwin said. "If the kids read those, they'll graduate pretty soon."

The best known Hadley Irwin book, "Abbey, My Love," was published in 1985 when its theme, a girl struggling to deal with incest, was rare in books for adolescents.

"They were leaders in the field," said Barbara Elleman, editor of Book Link, a publication of the American Library Association in Chicago. "They were one of the first ones to approach sex abuse. It was handled with dignity and delicacy, not like a television sitcom."

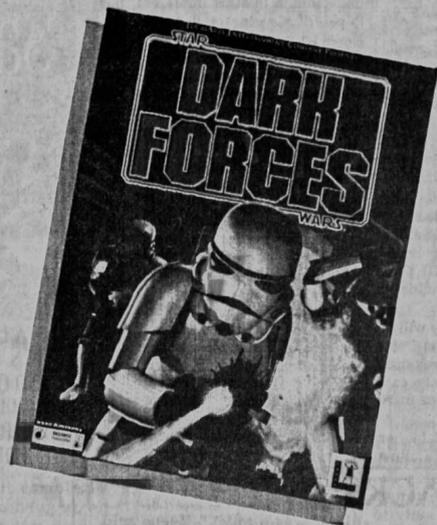

Irwin said Tuesday the novelists had to work hard to get "Abbey" published.

"Incest wasn't a word you said out loud," Irwin said.

"But we wanted real topics. We didn't want a young reader to say 'So what?' at the end. They should go on thinking about the book."

LARGEST COMPUTER RELEASE OF THE '90S

Coveted Windows '95 makes debut

David Lee
The Daily Iowan

Windows 95, the much-anticipated Microsoft upgrade of the program 70 million people use to run their computers, makes its debut today in what some software vendors are saying could be the largest computer release of the 1990s.

Iowa City computer stores appear ready after months of preparation to sell the new program, which supposedly makes running computer programs easier and more user-friendly on the disk operating systems, or DOS.

Software Etc, Old Capitol Mall, has been gearing up for the release, anticipating large crowds of customers eager to get their copy of the new program.

"(We're prepared) with sandbags and gun emplacements," senior salesman Jeff Kraemer said.

Software Etc will be opening an hour earlier today, at 9 a.m., to let customers in, he said. People have also been able to make advance purchases of Windows 95.

"I think it's safe to say that this is the largest computer release this year and possibly the decade," Kraemer said.

Windows 95 aims to make computing easier for Windows users. The University Book Store will also open an hour early today, at 7 a.m., to allow students to buy Windows 95, said Jim Sirois, assistant manager of electronics.

"We have to set up tonight after we close," he said Wednesday afternoon. "The shipment came in Wednesday. I had to beg (Microsoft) for it."

The bookstore has been getting ready for Windows 95 for the past nine months, and employees had the chance to crack open a package for an early demonstration version running in the bookstore, Sirois said.

About 70 copies have already been reserved, but purchasers will have to see if their computers have the memory needed to handle the program, Sirois said.

"Supposedly, if you can run Windows, you can run Windows 95," he said. "But the more (megabytes), the better."

Best Buy, 1963 Broadway, has been running promotional on its computers that can handle Windows 95 in order to complement the release.

"We're going to have demos available and technicians to install Windows 95," said Ed Deugan, senior product specialist. "We've been getting ready for about a month for it."

Best Buy has about 300 copies of Windows 95 in stock. Deugan said he expects to be sold out by the weekend.

REYNOLDS

 $11,000 a month and he's really got financial problems," said Paul Green, a Governors State University political scientist. "My gut feeling would be he would stretch it out just as long as he can."
 U.S. Sen. Carol Moseley-Braun, D-Ill., called on Reynolds to resign. Other politicians, including Chicago's Democratic Mayor Richard Daley, Republican Gov. Jim Edgar and House Speaker Newt Gingrich said it was Reynolds' decision.
 The House ethics committee could open its own investigation and recommend expulsion, censure or reprimand of Reynolds. The panel's recommendation is not binding on the full House.

 Reynolds' political career, however, seems destroyed midway through his second term. Four potentially strong Democrats are interested in his congressional seat, including the 30-year-old son of civil rights leader Jesse Jackson.
 Political leaders are not rallying to the side of Jesse Jackson Jr. but Frank Watkins, his father's longtime political mentor, already has signed up as co-campaign manager.
 Reynolds has said he is so far in debt he expects to lose the suburban home he and his wife, Marisol, bought last year.

 Evidence at the sex trial showed the couple made the $26,000 down payment with $11,000 from their savings account and a $15,000 check written on an account controlled by Reynolds' wife. That account is under review in the federal investigation of Reynolds' finances.
 Cook County Judge Fred Suria set a Sept. 12 hearing date for post-trial motions but set no sentencing date for Reynolds. He remains free on a personal recognizance bond.

ZAIRE

 posed a major security risk after the United Nations lifted an arms embargo against Rwanda last week.
 The prime minister of Zaire, Kengo Wa Dondo, gave that explanation in a Aug. 17 letter to U.N. Secretary-General Boutros Boutros-Ghali. The letter, which warned of the coming expulsions, was released Wednesday by the United Nations.
 Zaire apparently feared battles between the Tutsi-led Rwandan government and Hutu extremists in the refugee camps would take place on its side of the border.
 Almost all the refugees in eastern Zaire are Hutus from Rwanda and Burundi, two small Central African countries with similar ethnic makeups — and ethnic strife.

Nearly 2 million Hutus fled Rwanda in July 1994 when Tutsi-led rebels seized power. Hutu-led militias had killed an estimated 500,000 people, mostly minority Tutsis, in the preceding months and the refugees feared retaliation.
 Rwanda's Tutsi-led government had demanded an end to the arms embargo, claiming Hutu militias in the camps were rearming to attack Rwanda.
 Burundian Hutus, who have long been dominated by their country's Tutsi minority, fled after the country's first Hutu president was killed in a failed 1993 coup, sparking ethnic violence killing more than 100,000.
 In Washington, the State Department called for an immediate halt to the expulsions.
 Spokesman David Johnson said the action risks a grave humanitarian crisis and an increase in tensions not only along Zaire's border with Rwanda but within Zaire itself, as refugees seeking to escape repatriation scatter through the countryside.
 "We are deeply disturbed by the prospect of confrontations between Zairian security forces, the Zairian population, forces of the former government of Rwanda and refugees," he said.
 Aid officials said at least 2,000 people were forced

SEARCH COSTS

 Search and Screen Advisory Committee, said because this search was larger than the last one, it will cost more.
 "I would be very surprised if we don't spend much more because we are dealing with a larger pool," he said. "To attract the sort of people we want takes a lot of hard work."
 Seven years ago the search cost about $120,000, said Doug True, vice president for Finance and University Services, and this year's search is being conducted in much the same style.
 The UI has hired the consulting service of Korn/Ferry International to help conduct the search. The UI is paying the firm $37,500, and will also provide out-of-pocket expenses of up to $40,000, which includes meals, phone bills, mailing costs and other accumulated costs.

 Other costs include thousands of dollars of national advertising, out-of-pocket expenses for UI employees involved in the search and travel expenses for the candidates.
 Members of the search team, however, are volunteering their time and will not receive additional compensation, True said.
 The UI, Collins said, is similar to a large corporation, with an annual budget of more than $1 billion, including the nation's largest teaching hospital and thousands of employees, making the exhaustive efforts worth the money and time.
 "This is big time," he said. "The money spent is well worth it. If you get the wrong kind of leadership you pay through the nose."

 The applicant pool, Collins said, is much larger than in 1987, when Rawlings replaced James Freeman, who went to Dartmouth College in Hanover, N.H.
 Although delays in the process will cost the UI additional money, there is a maximum fee the UI is required to pay the consulting firm. If Korn/Ferry's expenses exceed $40,000, the firm must make up the difference. The search has lasted eight months compared with the 11 it took to find Rawlings.
 UNI also used Korn/Ferry and paid the same flat fee the UI did. However, UI out-of-pocket costs will likely run higher than UNI's $14,240. The final bill for choosing new UNI president Robert Koob was $99,596.89.

INTERVIEWS

 members of the UI community and participate in three symposia open to the public: an undergraduate education forum, a research and graduate/professional education seminar and a health sciences meeting.
 The order of the candidates' visit is not related to the committee's preference, Collins said. In the last search, Rawlings was not even one of the finalists initially identified.
 Once the interviews are complete, the search committee will select four finalists and forward their names, unranked, to the Iowa state Board of Regents. The board will then interview the final four candidates and select the president.
 The new president's salary will be negotiated by acting president Peter Nathan and the board of regents, and Collins said it is often the case that the new president makes more than the previous president.
 "An institution will shoot higher and higher as it goes along," Collins said. Rawlings made $182,100. Collins said he hopes the president will be able to start on Jan. 1, but depending on his or her schedule, the start date may be as late as the end of spring semester.

 Evaluating the on-campus interviews will be the final task for the search committee, whose work began after Rawlings announced his departure on Dec. 10, 1994. Collins said it will be a relief to be finished.
 "This has been a process the committee has worked on very diligently," Collins said. "Everyone on the committee is looking forward to completing our part of the process."
 Collins originally wanted to complete all the interviews before the summer session finished, however, the search committee was unable to begin the interviews before this weekend.
 "That's a continuing concern," he said. "We didn't complete the interviews during the summer session because it proved not possible to do so."

UI FLASHBACKS

 lacked excitement until they discovered a magical potion known as alcohol. UI sophomore Jason Tobias said he "saw the light" early in his freshman year.
 "I was too scared to leave my room, so I just stayed in all the time and studied," Tobias said. "But then I started going out and getting loaded every night. I guess I got my priorities straight."
 Getting to know your roommate is a top priority for most students when moving into school. UI senior Larry Huene remembers getting to know his very first roommate.
 "I was sleeping and he came barging in all plastered, knocking shit over, and pissed on my new couch like it was a toilet," Huene said. "Besides that, he got my comforter, sheets, laundry, pillow and shoes wet, too."

 Despite the rough start, Huene said he and his first roommate became friends and still remain in contact. However, one year of rooming with such a loose bladder was enough for Huene.
 Some students' stories about their freshman year at the UI are more on the wild side. Matt McGuinn remembered when he started making many of his new college friends.
 "I streaked the girls' wing of my dorm one night wearing nothing but a paper bag over my head and a leopard skin jock strap," the midnight marauder said.

Reynolds got what he deserves

EDITORIAL POINT OF VIEW

Mel Reynolds' conviction should set precedent for other public official trials. Open hearings should be required in all cases of obstructing justice.

Illinois congressman Mel Reynolds' trial in connection with an alleged sexual relationship with a 16-year-old campaign worker proves that we live in a nation where unethical and illegal behavior by our public officials will not be tolerated. Indeed, such behavior by our trusted public officials will be prosecuted to the fullest extent of the law. And attempts by such public officials to obstruct justice, as Reynolds was found guilty of doing, will also be punished.

Yes, democracy is once again safe, and virtue rules the land.

Or perhaps the Reynolds trial simply proves unethical and illegal behavior by a single-term, African-American Democrat in public official will incur the full wrath of a flexible American system of political justice.

It's too bad for Reynolds he isn't a five-term, white Republican senator because then he would be Oregon Sen. Bob Packwood — who has been accused of sexual harassment of up to 41 women, illegal solicitation of job offers for his ex-wife and attempting to obstruct the ethics investigation of his past history by tampering with evidence.

One can't help but sympathize with Reynolds when he states that he has "been the victim of scurrilous and vicious lies" as part of a racially motivated plot against him; especially when one considers the speed with which the justice system has worked against Reynolds in comparison with the lack of speed the wheels of justice have turned against Packwood.

The charges against Reynolds were filed a little over a year ago and his trial has already come to an end. Packwood, on the other hand, was originally accused of sexual harassment prior to his re-election in 1992 — nearly three years ago — and the Senate Ethics Committee has yet to issue the results of an inquiry.

Reynolds had to endure the embarrassment of a public trial.

Most shaming was the airing of transcripts detailing sexually explicit phone conversations with his accuser. The transcripts forced Reynolds' defense lawyers to concoct the embarrassingly lame defense that Reynolds was addicted to "fantasy phone sex" — a strategy that opens up the possibility of a new career for Reynolds as a professional guest on the daytime talk-show circuit. Now Reynolds will be looking for a new career.

Packwood, on the other hand, has managed to obstruct the investigation against him and scuttle subpoenas of his diaries, taking the case all the way to the Supreme Court. He has also prevented the Senate Ethics Committee hearings from being open to the public. Shockingly, Packwood's political fortune's have increased since ethics charges were originally leveled against him. In that time he has ascended to chairmanship of the powerful Senate Finance Committee.

It might be argued that the two cases do not compare because the charges against Reynolds involve a 16 year-old and are therefore more reprehensible. But according to a CNN interview with Senate Ethics Committee member Barbara Boxer of California, one of Packwood's most recent victims of sexual harassment was a 17 year-old intern.

Boxer has pushed for public hearings covering the charges against Packwood, but all three Republicans on the Ethics Committee voted against such hearings, choosing instead the dignity of private hearings. Public hearings would be terribly embarrassing and politically damaging to their powerful colleague, Packwood — almost as embarrassing and damaging as Mel Reynolds' trial was.

There's no need to cry for Reynolds. He got what he deserved. Too bad Sen. Bob Packwood won't.

New telemarketing regulations will help prevent phone scams

EDITORIAL POINT OF VIEW

Telemarketing regulations are long overdue and will protect those who fall prey to phone scams.

Telemarketers, deemed "cockroaches" by Wisconsin Attorney General James Doyle, are going to have a harder time ripping off consumers, thanks to new regulations adopted by the Federal Trade Commission.

According to the new rules, not taking effect until Dec. 31, state telemarketers must identify they are making a sales call and state the nature of the product offered. The regulations also forbid a telemarketer to debit a consumer's checking account without written authorization or taped approval.

The new FTC rules also make it possible for state law-enforcement officials to take scam artists to court and seek nationwide injunctions — rather than the previous statewide injunctions — against fraudulent telemarketers.

Hopefully, these rules will exterminate those pestering callers who creep out from the woodwork, catching most consumers off-guard.

In Iowa alone, $400 million has been handed over to fraudulent telemarketers, said assistant Iowa Attorney General Steve St. Clair.

Preying on the elderly and people with guilt complexes who are afraid to hang up on callers, telemarketers selling products or credit cards — or offering fraudulent prizes — are just hoping you'll add to the millions.

"I hate it when telemarketers call," said UI senior Megan Romer. "I feel guilty hanging up on them or interrupting them."

What consumers need to do is stand tall and learn an important skill — say "No, thank you, I'm not interested" and hang up. These six words are just as empowering as handling a can of Raid and do not leave telemarketers writhing in pain.

Everything a telemarketer can offer consumers is already available to them. Credit cards? Try going into a department store, the bank or even the Union and filling out an application.

Is the telemarketer selling a newspaper or magazine? Buy one at a store and fill out one of those obnoxious cards that fall out all over the place.

The only valid benefit of telemarketing is the job opportunity it provides for students — it is a simple second job and it pays well. And sometimes if the telemarketer sells their product outright, they can even get a free date out of the call.

Telemarketing is an unnecessary evil providing no benefit to the general public. It is too dangerous to give your personal information to any stranger that calls. The new FTC rules will help avoid fraud, but it is up to consumers to stop allowing themselves to be scammed.

Perfect places to pucker up

Hooking up with lost loves from last year? Looking for a quaint place to take that smart girl from Interpretation of Literature? Search no further, the raunchy meets refined in Iowa City's romantic spots.

1. Charge a bag of popcorn at the Union and head down by the Iowa River. Battle the ducks for a place in the shade and plant a sweet one on the cheek of your newest fling.

2. Pick up a stranger on the dance floor at the Union Bar, 121 E. College St. Nothing beats the salty sweat gathering on your lip while you dance under the strobe lights at one of the most lecherous meat markets in town.

3. Take time off from studying and read the writing on the wall in the fourth-floor bathroom stalls at the UI Main Library. Best known for coupling in front of the mirrors, the bathroom is the quickest place for a study break.

4. The Englert Theatre, 221 E. Washington St., may not show the best flicks, but it is the only movie house with a private balcony. Sneak on upstairs — I'm sure the usher won't mind if you put on a good show.

5. For 75 cents, visit the most surreal location in Iowa City. City Park, Park Road, takes you back 40 years with — among other carnival rides — an old-fashioned ferris wheel. Hold on tight — this ride zooms around real fast, and they don't let you off until someone else wants on.

Why Shannon Faulkner is still my hero(ine)

When James Meredith single-handedly integrated the University of Mississippi in 1962, his presence provoked such bigotry that a riot ensued, leaving two dead, 168 U.S. marshals injured, 28 marshals shot and 200 people arrested. The governor of Mississippi, a mean little man named Ross Barnett, was publicly adamant against desegregation and devised its opponents' motto: "Never."

Meredith would be taunted with this word — among much worse — day in and day out, the whole year he spent at Ole Miss.

But Meredith had the last laugh. When he graduated in 1963, it was with one of Barnett's "Never" buttons pinned to his gown — turned upside down.

My only regret is that Shannon Faulkner will not get to experience this final victory. She will not get to see those pea-brained Citadel administrators squirm as she walks down the graduation aisle. She will not get to look into the audience at the sullen faces of the cadets who jeered her and the mothers who picketed her arrival on the grounds that it "interfered with tradition."

But Faulkner has already fought and won several battles. As an 18-year-old, she was thrown into the public spotlight two years ago when she applied to the all-male, publicly funded Citadel as a man. She was accepted, but the offer was rescinded when the school discovered she had a uterus.

Faulkner took the school to court, and it was ruled women had to be provided a "separate but equal" education. The Citadel made some lame attempts at this, but

Still, when Faulkner announced last Friday she would be leaving The Citadel, you could almost hear the blood draining from the faces of the women and men who supported her. How could she do this? How could she prove them right? How could she let us down?

Faulkner argued part of The Citadel experience was The Citadel itself. The court agreed and the school was ordered to allow her entrance.

So Faulkner arrived at The Citadel this month to an onslaught of protesters, supporters, dazed fellow cadets and the same crew of frenzied media reporters that have been circling around her for two years. She had her own bathroom and a bedroom with a big lock on the door. She had a camera mounted in the hallway "for her protection." She had male cadets specifically designated as her reprimanders. And Faulkner had a guarantee from the school that they would still fight her presence every step of the way.

Still, when Faulkner announced last Friday she would be leaving The Citadel, you could almost hear the blood draining from the faces of the women and men who supported her. How could she do this? How could she prove them right? How could she let us down?

But Faulkner didn't let anybody down. "I'm just one person," she said on National Public Radio last week — a 20-year-old who has received more death threats than a head of state. She fought the good fight. She put herself on the line to prove the obvious: a public school cannot exclude women, regardless of some warped notion of tradition.

Faulkner didn't get sick because she couldn't cut it. She got sick because she was up against a hundred times more than any of those other cadets could even imagine. She was up against the media, sexism, stagnation and a system that refused to entertain the possibility of progress. "Never."

But Faulkner will see her legacy. Because when the first woman does graduate from The Citadel — and it will be soon — she will be walking in the footsteps of Faulkner's combat boots.

And whoever does get that last laugh, you can be sure Faulkner will be laughing right along with her.

N.Y. animal-rights tales are a hoot and howl

Someone recently sent me a copy of a publication called the American Family Association Journal. It contained one of the most unbelievable stories I have ever read. See if you agree:

"Jake Landon, a 42-year-old mechanic, is facing multiple counts of aggravated cruelty to animals as a result of his 21-day fight for survival when lost in the Adirondack Mountains in upstate New York.

"Last April, Landon's pick-up skidded on a muddy road and slid into a ravine, where he lay unconscious for possibly two days. He apparently struck his head on the windshield and awoke with no recollection of who and where he was. Dragging a severely injured right foot, he wandered about for the next three weeks, huddling at night in shelters made of pine boughs, surviving on fish caught with a pointed stick and squirrels he trapped then killed with the stick.

"On the 21st day of his ordeal, Landon stumbled into a road, where he collapsed. Two men, now thought to be escapees from a prison, indicated the direction of the nearest settlement. Landon finally reached civilization.

"Landon's highly publicized story caught the attention of Humans for the Sensitive Treatment of Animals. The animal-rights advocacy group pressed the state of New York to bring charges of extreme cruelty to animals with special circumstances against him, specifying the known deaths of at least 10 squirrels and indeterminate number of fish.

"Each count of the Class A felony carries a mandatory sentence of nine years without parole.

"One argument the state is expected to raise is that the number of animals Landon killed was unnecessarily large, owing to the fact that by moving about he elevated his caloric requirements. Had he conserved his energy and waited for rescuers to find him, he would not have needed more than one small fish and a few berries each day.

"Landon also faces a third-degree charge of failure to wear a seat belt and 21 federal charges of setting fires on unapproved sites on state lands."

At the bottom was a line saying the story was reprinted from the Center for the Study of Popular Culture.

Are you shocked? Many people were when they read the story.

Angry citizens phoned New York's state environmental agency to protest the persecution of Landon. Reporters called, asking where they could find Landon to interview him about his bizarre wilderness experience.

It was even debated on radio talk shows. Even Rush Limbaugh mentioned it.

Which tells us something about how little confidence many Americans have in governmental agencies.

"They'll believe anything is possible, including this wacky story.

Yes, as many of you surely recognized, it was a hoax.

Sounding a bit sheepish, Rusty Benson, associate editor of the American Family Association Journal, said:

"The story originated in a newsletter called Heterodoxy. Someone sent us a copy. It was satire, but nothing on the page indicated that it was satire.

"Sadly enough, we didn't check it out. We got caught on that one."

Bruce Donaldson, of Heterodoxy, a monthly newsletter published by the Center for the Study of Popular Culture in Los Angeles, said:

"That's from our back page, which is always satirical. The satirical page is to show how crazy this world can get. There are no disclaimers. The regular readers of Heterodoxy know they are satire pieces.

"We did a thing about an airport shutting down because there were too many seagulls on the runway and the animal-rights groups wouldn't let them get rid of the birds.

"We did another about a girl who couldn't go to school to her senior prom.

"We write about silly things, but they are so plausible that some people believe them.

"The Jake Landon squirrel-eating thing — Rush Limbaugh talked about it. He made a comment that it was probably out of a liberal rag. But it turns out we're a very conservative publication."

And at the New York Department of Environmental Conservation, a spokeswoman said:

"Yes, we had a lot of calls from regular people and from reporters who wanted to know how the case turned out.

"But the whole thing was ridiculous. If someone walked out of the woods after 21 days of being lost and eating squirrels, we wouldn't bring charges against him. How can people believe a thing like that?"

How? Maybe I can explain how.

Recently, a story went around about an artist in downstate Illinois who makes Indian head dresses. She used feathers she found on the ground, including an eagle feather she picked up at a zoo.

One of the head dresses was used as a gift to Hillary Rodham Clinton. Federal wildlife officials heard about it.

Hillary's gift was confiscated. And the woman who made it landed in federal court, where she was convicted of violating the laws against possession of protected bird parts.

That's right. If you pick up a feather in a zoo or in your own backyard, you can end up as a convicted felon.

And that isn't a hoax. So don't take any chances. Never eat squirrels.

Hiroshima anniversary is a time to think

To the Editor:

The 50th anniversary of the bombing of Nagasaki and Hiroshima has generated a lot of press about the reasons the bomb was dropped.

The answer given most often is Truman and his advisers wanted to "save lives." The assumption being, of course, that Truman and his advisers had only two options open to them: drop the bomb or launch a ground invasion.

Other options — say, suing for peace — they casually dismissed. Given the devastating consequences of dropping the bomb, it was a moral imperative to seek other avenues to end the war. Peace, no matter what concessions the United States had to make, should have been vigorously pursued. The United States, after all, could hardly lay claim to the moral high ground when its own history of aggression was far worse than Japan's.

World War II was less about checking aggression than about gaining access to markets for U.S. corporations. Because production outstrips consumption under capitalist rule, other markets need to be penetrated by American-made goods. Sometimes this is done at gunpoint, other times by blackmailing and bribing a political leader. However accomplished, it allows capitalism to flourish and provides it with some stability.

Furthermore, saving lives has never been a priority of the U.S. political establishment. It wasn't when American Indians were slaughtered to pave the way for westward expansion. It wasn't when the southwestern United States was stolen from our Mexican friends and neighbors. It wasn't when more than 200,000 Filipinos were slaughtered by the rain of bombs dropped by the U.S. Air Force. And it most certainly wasn't when the decision was made to drop the bomb on Nagasaki and Hiroshima.

Truman should have been executed for his decision.

Boston clinic gunman ruled competent

Robin Estrin
Associated Press

DEDHAM, Mass. — A judge Wednesday found anti-abortion activist John Salvi III competent to stand trial on two counts of first-degree murder stemming from a shooting spree inside two abortion clinics last year.

Judge Barbara Dortch-Okara said prosecutors had presented a "preponderance of evidence" proving Salvi was competent.

Salvi is charged with killing two people and wounding five others in the Dec. 30, 1994, shootings at Planned Parenthood and Prater Health Services in Brookline, a Boston suburb.

Salvi, 24, of Hampton, N.H., pleaded innocent. The judge said she hopes to bring the case to trial in December.

Salvi has insisted he wants to stand trial — and would accept the death penalty if convicted.

Killer cows

Cattle wander freely down a road in New Delhi Wednesday. A cow standing on a railway near Firozabad, India, initiated an accident which killed at least 348 Sunday. Most cows are privately owned, and it is estimated 125,000 cows roam the streets, eating from garbage piles and grass. Hindus, who make up 82 percent of India's 900 million people, consider cows to be holy. According to custom, the killer of a cow must go through two weeks of penance.

OKLAHOMA BOMBING HAD TRAUMATIC IMPACT

Lawyers request new judge

Paul Queary
Associated Press
OKLAHOMA CITY — Timothy McVeigh's attorneys are asking the judge assigned to the bombing case to step aside, claiming he is a victim of the blast.

The motion filed Tuesday asks that U.S. District Judge Wayne Alley and all other judges in Oklahoma's Western District not handle the case.

Alley was not in the federal courthouse April 19 when the Alfred P. Murrah Federal Building across the street was bombed. But his chambers were damaged and one of his staff was slightly injured.

"Judge Alley, like all the judges in the federal courthouse, are victims of the Oklahoma City bombing," said defense attorney Stephen Jones. "To deny that there has been a traumatic physical and psychological impact on what one judge has called the court family is to belie reality."

Also Tuesday, the state Medical Examiner's office expressed doubts that part of a leg found in the rubble was the remains of an Oklahoma City man who had been dropped off at the federal building before the blast.

Roberta Bennett said her missing 29-year-old son, Sidney Aaron McCallum, wore size 9 shoes. The leg was found in a size 7 1/2 military boot, said Ray Blakeney, spokesman for the Oklahoma Medical Examiner's office.

Blakeney said McCallum, "hasn't been completely ruled out yet." His office is awaiting a police investigation, and the FBI is performing DNA and other tests on the leg, believed to belong to a light-skinned, dark-haired man of about 30 who was about 5 feet 7 inches tall.

Jones has theorized the leg may belong to the "real bomber."

Henry Lee offered testimony defense hopes will bolster its killer theory. He showed jury enlarged black and white photos of bloodstains on Goldman's blue jeans. From the spots identified patterns of parallel lines.

Lee said the patterns match the soles of the Bruno Magli shoes a prosecutor said left bloody prints on a walkway leading from Goldman's body.

But Lee stressed the patterns are not conclusive impressions and could have come from something else.

Other parallel-line impressions on the jeans looked as if they were repeatedly pressed against blue jeans, Lee testified.

"If the mechanism that made this imprint was a shoe, is it consistent with partial shoe prints kicking multiple times in that area?" Scheck asked.

LOS ANGELES — Patterns embossed in blood on victim Ronald Goldman's blue jeans "could be" from shoes different from those the prosecution says the killer wore, O.J. Simpson's forensic science expert testified Wednesday.

Henry Lee offered testimony the defense hopes will bolster its multiple killer theory. He showed the jury enlarged black and white photos of bloodstains on Goldman's blue jeans. From the spots, Lee identified patterns of parallel lines.

Lee said the patterns don't match the soles of the size 12 Bruno Magli shoes a prosecution expert said left bloody prints on a walkway leading from Goldman's body.

"But Lee stressed the patterns he saw are not conclusively shoe impressions and could have come from something else."

"Is the parallel-line pattern that you've circled there consistent with a partial shoe print?" defense attorney Barry Scheck asked.

"I cannot definitively say that is definitely a shoe print," Lee said. "It could be."

Other parallel-line impressions on the jeans looked as if an object was repeatedly pressed against the blue jeans, Lee testified.

"If the mechanism that caused this imprint was a shoe, is this consistent with partial shoe impressions kicking multiple times in that area?" Scheck asked.

"If it is a shoe — which suggests

Associated Press

Defense attorney Barry Scheck displays a photograph for the jury showing what the defense claims is a second shoe imprint at the Bundy crime scene, which they claim could be that of a second there could be multiple contacts," Lee answered.

Scheck then asked, if the pattern came from a shoe, "could it be the Bruno Magli shoe?"

"No," Lee said. "It could be some other shoe?" Scheck asked.

"If this is a shoe print," Lee said, "this is a different type of design than Bruno Magli."

To help jurors understand the interpretation of blood spatters, Lee gave a dramatic demonstration.

He first sprinkled drops of red ink on white paper from different heights and different angles to show what kinds of patterns are created. He then smacked one of the ink blobs with his hand and it splattered on a sheet of paper held perpendicularly to the table. Jurors, who were watching Lee intently, appeared startled and some flinched in their seats when Lee banged his hand and the ink flew.

Late Monday, Lee showed jurors crime-scene photos of a condominium walkway. He described red, shoe sole-like patterns that matched neither the Bruno Magli shoes nor the soles of boots worn by Goldman. The other victim, Nicole Brown Simpson, was barefoot.

Lee further described similar patterns embossed in blood on an envelope and scrap of paper found near the slashed bodies. Again, Lee said, those patterns didn't match the soles of the Bruno Magli's or Goldman's boots.

Also Wednesday, Superior Court Judge Lance Ito refused to grant a prosecution request that much of Lee's testimony be barred. But his ruling held out a threat he might impose "significant and substantial" fines on defense attorneys and give prosecutors more time to prepare for cross-examination because the defense was tardy in disclosing some of Lee's notes.

Ito said the defense clearly violated state discovery laws by waiting as long as 23 days to give prosecutors Lee's notes.

But Ito also criticized prosecutors for failing to tell him clearly how the late disclosure harmed their case and asked them to file new papers to clarify the matter.

Ex-49er Cowlings cashes in on O.J. media blitz

Jane Allen
Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — Over Labor Day weekend, Al "A.C." Cowlings will set up in front of a white Ford Bronco to sell his signature.

He'll sign almost any souvenir, including pictures of the O.J. Simpson freeway chase, which will also be on sale. But sponsors say he won't sign anything he considers tasteless.

Cowlings' contract calls for him to sign photographs, sports memorabilia and other things for "three hours or 1,000 autographs, whichever comes first," according to autograph dealers Randall Pollock and Derrick Johnson.

Cowlings was behind the wheel of a white Bronco when Simpson was the target of a surreal, slow-paced police chase along several Southern California freeways June 17, 1994 — five days after Nicole Brown Simpson and her friend Ronald Goldman were slain.

Pollock arranged for a white Bronco to serve as Cowlings' backdrop when he appears Sept. 3 at the International Sportscard and Memorabilia Expo at the Anaheim Convention Center.

"I would assume he would not want to do any mug shots, or anything that he feels is negative to him. To me, a mug shot is negative. No pictures of the crime scene, obviously. You never know what somebody's going to bring up to sign," Pollock said.

Since the chase, Cowlings has also set up a 900-phone line. For $2.99 a minute he offers sound bites of his life story.

Johnson, owner of Step Up to the Plate in Orange and Pollock, owner of Sport Cert in Irvine, both deal in Simpson memorabilia including items the defendant has signed in jail. They say they are paying Cowlings less than $10,000 "but not far away."

Fans will pay $20 for signed photos from Cowlings' days with the San Francisco 49ers, Buffalo Bills, Houston Oilers or the University of Southern California. It will cost $25 to get his signature on a football, helmet or jersey.

"To me, the whole thing is negative," Pollock said, "but that doesn't keep people from buying that stuff. I have people that deal in Adolf Hitler and he's much worse than O.J."

LUVERNE, Minn. — Three people have died from an outbreak of Legionnaires' disease in this southwestern Minnesota community, state health officials said Wednesday.

The three were in their 70s and had underlying health problems, which put them at higher risk. The first victim, a man, died in mid-July. A woman and another man died in the last four days, state epidemiologist Michael Osterholm said.

Since mid-July, 21 probable cases of Legionnaires' disease have been reported in people between the ages of 40 and 90. Ten of the cases have been confirmed by laboratory tests.

Osterholm said 17 people remain hospitalized, with all but one at Luverne Community Hospital. The 17th person is in a Sioux Falls, S.D., hospital, which he declined to identify. Five of the people were hospitalized in the last 24 hours.

Some patients were listed in serious or critical condition, but most were in stable condition, he said.

All 21 people live in the community of 4,400 residents, but Osterholm said he expects more cases may be found in recent visitors from Iowa, South Dakota and elsewhere in Minnesota.

Legionnaires' disease is usually caused by bacteria transported through the mist coming from large air conditioning cooling towers.

Five such cooling towers in Luverne were drained and disinfected Wednesday, since they are believed to be the most likely source of the illness. Tests were being done to determine the cause of the outbreak, Osterholm said.

"We're quite confident that it's one of several cooling towers at this point," he said.

Onslaught deterred by arrests in Israel

Hilary Appelman
Associated Press

JERUSALEM — The arrest of an Islamic militant suspected of masterminding two recent suicide bombings narrowly averted more attacks against Israelis, the head of Israel's secret service said Wednesday.

The capture of Abdel Nasr Issa and 29 accomplices dealt a severe blow to Hamas, or the Islamic Resistance Movement, which has threatened to turn life in Israel into a terror-laden nightmare.

Issa's arrest on Saturday led Israeli agents to an apartment filled with chemicals and bomb-making equipment and a car packed with explosives, said the chief of the Shin Bet security service, who by law cannot be identified.

The arrested militants "represented the infrastructure of the military wing of Hamas in the West Bank," he said. "This will prevent future attacks."

Hamas has unleashed dozens of deadly attacks on Israelis in its campaign to halt the Israel-PLO peace process, and there have been warnings in recent weeks the group would stage more suicide bombings to block the signing of an expanded autonomy agreement, expected by next month.

Issa revealed nothing about plans for a suicide bus bombing Monday in Jerusalem. Five people, including an American teacher, were killed in the blast.

The Shin Bet chief said after Monday's bombing, interrogators were given permission to use tougher methods, allowing them to elicit information that led to more arrests.

Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin said Wednesday if the Shin Bet had been given more leeway to extract confessions by force, the bombing could have been prevented, Israel radio reported.

Agents found assembled fertilizer bombs, vats of chemicals and bomb-making equipment in Issa's apartment in the West Bank town of Nablus, as well as forged identity cards, wigs, and skullcaps of the type worn by observant Jews.

The discovery of the lab and the arrests of militants suspected of planning attacks was a breakthrough for the Israelis. Past sweeps yielded only political activists and others loosely connected with Hamas' military wing.

The Shin Bet chief said the arrested militants had also planned to take Israeli soldiers hostage as bargaining chips for the release of Palestinian prisoners.

Issa was trained in Gaza by Yehiya Ayyash, known as "The Engineer," the No. 1 man on Israel's wanted list, Shin Bet said. Ayyash, suspected of masterminding at least six suicide bombings that have killed 76 people in Israel since April 1994, remained at large Wednesday.

Issa returned from Gaza to the West Bank six weeks ago and plotted two bus bombings, one in the Tel Aviv suburb of Ramat Gan on July 24 and the second in Jerusalem on Monday, the Shin Bet chief said.

For the Ramat Gan bombing, he recruited 20-year-old Labib Assam, a former laborer in Israel, from the West Bank village of Karyout. On the day of the blast, Issa dropped Assam off in the Tel Aviv area and told him to pick a bus at random for the attack.

A videotape found in Issa's apartment shows Assam saying goodbye to his family and friends before the attack, which killed six Israelis.

The Shin Bet chief said Issa recruited Sufian Sbeih, 26, an unemployed Hamas activist from the West Bank town of Dahariya, to carry out Monday's attack in Jerusalem. Hours before Issa was arrested on Saturday, he met with Sbeih and gave him explosives, he said.

Unidentified mourners comfort each other after the funeral of Joan Davenny in Jerusalem Wednesday. Davenny, from Woodbridge, Conn., was killed Monday in a suicide bus-bombing attack in Jerusalem. Some 200 relatives and friends, many of them crying, watched as Davenny's body, wrapped in a white prayer shawl, was lowered into a grave at Jerusalem's Givat Shaul Cemetery. Davenny supported the Israeli-PLO peace process, and her father hopes her death will not endanger the fragile agreement.

Serb demands target large portion of Bosnia

Associated Press

Gone fishin'

Former President George Bush provides some welcomed cooling refreshment to grandson Jeb Bush Tuesday, as the youngster fights a 30-pound Permit during the George Bush/Cheeca Lodge Bonefish Tournament in the Florida Keys.

Liam McDowall
Associated Press

SARAJEVO — Increasingly isolated and struggling to hold on to power, Bosnian Serb leader Radovan Karadzic made a bold if unrealistic move Wednesday to reassert his authority, demanding any peace agreement guarantee the Serbs almost two-thirds of the country.

Serbs now hold about 70 percent of Bosnia, but an international peace plan put on the table last summer would leave them with 49 percent.

It would give the remaining 51 percent to Bosnia's Muslim-led government and allied Croats.

A new U.S. initiative, temporarily halted because of the deaths Saturday of three senior officials on a road outside Sarajevo, suggests changes could be made in the maps that accompany that plan, but the overall division should remain at 51 percent to 49 percent.

"Any solution below 70 percent of the territory is painful for us," Karadzic said. "But any one below 64 percent — which we have according to land registers — is unjust."

Serbs made up about a third of Bosnia's 4.3 million people before war broke out in 1992.

"The war may end only with a fair offer which will be equally acceptable for all sides in conflict," Karadzic said on a tour of Serb-held parts of Bosnia.

He rejected any solution developed without the Bosnian Serbs. Both the United States and Russia have been trying to put together a summit of the presidents of Bosnia, Croatia and Serbia.

Serbian President Slobodan Milosevic, the region's main power-broker, has publicly withdrawn support of Karadzic in an attempt to ease U.N. sanctions slapped on Serb-led Yugoslavia for fomenting the wars in Bosnia and Croatia.

Karadzic is also weakened by his recent feud with Bosnian Serb military commander Gen. Ratko Mladic.

The U.S. peace initiative was put back on track Wednesday when President Clinton named successors to the diplomats who died in the road accident. The new diplomats include Roberts Owen, a Washington lawyer who helped form a Muslim-Croat federation in Sarajevo for the Clinton administration last March.

According to various reports, the initiative may include lifting the economic sanctions against Yugoslavia; swapping the Bosnian government-held Gorazde enclave in eastern Bosnia and land adjoining a Serb-held corridor in northern Bosnia for Serb territory around Sarajevo; international aid to rebuild Bosnia; and threats of punishment if either sides refuses.

Karadzic seems to be aware he could not expect 64 percent of Bosnia in a peace deal and could likely blame any concessions on military losses or the international community for allegedly siding with the Sarajevo government.

Karadzic said "the international community shows understanding for towns like Gorazde to be included" in a future Bosnian Serb republic.

"Gorazde will be Serb either way," he said.

ABREGO ON FBI'S MOST WANTED LIST

Drug lord states conditions for surrender in Mexico

Anita Snow
Associated Press

CIUDAD JUAREZ, Mexico — The head of one of Mexico's most powerful drug cartels is negotiating a possible surrender in exchange for a pledge by Mexico not to extradite him to the United States, a U.S. official said Wednesday.

Juan Garcia Abrego, one of the FBI's 10 most-wanted fugitives, is also asking he be jailed in the Mexican prison of his choice under the protection of his top lieutenants, the U.S. official said on condition of anonymity.

Garcia Abrego, 51, heads the Gulf Cartel, which U.S. officials claim smuggles hundreds of tons of Colombian cocaine into the United States every year and spends millions of dollars to bribe Mexican authorities.

In September 1993, Garcia Abrego was indicted in Houston on money laundering and cocaine distribution charges. Nicknamed "La Muneca," or the Doll, he is wanted on multiple charges of murder in Mexico.

In exchange for his surrender, Garcia Abrego also was asking authorities to give medical treatment to his brother, Humberto Garcia Abrego, now in jail on money laundering charges and reportedly suffering from lingering effects of a gunshot wound to the abdomen.

He also is demanding his relatives and girlfriends be allowed to keep his illicit gains. Garcia Abrego also wants one last trip to Colombia to arrange his affairs before turning himself in, the U.S. official said.

When rumors of a negotiated surrender surfaced this month, Mexican Attorney General Antonio Lozano said he had no plans to give any criminal lenient treatment in exchange for his surrender.

Nor would he allow Garcia Abrego's friends or family members to keep his ill-gotten wealth, Lozano said. "That wouldn't be done because it's against the law," he said.

Ciudad Juarez newspapers reported Mexican soldiers and police were searching for Garcia Abrego in the region last weekend. The operation ended Sunday, local reporters said.

Much of the Gulf Cartel's operations are based in Monterrey and Matamoros, near the Texas border. Garcia Abrego was born in the border town of Las Palomas, Texas.

Tropical storm hits Florida

John Pacenti
Associated Press

MIAMI — Hurricane Humberto and Tropical Storm Iris formed deep in the Atlantic today, and as if that weren't enough, Tropical Storm Jerry — No. 10 for the season — was born off Florida's east coast and storm warnings were posted.

"We're extremely busy right now," said Colin McAdie, a forecaster at the National Hurricane Center. It was the most Atlantic storms this early in the season in decades.

With steady winds of 75 mph, Humberto was headed west-northwest at about 12 mph and was expected to maintain that speed through today. It was likely to strengthen but is too far at sea to predict its long-term track.

At 11 a.m., Humberto was centered about 950 miles west of the Cape Verde Islands off the coast of Senegal in West Africa. Humberto had become a tropical storm on Tuesday.

"It's still a lot of uncertainty," said Max Mayfield, a forecaster at the National Hurricane Center. Meanwhile, the season's 10th tropical depression built into Tropical Storm Iris with sustained winds of 45 mph. At 11 a.m., the center was about 490 miles east of the Lesser Antilles in the eastern Caribbean. It was moving west-northwest at about 8 mph.

"Perhaps the people of the islands will miss it," said center forecaster Lixion Avila.

At 2 p.m., Jerry joined the pack when sustained winds reached 40 mph. It was located off Jupiter Inlet north of West Palm Beach, and moving toward the northwest at 10 mph. A storm warning was issued along a 475-mile stretch of Florida's East Coast from Flagler Beach north of Daytona Beach to Deerfield Beach north of Fort Lauderdale.

Areas of disturbed weather are defined as tropical storms, and given a name, when sustained wind reaches 39 mph. They become hurricanes of wind speeds reach 74 mph.

The Atlantic hurricane season hasn't been so active since 1936, when there were nine named storms in the Atlantic by Aug. 22, Mayfield said.

But three storms being tracked in a single day was not a record, McAdie said: Seven times in the past 103 years, there have been four Atlantic storms in existence on the same day.

Jury search starts for 2nd Menendez trial

Jeff Meyer
Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — A judge Wednesday began questioning prospective jurors for the second trial of Erik and Lyle Menendez, brothers charged with the 1989 shotgun slayings of their millionaire parents, potential

The selection process, which attorneys expect to take several weeks, was held in the same suburban Van Nuys courtroom where the brothers' first trial ended in deadlocked juries last year.

About 180 people reported as potential jurors.

About half were excused for hardship reasons, while 95 were ordered back Friday for the next round of questioning.

Defense attorneys worry heavy media coverage of the first trial will make it extremely difficult to choose a jury.

In an acknowledgement of those concerns, Superior Court Judge Stanley Weisberg has ordered two more 250-member panels to be ready. Today, another group of potential jurors will be screened.

Lyle, 27, and Erik, 24, are charged with the Aug. 20, 1989, murders of Jose and Kitty Menendez.

The couple was found in a blood-drenched room in the family's Beverly Hills mansion.

The brothers first denied the killings but later confessed, contending they shot their father, an entertainment executive, and their mother because they feared the two were going to kill them after years of sexual and mental abuse.

Prosecutors contend the deaths were motivated by the siblings' lust for the family's $15 million fortune.

The brothers' first trial ended in January 1994, when jurors split over murder and lesser manslaughter charges.

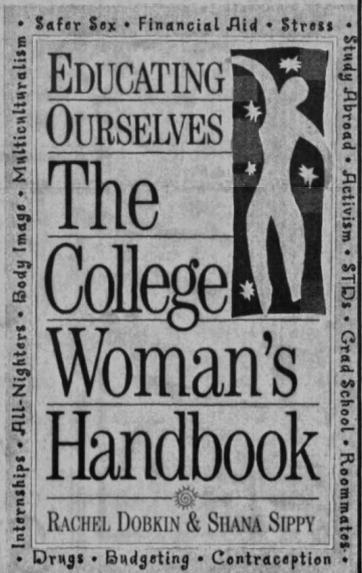

Prosecutors, who are seeking the death penalty for the brothers, plan to attack the defense contention that relentless abuse by Jose Menendez drove the two into such a state of terror that they feared for their lives.

Iraq no longer regional danger

Jamal Halaby
Associated Press

AMMAN, Jordan — The United Nations' chief arms inspector asserted Wednesday that Iraq no longer poses a regional military threat, but said he remained wary of Iraq's claims to have destroyed all its weapons of mass destruction.

Rolf Ekeus, head of the U.N. Special Commission on Iraq, said he received information on Iraqi weapons programs from a defector, Lt. Gen. Hussein Kamel al-Majid, in a two-hour meeting Monday. He declined to give details.

Al-Majid, a son-in-law of Saddam Hussein and the architect of Iraq's clandestine network to acquire weapons of mass destruction in the 1980s, defected to Jordan on Aug. 8, threatening to divulge all he knew to U.N. experts.

Ekeus told a news conference Wednesday the Baghdad regime has promised him "100 percent implementation" of the terms of the cease-fire resolution that halted the 1991 Gulf War.

If Iraq makes good on that promise, the U.N. Security Council would have to consider lifting the oil and trade embargo imposed on Iraq after it invaded Kuwait in August 1990.

Ekeus visited Baghdad and Amman over the past week, after al-Majid's threat prompted the Iraqi regime to hand over more information.

"I don't think that Iraq could constitute a threat to the region," Ekeus said before leaving Jordan Wednesday.

He said Iraq could no longer strike its neighbors with chemical weapons or long-range missiles.

But, he cautioned, the United Nations must verify the biological weapons data.

"We must verify these statements. We cannot take it at face value. Every time we've done that before, we've been misled," Ekeus said.

In Washington, State Department spokesman David Johnson concurred.

"Iraq must demonstrate its peaceful intentions by complying with all its obligations," he said, including accounting for those missing or killed in the invasion of Kuwait, returning property seized there, and ending its involvement in terrorism.

"Iraq has yet to fulfill any of these obligations," Johnson said.

Chinese hot line assists women with concerns

Renee Schoof
Associated Press

BEIJING — The doctor volunteering at China's first women's hot line bends intently over a speaker phone as one caller after another describes the difficulties of being a woman in China.

"Pour out your secret sorrows," urges a poster on the wall. Dr. Ma Xieonian from the National Research Institute for Family Planning listens patiently as the sorrows flow.

A 43-year-old woman calls in tears, barely able to speak. "It's nothing, really," she stammers. Ma coaxes, and she describes her husband's strict rules that keep her indoors and her fears about his apparent lack of interest in sex.

Other callers tell of domestic violence and sexual harassment. Still others worry their husbands, with more money to spend, are seeing prostitutes or mistresses. Some want more sexual satisfaction. Or equal opportunity for a job.

The callers' voices are broadcast through the speakers of a cassette player in a room furnished with little more than a desk and a coat rack. Ma, a middle-aged man with a slightly graying crewcut, keeps his gaze on the phone.

"Today's topic is sex, but you can talk about any problem," Ma tells another caller. Hot line topics also include law, marriage and health.

China's approximately 30 hot lines, all started within the past three years, have helped bring many social problems into public debate. Discussions also have extended to radio talk shows and the state-run press.

Associated Press

Chinese soldiers clean a road divider near their barracks in Beijing Wednesday. Residents of Beijing from all walks of life have been mobilized to clean up the city in the buildup to the U.N. World Conference on Women, which opens Sept. 4. The conference, and the associated Non-Governmental Organizations Forum on Women, are expected to draw nearly 50,000 participants.

China will be under international scrutiny for its women's rights record when it plays host to the U.N. World Conference on Women, Sept. 4-15, and a companion meeting of activist organizations.

China has accomplished much for women, but oppression and inequalities endure.

Most egregious is the return of an old evil, the kidnapping of thousands of rural women each year for sale as wives or prostitutes.

Some women who are freed tell of being raped, locked up and beaten, according to Chinese newspaper reports.

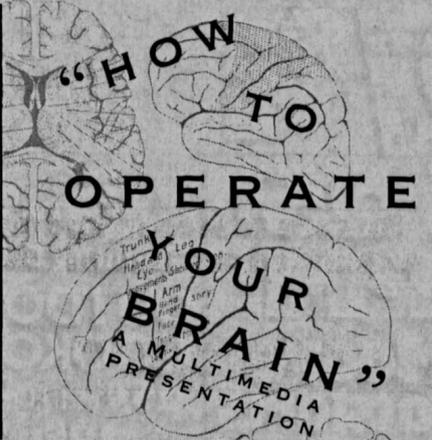

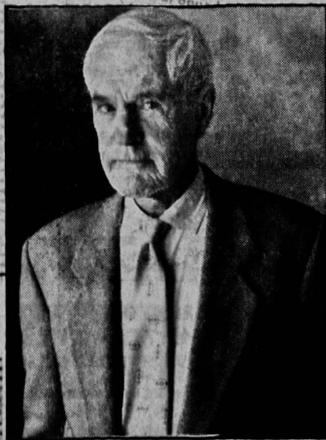

Many are young rural girls who are tricked with promises of good jobs, but instead are held in bondage and shipped to remote villages.

Alabama athletics director steps down

TUSCALOOSA, Ala. (AP) — Alabama athletics director Hootie Ingram resigned Wednesday after having been rebuked by the NCAA for his part in the university being placed on probation.

Ingram said he could no longer be an "asset" to the school, where he has been athletic director for six years. He will spend the final two years of his contract overseeing the expansion of the football stadium.

Ingram, reading softly from a statement while the football team practiced on a field across Bryant Drive, said he will remain athletic director until a replacement is found, but "under no circumstances will I continue beyond 90 days."

Ingram was one of several Alabama athletic officials chided by the NCAA in its Aug. 2 report detailing penalties and sanctions. Faculty athletics adviser Tom Jones resigned after the penalties were announced.

"The infractions committee report compels me to the conclusion that I can no longer be an asset to the program as director of athletics," Ingram said. "No tradition at Alabama is more cherished than that of winning within the rules."

Legendary announcer Rizzuto retires

NEW YORK (AP) — Holy cow! After thinking it over for five days, Phil Rizzuto has decided to stick by his decision to end his 39-year broadcasting career with the New York Yankees.

"It's time for me to go," he said. "I haven't been on top of the game like I used to."

Rizzuto, a Hall of Fame shortstop with the Yankees, said last Friday he was quitting partly because WPIX-TV wouldn't let him attend former teammate Mickey Mantle's funeral in Dallas.

But the beloved broadcaster backed away from that statement, saying he had initially agreed with the station's decision to send fellow broadcaster Bobby Murcer to represent WPIX at the funeral.

However, after watching Mantle's funeral on television last Tuesday, Rizzuto became so upset that he had to leave the booth during a telecast that night.

"When I saw the services, I realized what a big mistake I had made (by not attending the funeral)," said Rizzuto, who will turn 78 next month. "But I had nobody to blame but myself."

Guy gears up for one final run

Chris Snider
The Daily Iowan

Nobody knows adversity better than Willie Guy.

The speedster from Memphis, Tenn., who was supposed to rejuvenate the Hawkeye offense with great kick returns and long touchdown receptions, has seen his stock rise and fall since stepping foot on campus in the fall of 1992.

For the most part, though, Guy's stock has fallen.

Guy's high school football accolades included being named USA Today all-American, Tennessee's Mr. Football, SuperPrep all-American and Dixie Offensive Player of the Year, Gatorade state Player of the Year, and the No. 1 prospect in the nation by the Dallas Times-Herald.

All This Week in the DI

Despite those prestigious national honors, Guy's performance at Iowa has been sporadic at best, and at times, just plain frustrating.

Guy has never started a game at Iowa, but as the 1995 season looms near, there is a new faith and hope that he'll finally live up to the lofty expectations placed on him nearly four years ago.

"It's my last go around as a Hawkeye," says Guy, who caught seven passes for 108 yards and a touchdown in 1994. "I'm really looking forward to playing a lot more, being a lot more involved in the offense, and I'm just hoping I'll make big things happen for the Hawks this year."

There's no question fans will still

Senior tight end Scott Slutzker, left, and senior receiver Willie Guy will be primary targets for starting quarterback Matt Sherman.

Slutzker finds his niche as go-to guy

Mike Triplett
The Daily Iowan

Iowa's offense has its share of game-breakers, but when it comes to a first-down or goal-to-go situation, one man fits the bill.

"When you need the tough yards, I look at Scott in the huddle and he says, 'Give me the ball.' That's the kind of person he is and that's the kind of receiver he's going to be," Hawkeye quarterback Matt Sherman says of senior tight end Scott Slutzker.

"He might be the third or fourth option, but if you can't find anyone else, throw it to Scott because he's going to make the catch and he's going to make some extra yards. He has the desire in his heart to be the very best."

Slutzker caught 56 passes for 686 yards and four touchdowns during the last two seasons. He was second on the team with 27 receptions as a junior despite an ankle injury that kept him from catching a pass during a four-game stretch in which he missed two games.

But Slutzker says he is 100 percent healthy now and big things

"I want the ball all the time. I want the ball in pressure situations — you know, no time left on the clock."

Scott Slutzker, Hawkeye tight end are expected from him. At least one publication, Athlon Football, lists the 6-foot-5, 249-pounder as its third-team all-America tight end. Both Sherman and back-up quarterback Ryan Driscoll agree he has earned that kind of recognition.

"Even though I do have confidence in everyone, I think Scott is apt to make the big play," Driscoll says. "He's very talented, he's a very big target and he's a gamer."

"I think last year in my six games, Scott was the leading receiver when I was playing. I loved using that tight end and he's a great target who very rarely drops it. He's clutch."

Slutzker is certainly pleased

Hawks are getting no respect

The preseason publications are out, and boy is it getting knee deep in here.

I guess being an Iowa fan I'm used to getting screwed in the preseason. Psychic Friends Network publications. In fact, most people know Iowa is that fine state that grows potatoes.

I'm not saying Iowa will win the Big Ten, but being picked just ahead of Minnesota and Northwestern just ain't right. Most of these know-it-all magazines have Wisconsin, Michigan State, Indiana and even Purdue ahead of us. So before these experts send these Big Ten powerhouses howling ahead of the Hawkeyes, let's look at some quick facts:

— Michigan State has lost the General that was George Perles for the last 12 years and now must follow a rookie head coach with the same attitude. Military camps don't produce winning football teams. If they did we all would be wearing Army and Navy Starter apparel.

— Wisconsin has seen the departure of 26 seniors in the last two years and must look elsewhere for leadership. Iowa hasn't lost to Wisconsin since 1976, so the cheeseheads will eat limburger that day.

— Purdue. Enough said.

— Indiana is in our backyard

Shaq and Hakeem will battle for big bucks

John Curran
Associated Press

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. — Forget the NBA Finals. This time it's a one-on-one, pay-for-view hype event. Oh yes, and this time, there's a cool million on the line.

Shaquille O'Neal of the Orlando Magic and Hakeem Olajuwon of the Houston Rockets, who went face to face in the NBA Finals swept by Houston, will play each other Sept. 30 at Trump Taj Mahal Casino Resort, it was announced Wednesday.

The purse: $1 million. The event at the Trump Taj Mahal Casino Resort will be part heavyweight prize fight, part skins game, part pickup game dubbed "War on the Floor."

The NBA, which has no collective bargaining agreement and is in the midst of a lockout, is taking a hands-off approach, said deputy commissioner Russ Granik.

"In view of the lockout, the NBA will not be involved in this event nor take steps to prevent it," he said.

The format will be 10 rounds, or games, of two minutes apiece under "winner's out" rules. That is, the player who scores gets the ball again at the top of the key.

The winner of each round will get $100,000. In the event of a tied round, the money will roll over to the next round. Whoever takes the most rounds wins.

At 7-foot, 255 pounds, the 11-year veteran Olajuwon would appear to be the underdog to the 7-1, 303-pound O'Neal, a three-year NBA veteran.

But Las Vegas oddsmaker Jimmy Vaccaro called Olajuwon a 2-1 favorite.

"He shoots better from the outside, he's got better moves inside and he's at least a 3-to-1 favorite in foul shooting," Vaccaro said. He said O'Neal's size advantage "means nothing."

In the Finals, Olajuwon averaged 32.8 points and had 46 rebounds and eight blocks. O'Neal averaged 28.0 points with 50 rebounds and 10 blocks.

"The building will shake and no basketball is safe when these two backboard giants collide one-on-one," said McAdory Lipscomb, general manager of Showtime Event Television, the pay-per-view promoter.

70 ATTEND MEETING

Novice squad key to crew excellence

David Schwartz
The Daily Iowan

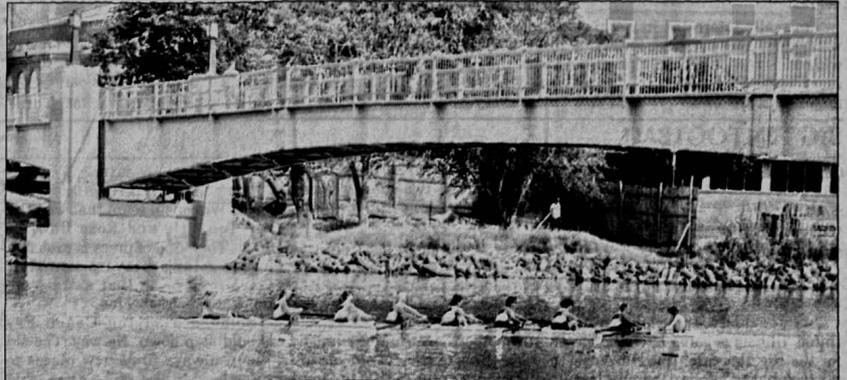

So much for making the first season a year to merely test the waters.

With Lisa Glenn as novice head coach and Marny Levinson as coxswain, crew finished their inaugural season with novice-level wins at the Midwest Championship and East Coast Championship.

Speaking at an informational meeting for potential walk-ons Wednesday afternoon, Glenn said the novice squad can make one other claim.

"We're obviously the best in the Big Ten," she proclaimed.

Glenn said crew has suffered some growing pains, but that was to be expected with such a young program. However, she's learned from last year's mistakes.

"In order to have a healthy team, you have to have the numbers on the novice team," Glenn said. "Last year was difficult in that way because people didn't know much about rowing. We're much better off this year."

Glenn said building a varsity program from scratch involves working from the ground up. In order for crew to excel at the varsity level, it must first produce a quality novice program.

"A lot of building a program is getting people involved, and that's what we're trying to do," Glenn said.

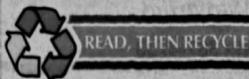

Thus far, the novice squad is forging a strong recruiting class. Seventy women showed up

Wednesday to see a rowing demonstration at the IMU as Glenn and Levinson told their apprentices what they could expect from crew.

"You need to be optimistic," she said. "More importantly, you also need to be optimistic when things don't look promising."

Levinson, a sophomore, didn't mince words about her first year on

San Diego running back Natrone Means looks to run past Kansas City's Dale Carter last season in San Diego.

Means aims to avenge not-so-Super Sunday

Bernie Wilson
Associated Press

SAN DIEGO — The biggest season ever for a San Diego Chargers' running back ended humbly along one sideline of Miami's Joe Robbie Stadium.

That's where Natrone Means spent most of the second half of last year's Super Bowl, at times yelling at his teammates as the embarrassment mounted.

Final score: 49ers 49, Chargers 26. Means' contribution: 33 yards on 13 carries.

Not only was the shifty, powerful back held in check, but Steve Young, otherwise busy destroying San Diego's secondary, outrushed Means by 16 yards.

"I think about that, the longest day in my life," says Means, who established himself as one of the NFL's leading backs with 1,350 regular-season yards but couldn't save the Chargers in the Super Bowl.

Means became largely an afterthought as the Chargers fell behind, 14-0, in the first five minutes. Sure, he scored San Diego's first touchdown, but the 49ers responded by scoring two more, and the Chargers had to rely on their passing game.

"I thought I'd basically enjoy the time, but all I was doing was sitting there watching," Means says. "Watching the 49ers run up and down the field scoring touchdowns."

As he showed in his phenomenal 1994 season, Means normally has a lot to do with San Diego's success. Besides setting the team's single-season rushing record, he scored 12 TDs and tallied five straight 100-yard games.

Now comes the encore year, when the Chargers play the NFL's toughest schedule. And everyone knows what Means can do, so much so that teams started bringing up a safety last year, keeping him from cracking the 100-yard mark in the final seven games.

"I would expect it probably wouldn't be much different than last year," General Manager Bobby Beathard says.

Means had an 11-day training camp hold-out, which he ended by accepting a new four-year, $7.3 million contract. He began by asking for more money than Barry Sanders.

The Chargers weren't about to pay that kind of cash.

BASEBALL ROUNDUP

Sosa surge continues as Cubs gut Marlins

Associated Press

CHICAGO — Sammy Sosa hit two of the Cubs' five homers in a 10-2 victory over Florida on Wednesday, giving him six in as many games.

Sosa's 25th and 26th homers came in the first and third off David Weathers (3-5). Scott Servais and Jose Hernandez hit consecutive homers in the fourth off Weathers, who had allowed only four homers this season.

Shawn Dunston hit a two-run shot in the seventh off reliever Buddy Groom.

Jaime Navarro (11-5) allowed six hits, walked one and struck out eight in eight innings.

Giants 3, Mets 2

The Giants, on Deion Sanders' leadoff homer and Barry Bonds' two-run double, took a one-run lead into the ninth.

Mulholland (3-10) had retired 15 straight batters, and not allowed a hit since the second, when he got two strikes on Chris Jones with two outs.

Jones then hit an opposite-field drive to right, and had already gone into his home run trot. First base umpire Gary Darling ruled it a foul ball, setting off a long and loud argument by Mets manager Dallas Green. Television replays seemed to show the ball deflected off the foul pole, which would have made it a home run.

Mulholland ended the game on the next pitch, striking out Jones on a checked-swing.

Dodgers 5, Expos 0

MONTREAL — Mike Piazza hit his fourth homer in three games and Ramon Martinez threw a five-hitter as the Los Angeles Dodgers beat the Expos, their first sweep in Montreal since 1980.

The Dodgers, who dropped four straight to start their 11-game road trip, hit eight homers and collected 35 hits in the three-game series.

Martinez (13-8) threw his third complete game and second shutout. He didn't allow a hit after the third, retiring 16 of the last 19 batters.

Tim Wallach had a two-run homer in the second off Jeff Fassero (12-10) and Piazza hit his 22nd in the sixth. Roberto Kelly and Chad Fonville added RBI singles.

Phillies 12, Padres 8

PHILADELPHIA — Jim Eisenreich hit a pinch-hit grand slam and pitcher Tyler Green added a three-run homer as the Philadelphia Phillies beat the San Diego Padres.

The Phillies have won six of their last seven and seven of nine, while the Padres lost for only the fourth time in 12 games.

The Phillies scored seven runs in the first, a season high for an inning, to lead 7-1. Green's homer capped the inning.

Braves 6, Astros 2

HOUSTON — Kent Mercker held Houston to two hits over seven innings and Javier Lopez drove in the go-ahead run with a fifth-inning single.

The Braves swept the three-game series and handed Houston its seventh straight loss and 14th in 17 games.

Mercker (7-8) allowed two hits in the second when James Mouton tripled and scored on Ricky Gutierrez's single. He allowed only three more baserunners, all on walks, and struck out four.

Lopez and Jeff Blauser each went 3-for-5 and Lopez also had an RBI-single in the eighth.

Reds 3, Cardinals 1

ST. LOUIS — David Wells threw a six-hitter and Jerome Walton homered to lead off the game as the Reds snapped a two-game losing streak.

Wells is 3-1 since being obtained in a trade with Detroit July 31 and is 13-4 for the season.

The left-hander struck out six and walked two in his first NL complete game.

Walton's sixth homer was the fourth time he led off a game that way this season.

Allen Watson (5-5) did not allow another hit until the fifth when the Reds scored two runs on Mark Lewis' double.

The Cardinals scored in the fifth on consecutive doubles by David Bell and Scott Cooper.

A's 2, Yankees 1

OAKLAND, Calif. — Steve Wojciechowski allowed four hits over 5 1/2 innings as Oakland completed a three-game sweep of New York.

Brent Gates, who extended his hitting streak to a career-high 13 games with two singles, and Eric Hefland had RBI singles in the fourth for the Athletics.

Wade Boggs had a pinch-hit RBI single in the sixth, his 2,500th career hit, for the New York run.

Oakland, which has won four straight to match its season high, swept its third series of the season. The Yankees, who matched their season worst with five straight losses, have dropped 11 of 15 and have been swept four times this year.

Tigers 7, White Sox 5

DETROIT — Lou Whitaker's

three-run pinch homer in the ninth inning lifted the Detroit Tigers to a victory over Chicago, preventing a sweep of the three-game series by the White Sox.

Roberto Hernandez (2-6), who started the ninth inning seeking his 22nd save, gave up an infield single to Allen Trammell. Milt Cuyler reached on a sacrifice bunt, and Trammell went to third on a throwing error by Robin Ventura, his second, and one of four White Sox errors in the game.

Rangers 9, Twins 1

ARLINGTON, Texas — Juan Gonzalez and Ivan Rodriguez homered and Bobby Witt scattered nine hits as the Texas Rangers rolled to a victory over the Minnesota Twins.

Rookie Jose Parra (1-2) took the loss for the Twins, giving up nine hits, two of them homers, and eight runs in four-plus innings.

Texas hit Parra early and often as Bobby Witt coasted to his second victory in three decisions since joining the Rangers.

Indians 6, Blue Jays 5

TORONTO — Albert Belle's homer triggered a three-run sixth inning as the Cleveland Indians rallied to beat the Toronto Blue Jays.

Albert Belle sent Giovanni Carrara's first pitch in the sixth over the wall in left, his 29th of the season, closing Toronto's lead to 5-4.

The Indians loaded the bases off Carrara (1-3) with a pair of walks and a single.

Kenny Lofton's fielder's-choice grounder drove in the tying run and the Indians scored the winner on a wild pitch by reliever Jim Thome.

Jim Poole (3-3) pitched 1 1/3 perfect innings for the win, striking out a pair of batters. Jose Mesa pitched the ninth for his 38th save in 38 chances, extending his major-league record for consecutive saves.

Live music scene heats up with myriad local veterans

Clint Marsh
The Daily Iowan

In a music scene filled with punk, funk, blues and jazz, the hard-edged sound of rock has emerged as the choice genre for people looking for the fix only provided by live music.

In recent years, a handful of local rock bands have reclaimed the throne in a town previously dominated by folk and blues acts.

Scrid

Scrid wins the award for most focused local band, playing up to six shows a month in Iowa City. The Scrid sound is hard-edged and fast enough to dance the recommended "Two-Toed Dance of Doom." Ask vocalist Craig Owsley to demonstrate it next time you see Scrid live. More recently, Scrid has begun to stretch its tentacles across the Midwest, playing gigs from Madison to Missouri. Quintessential Scrid moment: Early this summer, Owsley borrowed a whip from a crowd member and lashed guitarist Brad Carter.

Dagobah

The septuplet known as Dagobah brings Iowa City rock and funk with tongue firmly in cheek. Guitarist Pat Willis said the best description ever given the band was "Mardi Gras meets Woodstock." From its opening Star Wars soundtrack music to Nirvana remakes, Dagobah is out to entertain 200 percent. Trumpet and sax keep the band brassy, and its percussion section sometimes engulfs the band, transforming it into the hardest-working cowbell orchestra this side of the Kessel Run. Look for fliers advertising upcoming shows at Gabe's, 330 E. Washington St.; Gunnerz, 123 E. Washington St.; or the Que Sports Bar, 211 Iowa Ave.

Ambush #5

The squirrely rock outfit Ambush #5 has risen steadily in popularity over the past few months. The departure of vocalist

Tallie Trimble brought the band to three members recently, but seems to have helped the members work on a definite sound. Ambush #5's music has always been passionate, and the lack of the ethereal Trimble has given the group a chance to focus on more gut-wrenching guitar songs. Bassist Joyce Ventimiglia said the band plays Gunnerz or Gabe's once a month, but prefers to play weddings and bar mitzvahs. Ventimiglia said "sensitive, uncommunicative guys with ponytails" are the type of crowd Ambush #5 usually draws, adding with a grin that "chicks dig us."

Los Diablos Del Sol

Like country music but want to delve into something with more bite? Try Los Diablos Del Sol. Nick Diabolo's latest creation squeezes out boot-stompin' Southern-fried rock for all who come to the band's psychobilly shows. It can be tough to find their shows, but an evening with Los Diablos Del Sol is well worth the price. Corner

Nick Diabolo downtown and grill him for upcoming show dates. He's easily identifiable by his patented minimalist goatee and bug-eye shades.

Carmine

The five-piece wonder known as Carmine operated under the moniker No Flag only a year ago, but changed the name when people seemed to draw pesky Henry Rollins connections. None of that here: With the trademark trumpet and violin thrown into the mix, Carmine's sound breaks the mold of other bands around town. It has played Gabe's, Gunnerz and the Que in the past and will no doubt continue. Eighty percent of the band sings, and frontman Bill Cave continues to dance as if his knees were sewn together.

Thee Duma

Thee Duma has also been gaining more attention. A recent summation of vocalist Ethan Richeson sounding "like a Russian" See BANDS, Page 4C

BAND ENJOYS FAME

Hootie offers 'alternative' for alternative-rock fans

Kira Billik
Associated Press

PHILADELPHIA — He's no Kurt Cobain, whose despondence over the pressures of fame contributed to his suicide. He's no media-shy Eddie Vedder, who won't make videos anymore for fear of more notoriety.

He is down-home Darius Rucker, who's pleased as punch about the enormous success he's having leading the South Carolina quartet Hootie and the Blowfish to multi-platinum status.

"I'm just having a blast," said Rucker. "I don't see how people can not have fun when the one thing you wanted your whole life you finally achieved. How can you not be happy?"

The band's sunny outlook partly comes from a strong Southern upbringing.

"We all love our families," said the 29-year-old Rucker in an interview from Austin, Texas, where the band had stopped for a concert during their summer tour.

"We have no stories to go on 'Oprah Winfrey' and tell. ... We grew up happy and we're still happy, so I guess we write the songs we do write."

Hootie's debut LP for Atlantic Records, Cracked Rear View, has been entrenched atop Billboard's album charts for a good portion of the year with sales of more than 6 million. Their top 10 singles, "Hold My Hand" and "Let Her Cry," ruled radio formats from alternative to country. The follow-up, "Only Wanna Be With You," looks to be doing the same.

Rucker's explanation for all this, aside from exhaustive touring that included some 300 dates last year?

"There's no symbolism in our songs," he said. "We say exactly what we think and what we feel."

Great taste, less thrilling Bars cater to variety of student boozers

Moira Crowley
The Daily Iowan

Trashy, classy, provocative, obnoxious and dirty — only a few of the possible words to use when describing Iowa City's taverns and the people who breathe life into them.

Ironically, the most tasteful and stylish bars in town are the least populated. Their floors are hardwood, their walls are decorated with colorful prints and their clientele prefer quality to quantity when it comes to alcohol.

Sanctuary Restaurant & Pub, 405 S. Gilbert St., is a gilt-edged addition to the downtown bar scene. Not only does it serve excellent food and offer more than 30 different kinds of imported beer, a table is always available and the music is never too loud. A beautiful place to enjoy good beer and better conversation.

Fitzpatrick's, 525 S. Gilbert St., harbors a select group of mild-mannered patrons who enjoy the small Irish bar and its famous micro-brews. UI senior Jason Burdick, sipping a Guinness, said "Fitzie's," his favorite place to drink, kills all the downtown bars with its superior beer and scintillating crowd.

"I can't drink the beer at Vito's anymore," he said. "It's too watery and too light. And there's too much testosterone downtown."

The Dublin Underground, 5 S. Dubuque St., is a well-guarded secret hidden in the belly of Iowa City's bar district. Irish paraphernalia cover the walls, and if one is lucky enough to find an available table, this small bar provides a good place to drink, talk and listen to the Chieftans. No hip-hop allowed.

Joe's Place, 115 Iowa Ave., is the second-oldest bar in Iowa City, and the legacies of those who have guzzled cold ones there before are etched — literally — in the wooden booths. Joe's has aged gracefully, and every bit of gritty residue tells a story about a time when gentlemen wore their hats forward and ties were mandatory. Iowa City resident Jeff Hurd said Joe's is the closest thing to "Cheers" in town.

"I've been a regular here for a while," he said. "You get to know everybody."

The first thing a person does when they walk into The Deadwood, 6 S. Dubuque St., is to stumble aimlessly until their eyes adjust to the smoky darkness. After vision is recovered, patrons slip into plush vinyl booths and order a beer.

The Deadwood oozes every characteristic making a bar spe-

The Que Sports Bar, 211 Iowa Ave., is a common place for students to hang out and relax. From left, "Vinnie," UI junior Lee Hodson and UI sophomore Shawn Makowski spend Tuesday night playing pool and drinking beer.

Dubuque St., can all be found next to any suburban shopping mall across the United States. Top 40 music from the '70s, '80s and '90s blares from the jukebox and people play pool and drink Miller Lite. No offense, no intrigue.

Gabe's, 330 E. Washington St., is both offensive and intriguing. One of the best places in town to hear live music with an atmosphere so seductive, people don't seem to care that all the tables are usually taken. Gabe's patrons are diehard and insist the bar is not the den of thieves it's reputed to be. Iowa City resident Troy Eustice said everything about Gabe's is unique and said no label can be pinned on the bar.

"The crowd at Gabe's is obviously more diverse," he said. "People come to here to see bands, drink beer and mellow out."

If mellow is not the mood you seek, several downtown bars specialize in high adventure, dance music and big-screen televisions.

Vito's, 118 E. College St.; Union Bar, 121 E. College St.; The Airliner, 22 S. Clinton St.; the Sports Column, 12 S. Dubuque St.; and Micky's, 11 S. Dubuque St., are card-carrying members of the knee-deep, J Crew, greek genre of bars.

same mold. The men have short hair and the women have long locks, and they shine like the sun without mussing their outfits with beer spills and sweat.

UI senior Angela Hendrichsen, an intrinsically good-looking blonde, said The Airliner is her favorite bar and has the best-looking people.

"The atmosphere is very casual, and everyone wants to have a good time," she said.

The Union is a lot like others, but after a night of sweating on the dance floor, the high-maintenance, put-together look has gone to hell. Also, the Union lets in 19- and 20-year-olds.

The coolest thing about The Sports Column is the stuffed moose head on the wall.

The tie for last place on the Iowa City bar totem pole is occupied by The Field House bar, 111 E. College St., and One-Eyed Jake's, 18-20 S. Clinton St. Most people flinch after admitting they drank at either of these places, and some proudly boast they have never set foot in them before.

Both places ooze sexuality — but not sensuality — and a person can feel lecherous stares penetrate their body the minute they walk through the doors. UI junior Sunny Zoeckler, a waitress at The Field House, said the bar does not deserve its bad reputation.

"It's all what you make of it," she said. "If you come here to meet guys or to dance, it's really easygoing."

It takes more than a six-pack and the back seat of a car to have a fun date in Iowa City.

While most Iowa City residents prefer to avoid "The Dating Game" and "Love Connection" antics when they date, there's a distinct flavor to Iowa City dating not readily apparent to newcomers. Think miniature golf, casual group encounters at local bars and steamy episodes involving pizza and other food items.

For the uninitiated and the lonely, we provide a brief guide to the finer points of having fun with your object of desire.

"My idea of a good date is finding someone with a pulse and a brain," said UI alumna Heather Willard. Although she disc jockeys "80s Night" at Maxie's, 1920 Keokuk St., Willard steers clear of bars when looking for a good time.

"You can't go to the bars because you're a big ol' T-bone walking around. It's a meat market," she said.

Willard suggested walks by the Iowa River and movies as better ways to spend a date, and she advises men not to talk too much.

Recalling one particularly bad date, she said the guy talked about himself the whole time.

"And he asked me to pay," she added.

Dating in Iowa City tends to split in two directions — active and passive. Getting physical on a date is a great way to get acquainted, according to Jim Gothers, a manager at Active Endeavors, 138 S. Clinton St. The downtown sporting-goods store rents Rollerblades for $12 for an entire day, plus a $100 deposit, and Gothers said many couples camp, Rollerblade and mountain bike in lieu of the more traditional dinner-and-movie date.

"It's a great way to get to know someone," Gothers said. "Sometimes it can be kinda stressful mountain biking with someone, so you can see them under a different situation other than just kicking back and eating a salad."

Even marriage shouldn't dampen the dating spirit, said Melissa Hinchshaw, a first-year pharmacy student. She and her husband like "more non-drinking activities closer to campus, like bowling and miniature golf."

For a truly athletic bout of bowling, Iowa City offers two bowling alleys: Plamor Lanes and Kegler Lounge, 1555 First Ave., and Colonial Bowling Lanes, 2253 Old Highway 218 South, which also offers indoor miniature golf.

Gunnerz to schedule up-and-coming bands

Jeffrey Katz
Daily Iowan

Last year the only place in Iowa City to listen to a variety of live music was Gabe's, but this summer a new professional live music club opened, vying for the attention of people craving the sounds of live tunes.

Gunnerz co-owner Todd Gefallen said his club, at 123 E. Washington St., tries not to directly compete with their counterpart on the live music scene.

"If (Gabe's) has an alternative band on a certain night, then we'll book a blues band," he said. Gefallen and Mark Grulke, also known as "Gunner," both attended the UI and said they have more at stake by owning a bar than making a quick profit. Grulke's parents mortgaged their house to finance the bar.

"There's more of an incentive to keep this place going. We're buying a house essentially," Gefallen said.

With famous acts like blues artists Koko Taylor and Junior Wells gracing the Gunnerz stage, crowds — with fists full of cash — have been flowing in.

Gefallen says the funky surroundings of Gunnerz stage — adorned with loosely hung, tie-dyed tapestries and a massive array of speakers — have attracted the attention not only of patrons but also of band members.

The walls are painted fluorescent purple and a matching purple peace symbol is engraved in the tile floor — which three or four bands have made songs about.

Gefallen said he changes the floor plan of the bar daily by moving chairs and tables around, trying to capture the perfect arrangement.

"We're working on making it more laid back. Right now it's a little rigid."

Live acts are scheduled for nearly every weeknight but Sunday, and a blues jam rocks the bar every Monday. Tuesday is Reggae night and there are specials on Red Stripe beer and drinks like the Jamaican Bumble Bee.

"We all love beer here, that's why we have so many different kinds on tap," Gefallen said, as he sat at the bar that houses 15 different tap beers.

And in addition to being the only bar in Iowa City that serves chilled Boone's Farm wine, Gunnerz has an impressive "Turkey Trail" — a collection of empty Wild Turkey bottles that line a shelf.

UI junior Justin Davis hung out at Gunnerz a lot this summer and is looking forward to bands — like Burning Spear — who will be coming to Gunnerz soon.

"It gives me a little change of pace from the other bars," he said.

Established Iowa City bands like Mango Jam and Dagobah perform regularly and draw many of the crowds, but Gunnerz is trying to give a push to lesser known acts that have smaller followings like Chuckhead from Boston and Y Store from Indiana.

UI senior Lisa Spengler thinks the club could use a little more space, but said the acts Gunnerz books make up for the lack of room.

"It's the band that counts. If a band like High and Lonesome plays it makes the place good," she said.

The upper level of the bar is empty right now but there are plans to fill it with games like foosball and billiards. Gefallen wants to put couches upstairs to give patrons a chance to hang out if they don't like the night's music or if they just want to take it easy.

Movies: some hit, some miss

Apollo 13 ***

The scenes featuring the family of astronaut Jim Lovell (Tom Hanks) are about as exciting as Hardees' collector cups, but the rest of Ron Howard's overly patriotic retelling of America's most dramatic space mission has a documentary-like realism that's fascinating and genuinely scary.

Cleues ***1/2

Amy Heckerling's new pic isn't an instant classic like "Fast Times at Ridgemont High," but it's a very likeable foray into a subculture that probably doesn't exist. Alicia Silverstone is surprisingly good as the heroine, Cher, and the ending brilliantly captures the angst of a generation while expertly sidestepping teen-flick clichés. Not! ... I mean, as if!

Dangerous Minds **

A TV movie in disguise, this dishonest piece of schlock based on LouAnne Johnson's 1992 book "My Posse Don't Do Homework," is watchable mainly due to Michelle Pfeiffer's winning performance as an idealistic teacher of rowdy inner-city youths.

The Day the Sun Turned Cold ***

A young man confesses to a policeman that he believes his mother poisoned his father to marry another man. This stately melodrama succeeds in breathing some new life into the stories of Hamlet and Oedipus. The beautiful cinematography is the best I've seen this year.

Exotica ****

Brilliant Canadian writer-director Atom Egoyan's sixth film concerns an exotic dancer, her main client and an egg-smuggler. See it for the hilariously deadpan dialogue and the truly inspired production design. The only must-see movie showing in Iowa City this weekend.

The Net **1/2

Sandra Bullock plays Angela Bennett, a computer virus-hunter who stumbles upon a program belonging to a group of computer-terrorists in this so-so thriller.

Nine Months *

This is an abysmal mishmash of broad comedy and family-values. Julianne Moore (so wonderful in "Vanya on 42nd St.") is the nice, pregnant woman and Hugh Grant is the man who can't seem to commit. The wasted cast includes Tom Arnold, Joan Cusack and Robin Williams, who seems to think he's funny.

Something to Talk About **1/2

Slight, but easy-to-watch story of a Southern woman (Julia Roberts) trying to cope with her cheating husband (Dennis Quaid) and her unsympathetic father (Robert Duvall). Look for the great Gena Rowlands making the most of her underwritten role.

Virtuosity *1/2

Denzel Washington slums as an incarcerated former cop who is released from prison to battle Sid 6.7 (Russell Crowe), a computer-program composite of guys like Hitler and Charles Manson. This excessively violent cyberthriller isn't quite the train wreck "Johnny Mnemonic" was, but unfortunately it also doesn't have that movie's quirkiness.

A Walk in the Clouds **1/2

This film from director Alfonso Arau ("Like Water For Chocolate") is plodding and melodramatic, and the love story is uninteresting, so one must look elsewhere for entertainment value. Reeves' performances resemble miniature movies in themselves.

Waterworld **

In the future, the icecaps have melted and the world is covered with ... do I have to go on? All I can say is I found it boring.

Underground coffee shop offers chance to relax and be yourself

Clint Marsh

The Daily Iowan
Iowa City's best kept coffee secret is now right under the feet of pedestrians on Linn Street.

But the Coffee Cellars, 13 S. Linn St., has got much more to offer than a good cup of java.

Coffee Cellars has begun to provide an all-ages venue for bands; a welcome change for a town whose music scene is based around bars.

"I'm glad that we can provide the all-ages venue for live music," said Steve Harshbarger, co-owner of the shop. "Playing in nothing but bars wears a bit thin after a while."

Iowa City has also been lacking an area for young people to express themselves creatively.

"We want to encourage an environment where people come and talk and think about things," Harshbarger said.

Poetry slams, a form of instant feedback poetry readings, are common at the Coffee Cellars, and local artists who have never had their pieces displayed are encouraged to bring their work to the shop.

Nestled in the old Yacht Club location, the Coffee Cellars provides a safe haven for young and old purveyors of caffeine and creativity. Being underground, the Coffee Cellars has no windows, a feature that suits Harshbarger,

"We sell good coffee and offer an environment that I hope will encourage (kids) to pursue what they want ... a place to get away a little bit, to get yourself re-connected and re-energized and then go back to it."

Coffee Cellars co-owner
Steve Harshbarger

just fine.

"Painted windows, that's okay. Real windows, forget it," said the 47-year old Harshbarger.

Growing up creating clubhouses in basements and toolsheds with his friends, Harshbarger was discouraged when each one was eventually dismantled by grown-ups

Jonathan Meester/The Daily Iowan

UI graduate student Dan Weydert visited Coffee Cellars, 13 S. Linn St., for the first time Wednesday afternoon. Weydert decided to visit Coffee Cellars after seeing some publicity around town. The shop, one of Iowa City's newest coffee houses, offers live music, poetry readings and a good cup of java.

who didn't understand the need for children to have a space of their own.

Now as an adult, Harshbarger realizes that the clubhouse dream doesn't have to die.

Originally, the Coffee Cellars was located in a basement on Washington Street. Founded in the summer of 1993 by Mark Rohm and Kirk Haug, the shop has been a collective effort between five people. Rachael Harner, Steven Fullick, and Harshbarger have joined on to keep the club alive, especially when a move became necessary.

Loyal patrons pitched in to help fix up the Linn Street basement, which remained lifeless after the demise of the Yacht Club last summer. Trash was cleaned up and carpentry repairs were done by dedicated friends of Coffee Cellars.

"This is the basement club the kids put together," Harshbarger said. "We're not the parents. I don't see that kind of moral role for us, that's not our place. We sell good coffee and offer an environment that I hope will encourage them to pursue what they want ... a place to get away a little bit, to get yourself re-connected and re-energized and then go back to it."

Harshbarger has two children of his own, both approaching their teenage years. He said that Coffee Cellars can help each young person develop their own way.

"There's a ton of stuff for all of them as a group, but what's really there for each one of them?" comes the rhetorical question from Harshbarger.

He said that Coffee Cellars is a good place to come and study, and there are nonsmoking and smoking areas so students can smoke if they prefer.

In the long run, Harshbarger hopes that each patron who visits the Coffee Cellars can take the space and make it their own.

"In some ways it's kind of a fantasy. It's what people want it to be," he said, adding later that "in some ways it's kind of organic. It seems sometimes to have a life of its own."

Group to premiere CD at Gabe's

Clint Marsh

The Daily Iowan

Rising faster than Fleischmann's yeast, Matchbook Shannon is poised and ready to stake its claim in the Iowa City music scene.

Tonight at a CD-release party at Gabe's, 330 E. Washington St., fans can hear songs live from the Omaha/Iowa City band's latest album.

Tonight's show will preview Matchbook Shannon's second album, Sob Stories, recorded at Whoop-Ass studios in Lincoln, Neb. Band members, bassist Corey Beckman, drummer Doug Kabourek and guitarist Jonathan Hansen, are pleased with the support of their recording company.

"Hence the name, it's a really great studio," Beckman said.

The release of Sob Stories is the next step on Matchbook Shannon's road to rock 'n' roll stardom. But if things were to take off for the trio, the bright lights of the big city won't entice them.

"We don't expect the band to take off big-time," Beckman said. "Especially before we get out of college."

who prefer not to break a sweat, UI senior Jon Fogarty said the barfly life has its attractions. "I'm so used to just hanging out with people, I'm not even sure what qualifies for a date anymore," he said somewhat ruefully.

Another guy who likes to take things easy is UI alumnus Adam Witte, who is working on his teaching certificate. He's a slave of monogamy who's been dating the same woman for two years, so Witte said most of their dates center around pizza and a movie.

"We are happily stuck with each other, so there's no need to 'wow' her. Course, it's a well-known fact that a large pineapple and green pepper (pizza) is pretty sexy," he noted.

Pizza also plays a big role in the dating life of Mark Allen, co-host of the KKRQ Fox morning show. He said pizza determines if he and his date have a future together.

"I always take my first date out for pizza, because if she cuts it up into little pieces and blows on it, I'm outta there," he said. "If she picks it up and goes right at it, then we usually date for years."

It may not be dinner in Paris or a stroll on a beautiful California beach, but the Iowa City dating game has quirky charms all its own. For your first big date in Iowa City, just remember to bring a few things: kneepads, Parmesan cheese and maybe even bowling shoes that match your outfit.

HOOTIE

Maybe people just want an alternative to alternative. And we just happened to come along at the right time.

What they have to say sometimes is controversial. Racism is tackled in "Drowning," a song in which they protest the Confederate flag that flies over South Carolina's Statehouse. Rucker said he's gotten death threats over it.

"To those people, the First Amendment is the most important thing until you say something that they don't like," he said. "I just don't have time for other people's ignorance. I've experienced it every day of my life, and now I just don't have time."

You can't turn on MTV or VH-1 without seeing their cheerful faces; they've been profiled twice in Rolling Stone and in US and Entertainment Weekly magazines.

Rucker does worry about overexposure, though.

"I want the next record to do well — I want the next five records to do well. I definitely don't want people to get tired of Hootie and the Blowfish."

Hootie's most distinctive feature is Rucker's honey-rich, booming baritone that's straight out of a gospel choir. Guitarist Mark Bryan, bassist Dean Felber and drummer Jim

"Soni" Sonifeld provide the sincere, sweeping rock 'n' roll tinged with blues and soul.

They met while students at the University of South Carolina. Rucker and Bryan played as a duo before hooking up with Felber. Sonifeld joined in 1989.

Some critics have poo-pooed the band's good-natured approach; one particularly sharp barb, Rucker said, kept the band laughing for an hour.

"There was this one in Details magazine," he said. "They said if music was baseball, we'd be the replacement players. I thought that was one of the greatest things I'd ever read."

Rucker has a 3 1/2-month-old daughter, Carolyn Pearl Phillips. He and the baby's mother dated for eight years but never married. He based "Let Her Cry" — in which he takes the woman's role — on their relationship, as well as the more upbeat "Only Wanna Be With You."

The album also is tinged with sadness. "Running From an Angel" tells of Rucker's troubled older brother, and he mourns his mother, Carolyn, who died of a heart attack in 1992, in "I'm Goin' Home" and "Not Even the Trees." Her death left him devastated.

"The lucky thing for me is a couple of days before she had the heart attack, she came to visit me in Columbia," he said. "I got drunk and said a lot of things that I've always wanted to say. So most of the things I wanted to say, I've already said to her."

"She deserves to be here seeing my success. She always stood by me."

It is now his daughter who gives him purpose.

"When my mom died, Hootie and the Blowfish became what I had to do, not what I wanted to do," he said. "And then we got a little bit of success and things started going for us with this record, and I didn't know who I was doing it for."

"And then Carrie came along and it was so perfect — now I know who I'm working for, who I'm living for. It's made me see things in such a different way. It made me see women in such a different way."

Being one of the year's hottest bands has its drawbacks. Rucker misses big gaps of his daughter's life by being on the road, but the grind will soon come to a brief end.

"I'm going to see her in September," he said. "We're going to go in the studio and then in December and January, I'm just going to sit and bask in the glow of her love."

monk getting his foot sawed off" was accurate, but the sound can also be likened to a demon getting worked over with a pair of pliers in the infernal city of Dis. Onstage, Richeson scrambles his fingers all over his torso, seemingly trying to get the locusts out. Watch for performance dates at Gunnerz or Gabe's on fliers around town, and try to get your hands on the band's tape Ice Age.

Matchbook Shannon

One of Iowa City's fastest rising bands didn't originate in Iowa City. Omaha's Matchbook Shannon's third and final member moved here last winter, and the band has begun to draw local crowds. The band's drummer, Doug Kabourek, describes Matchbook Shannon's music as "cuddle-punk." Matchbook Shannon is sincere and hard-working, and the band promises to make a name for itself in town and possibly regionally. Astute wall-watchers have probably noticed the Sob Stories stickers around town, advertising Matchbook Shannon's second album.

Garden of Rabbits

Along the same lines of lovability, but along much different lines of sound, comes Garden of Rabbits. The band prefers to liken its improvisational music to the band Phish, but any of a number of psychedelic groove bands comes to mind.

New Line Cinema purchases screenplay from high-schooler

Caroline Lange
Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — A number of decisions confront Jessica Kaplan as she prepares for her senior year in high school: which courses to take, what clothes to wear — and what Hollywood stars to consider for her movie.

"Powers That Be," a movie script that Kaplan, 17, wrote in eight months during her junior year, has been bought by New Line Cinema for $150,000.

The contract is a nice beginning for the film fanatic who dreams of making her own movies. While top screenwriters such as Shane Black, William Goldman and Joe Eszterhas typically earn several million dollars for scripts, a six-figure sale is unheard of for someone as young and inexperienced as Kaplan.

The material for "Powers That Be" stemmed from Kaplan's observations of her classmates. The script is about white, affluent suburban teen-agers who, in their search for an identity, latch onto hip-hop culture and gangsta rap.

"It's mindless exploitation. These rich kids get attracted to it, then get in trouble and then turn their backs on it," she said. "The whole hip-hop culture began from oppression. It's an established culture and an established reality."

Despite her frustration, Kaplan said she's not out to change her peers.

"I think writers that take on the idea they will change things are taking a real heady position which probably hurts them in the end," she said.

Kaplan's script was discovered when she was working as an intern at a video production company. Owner Jack Murphy read the script, hooked Kaplan up with a writing coach, then hired an agent who pitched the reworked screenplay to several film companies, including New Line.

The New Line production company that will film Kaplan's screenplay is Single Cell Pictures, headed by R.E.M. lead singer Michael Stipe. Co-producer Sandy Stern said the company is pursuing the three actors Kaplan had in mind for the movie: Christian Slater, Ethan Hawke and Stephen Dorff.

Kaplan is now fine-tuning her script. New Line Cinema spokesman Steve Elzer expected the film to be on screens in a year or two.
