Bungled registration records cause confusion

Because of a publishing error in the registration records, UI students think they are taking classes they haven't, or are in new buildings.

Said the 39 of 50 University of Northern Iowa students who registered during the first week of school, "we thought we were taking a class in the Marketing Department, but we didn't have a class in that department."

Said students, "we thought we were taking a class in the Accounting Department, but we didn't have a class in that department."

Elizabeth Dole talks politics in Coralville

President Dole campaigned in Coralville Thursday. - American newspaper

Kerrie Bolling, 25, Coralville, said Dole was the only one she voted for in the election. "I was impressed with her ideas, and I felt she'd make a great president," Bolling said. "She has a strong, forceful personality and she did a great job in the campaign." Bolling said she was impressed with Dole's ideas on education, healthcare and national security.

Dole also emphasized her qualifications for the presidency. "I bring to the job a lifetime of experience and a commitment to public service," Dole said. "I have a strong record of achievement in the business world, and I am dedicated to serving the country.

Dole said she has spent years working on national security issues, and she plans to continue that work as president. "I believe we must be strong and resolute in our efforts to protect our country," Dole said. "I will work to strengthen our military and our alliances, and I will lead with courage and determination.

Dole also addressed the issue of affirmative action. "I believe in the principle of equal opportunity," Dole said. "I support policies that promote diversity and inclusiveness, and I will work to ensure that all Americans have the chance to succeed.

Dole said she plans to work with Congress to pass meaningful reforms to affirmative action policies. "I believe we need to strike a balance between fairness and opportunity," Dole said. "We need a system that gives everyone a chance to compete, but also recognizes the value of diversity.

Dole's campaign reminded voters of her strong work record in business and government. "I have a proven track record of success," Dole said. "I have the experience and the leadership to lead our country.

Dole's speech was well-received by the crowd of about 200 people who attended the rally. Many expressed their support for Dole and her campaign.

Dole's visit to Coralville was part of her nationwide tour to promote her candidacy. She has been making appearances in key battleground states in an effort to build support for her campaign. Dole is running as a Republican candidate for president.

More information on Dole's campaign can be found at her official website, kellisforpresident.com. Dole's campaign has been gaining momentum in recent weeks, and she is expected to continue to build support in the months leading up to the general election.

Some kind of magical force always seems to occur during the Iowa women's tennis team when it competes in the Big Ten ITA. Two years ago, Klara Alapint was just a shy, quiet player who finished the year ranked 85 in singles and 113 in doubles. This year, Alapint is ranked 12th and 15th in the nation.

The Hawkeyes defeated the University of Miami Thursday afternoon in singles matches and later defeated the Hawkeyes 4-1 in the doubles matches. Their victory was complete and Alapint led them to victory with her third singles win in the Big Ten ITA. Alapint outscored her opponent with a 6-4, 6-1 win.

The win for the Hawkeyes was their third straight while the loss for the Fighting Irish was their second in a row.

"It was a great win for us," said Iowa head coach Mark Ellson. "Klara is just such a great player and a leader for our team. She has a great attitude and is always ready to play."

"They can't have it Friday night, the NBA list of inactive players will be the smallest it's been all season," said Shainelle O'Neal, Chris Mcdonald, Larry Johnson and Hakeem Olajuwon were expected, like Luis Luegey and Chukwuat E Bewelo, to join the bench.

Charlotte's Alonzo Mourning, who missed Thursday's game against the New Jersey Nets with the flu, is also listed as questionable for tonight's contest.

The Washington Bullets are as depleted by injuries today as they have been all season, with 5 starters and a key reserve, forward, out with injuries.

"I don't know how [the Wizards] will handle this," said Alonzo Mourning, who was on the court as scheduled for pre-game warm-ups.

Chris Mcdonald, who was supposed to start for Mourning, got his hands hacked by Miami's Matt Geiger.

"If it hits him, he's out," said Jim Calhoun, the coach.

Two key forwards, Anfernee Hardaway and Doc Rivers, are listed as questionable for tonight's game against the New Jersey Nets.

"I'd be lying," said Anfernee Hardaway, who is expected to play.

"I'm not sure," said Doc Rivers, who is expected to play."
Carolina gets first shot at the 49ers

Dear Goldberg

The Associated Press

The Panthers beat the Bears in the season opener last week. Is it possible they might not make the playoffs?

Yes, it is interesting," says Bill Goldberg. Carolina's general manager has had a big impact on the Panthers' success.

Back in the good ol' days, this kind of scenario was the key to the success of the San Francisco 49ers. They would build a winner, then have to keep the division alive. That's not going to happen in Carolina.

The Associated Press

The old adage, popularly known as the saying that they can beat something no other team can, seems to be working for the Panthers. They have beaten the Bears, Giants, and Redskins over the last few weeks.

The Associated Press

The Maryland House of Delegates will not hold hearings on whether to delay the vote and may vote on a resolution that would authorize the 49ers to conduct a public vote on a stadium.

The Associated Press

The Bills have failed to rally against the warmth of their fans. Buffalo (5-3) is favored by just one more point over an expansion team than the 49ers (2-6) still Chloe and the AFC East.

UI cracks down on rowdy fans

The Iowa student section has earned the distinction as the "unruliest in the Big Ten conference" by a referee for its actions during the Penn State game.

Roxanna Pellin
The Daily Iowan

Fans may be frisked or patted down by stadium security officials before they are admitted into the game as a result of a new policy implemented by UI administration. Athletic director Bob Bowlsby announced the policy this week after a hog's head and raw chicken were thrown on the field during Iowa's game against Penn State Oct. 21.

Iowa coach Hayden Fry has asked the fans in the student section, located in the end zone of the northwest part of the stadium, to not "be idiots" when cheering on the Hawkeyes. A beer can hit defensive end Phil Haddy, causing reaction from the fans.

"I imagine if I ever got hit by a beer can, I'd probably want to go up in the stands and offer the beer back right in their mouth," Fry said two weeks ago after the incident. "We've got 'no drinking' rules and 'no smoking' in certain places. Why can't we stop people from being idiots?"

This week Fry said he was confident the student section will clean up its act.

"Don't think any big measures need to be taken, except maybe screen them when they come in," Fry said.

At a Board in Control of Athletics meeting Oct. 26, board members discussed the idea of putting plexiglass around the student section. But Bowlsby said it was not a feasible solution to the problem.

In addition to the searches at all gates Saturday, stadium security will use video surveillance, peer security and non-uniformed spotters to seek out rowdy fans. Fans also will be prohibited from leaving the game at halftime and re-entering to cut down alcohol consumption outside the stadium.

Alcohol is prohibited in Kinnick Stadium, but fans have still found ways to smuggle in bottles and cans. Botas, backpacks, large duffel bags, coolers, "any other disruptive device" also will be banned. Those found with those items will be denied admission, the UI policy said. Anyone found with banned items inside the stadium will be prosecuted.

The word is out about Iowa's rowdy fans. After the Penn State game, which had a late 2:30 start and was televised on ABC, a Big Ten official told UI Sports Information Director Phil Haddy the student section is the "unruliest in the conference." The field was pelted by marshmallows, alcohol containers and raw meat.

David Parry, supervisor of Big Ten officials, said he heard concerns from the officials after the Penn State game. But he stressed that Iowa is not alone in its problems with fan behavior.

"I would think it's probably increasing over the years," Parry said. "It's a sign of the times. There's been a little bit of erosion of sportsmanship and fair play. I think the NCAA has taken steps with the rules to bring us back. It's a little bit of a national concern that we had better police."

- David Parry, supervisor of Big Ten officials

A fan is escorted from Kinnick Stadium during the Iowa-Penn State football game. The actions of the Iowa student section, throwing beer cans, bottles, and other items onto the field, caused reaction from Iowa coach Hayden Fry and the university.

Wiscosin brings in officers from about 16 different agencies, Miller said. Officers patrol the stadium and issue tickets if they find alcohol. Names of students are turned over to the Dean of Students.

"If you throw something on the field, you will be ejected," Miller said. "Our main thing is keeping it from coming in in the first place. We're visually inspecting people coming in. We're asking them to look in their large bags. If they refuse, we don't allow them in and they can go get a refund."

After a year-long quarterback controversy, Matt Sherman has settled into his spot as Iowa's quarterback of the future

Chris Snider
The Daily Iowan

You might say Matt Sherman was the black sheep of the family, or at least, the black and gold sheep. While his older brother and sister took paths southwest from St. Ansgar High School to Iowa State, Matt broke a bit to the east, and became a Hawkeye.

"I watched the (Iowa) games, but I never came to any," Sherman said. "All through my junior high days and early high school years, I went to all Iowa State events."

"I knew of Chuck Long and was a Chuck Long fan. I was kind of an Iowa fan, but I wasn't an avid. I had great respect for them and I always thought it would be a fun place to come play football."

And play for them Sherman has. He started his freshman season behind Ryan Driscoll as the No. 2 quarterback, but never accepted that role, and finally made his way to the top spot.

"I accepted where I was, but I didn't accept it in a way," Sherman said. "I wanted to help the team out any way I could, but at the same time, I didn't want to disrupt what was going on."

"My dream was to be the starter and be the No. 1 guy and that's what I wanted to do, so that's what I worked for."

His big break came when Driscoll went down with a season-ending injury, bumping Sherman into the No. 1 spot, a position Sherman has yet to relinquish.

"We had it at this spring," Sherman said, regarding the battle Sherman started the Hawkeyes' final two games of last season as a freshman, but starting in his first year is nothing new to him. He did the same thing in high school, where his football coach was also his father.

Sherman earned honorable mention all-conference as a freshman and went on to lead the state in passing the next three seasons.

He also started forming ties with the University of Iowa.

"I came to camp my freshman and sophomore years of high school and that's when (Iowa quarterback) Coach (Don) Patterson said I have a chance to play quarterback at the Division level," Sherman said.

"I came back the next summer and he thought I could be a quarterback here."

So Sherman, ranked as the No. 3 quarterback prospect in the Big 10 region by Bluechip Illustrated, packed his bags and became a Hawkeye.

"It was just a dream of mine and something that I wanted," he said. "I didn't even take any other visits, because I knew this is where I wanted to be."

"I had visits set up, but after I came down here, I met the guys and realized I felt good here. It's a family atmosphere. I knew I could fit in."

Now in his third year with the program, Sherman is fitting in nicely and earning the respect of his teammates.

"Every time we sat down about something, football got brought up, and it still does."

"He always pushed me every day to get better in everything I do. Don't overlook the little things. Don't take things for granted. Use your God given ability."

And the elder Sherman still pushes his son.

"I talk to him about two or three times a week at length and he tells me what I need to work on," Matt said.

"In my heart, he's still my coach and I listen to him and respect what he has to say."

That doesn't mean they always agree.

"I think I know as much as he knows, but he's been coaching for 30 years," Matt said. "His style of coaching is a little different than my philosophy now. I like to take advantage of things and he kind of sits back and likes to just run the ball and occasionally throw it."

Obviously, Rich didn't throw more than occasionally in Matt's high school playing days. Matt finished his prep career passing for 6,809 yards and 77 touchdowns.

"For a quarterback, you naturally have to be a leader," Sherman said "It's tough because I'm not an old guy. I'm a young guy. Some of the seniors naturally have that ability to take the team over leadership wise because they've been here so long."

"I'm trying to improve on my leadership ability. As a quarterback, it's very important."
"I like my Mac. I like it a lot!"

"The Macintosh" does everything I need it to do and it does it easily. Mac has so many different capabilities, I can't imagine going through college without one. I've used my Mac for different art projects for school. It's a valuable tool in creating and completing my various art projects.

Mac is the best thing going. It's easier to use than any other computer I've used. I learned the basics of the Mac in about an hour. It's fantastic. Any program is just a 'click' away. I couldn't imagine using any other computer.

Rutgers brawl brings duo to Iowa

Mike Triplett
The Daily Iowan

Two bad the Hawkeyes haven't seen Rutgers on their schedule in the last four seasons. A pair of Hawkeye seniors have had some success with the Red Raiders in the past.

It wasn't on the field, however.

Tight end Scott Slutzker and linebacker Bobby Diaco have been mainstays in the Iowa lineup for the past three seasons. They are, statistically, the two most successful seniors in the Hawkeye lineup. And they are best of friends.

Slutzker, from Hasbrouck Heights, N.J., and Diaco, from Cedar Grove, N.J., played high school football in the same state, but never met until a recruiting trip to Rutgers, where things got a little out of hand.

O.K., it escalated into a mini-brawl.

"We weren't having a good time," Diaco explained. "The guys that were hosting us weren't acting the right way. His host, I think, was a tight end and mine was a linebacker, and they weren't gonna play. And I don't think they wanted us to go to school there because, I don't know, maybe they were worried they'd lose their jobs or something."

"To make a long story short, they wanted to sit in their room and pocket our money. And we exchanged words and we just started fighting."

Slutzker also recalled the fight, saying, "Their visions of what it was like to host was a lot different than what we had."

When Diaco was asked who won the fight, he gave a smug grin.

"Who do you think?" he said.

Slutzker had already visited Iowa at the time of the Rutgers trip. Diaco visited later. But both players came to the same conclusion and here they are.

"All through our career here, we've been best friends, here at school and also at home," Slutzker said.

"We drive home together all the time. His wife and my girlfriend are good friends — usually the four of us get together once or twice a week. So we're real close."

Just like any good friends, Slutzker and Diaco are also quite competitive. Despite the fact that Slutzker was a star high school basketball player, tallying more than 1,000 points and 1,000 rebounds, Diaco still tries to get the best of him on the court.

"Yeah, he's a hacker," Slutzker said.

Diaco admitted that he was the lesser of the two on the court.

"We scrap around a lot, but I could never beat him. He's a tremendous athlete," Diaco said. "But I outwrestle him."

One place where Diaco does have a slight advantage is the golf course. They both admit that, but Slutzker warned Diaco to look out.

"I think he's a little better on the golf course, but I'm working on it. I may surprise him," he said.

Golf and basketball are taking a backseat these days while Slutzker and Diaco prepare for their final month of regular season football here at Iowa.

Slutzker said that he and Diaco often discuss their future, their dreams and goals, but lately the conversation usually surrounds putting together a strong finish to the season.

"That's one of the big things that we really need to do — to concentrate on our last four," Slutzker said.

Both players have made solid contributions as Iowa has compiled its 5-2 record this season.

Diaco, 6-foot-2, 235 pounds, leads the team in tackles for the second consecutive season with 81. His average of 11.3 tackles per game leads the Big Ten and he tallied 26 against Indiana earlier this year.

Slutzker, 6-5, 249, is second on the Hawkeyes with 20 receptions and 343 yards this year. He broke loose against Penn State with eight catches for 167 yards.

Chris Snider
The Daily Iowan

This January, Illinois linebacker Simeon Rice made a lot of Illini fans extremely happy.

“Well, I’m going to be here next year,” he said. “I’m declaring that I’m staying.”

With those words, Rice said goodbye to the NFL draft (for a year, anyway), and hello to his senior season with the Fighting Illini, despite being projected as a high first-round pick.

“I wanted to keep my distance for the year because a lot of guys leave college and I feel they are not ready,” Rice said before this season began. “I wanted one more year behind my back so I would really know I was ready.

“I’m used to doing things traditionally — four years is the traditional time you spend in college. I believe in doing things at the appropriate time. Although the money was nice and everything was right, the situation wasn’t right.”

Already a sure NFL prospect, Rice took nothing for granted his senior season, coming to fall practice faster and stronger, with 4.7 percent body fat.

But things haven’t exactly gone as planned for Rice. His team is struggling. His stats are down. His attitude seems different, less positive.

Rice wanted one more shot at a Rose Bowl, something he thought this team had a legitimate chance for. In early August, he boldly predicted Illinois would finish either first or second in the Big Ten. Things haven’t gone that well.

its final four games to even qualify for any bowl games.

“My aspiration is to go to a bowl game. I’d be very disappointed if I didn’t,” Rice said, admitting there was a sense of urgency amongst his team to win the Iowa game.

Personally, Rice has also been frustrated. His nine sacks ties him for fifth in the nation and moves him to No. 8 on the all-time NCAA list, but Rice has faced with double and triple teams all season.

In 205 plays prior to the Northwestern game, he has been double-teamed 102 times and triple-teamed four more.

After beginning the season as a rare Heisman Trophy hopeful on the defensive side of the ball, the Heisman hype has blown over.

“It’s been extra frustrating because you want to do a lot of things,” Rice said. “By being blocked by so many people, I feel I’m eliminated from the game.

“I’m not allowed to do a lot of things because I’m blocked. I’m just trying to make the best of it.”

By taking Rice out of the game (he hasn’t had a sack in the last two games), opponents have opened things up for the rest of the Fighting Illini defense.

“It forces people to step up, whether they do or not,” Rice said. “It’s just a challenge.”

“I really don’t deal with them. I just concentrate on the season,” said Rice.

“Some of them follow you around. They hang around practices.”

Rice said it’s not too hard to get them to leave him alone. He simply tells them they won’t ever represent him if they continue to

Shaw rushes into record book

Eighty-three yards. That's Iowa running back Sedrick Shaw's magic number, the amount of yards he needs to break Tony Stewart's all-time Iowa rushing record, a record that has stood for all of five years.

But Shaw, as is his style, isn't creating any hype.

"The main thing is just going out there and focusing on the game and trying to help the team win," Shaw said. "I'm sure everyone is going to want to know about the record and everything and that's fine. But who's to say, I don't know what will happen. The biggest thing is that we walk off that field with a victory."

Shaw also doesn't seem to mind being the No. 2 talked-about running back in the state, behind Iowa State's Heisman Trophy candidate, Troy Davis.

"Sedrick doesn't take a second seat to him," Iowa linbacker Bobby Diaco said. "There's no way."

There has been some speculation that Shaw, currently the No. 10 rusher in the nation, will pass on his senior season and enter the NFL draft, but those close to him know the odds of that are highly unlikely.

"He probably doesn't even know there is a draft," said Iowa coach Hayden Fry, who has never had one of his players turn pro before their senior season. "He's like my son. He's the greatest young man in the world."

But if Shaw did break the trend and enter the draft, Fry would have one request.

"I'd say I want to be the first guy that you float a loan to," Fry said.

Shaw isn't counting down to his record breaking run or feeling any pressure to reach the plateau, but he does have one plan for the event.

"If I keep the ball, I'm pretty sure I'll give it to my mom and my grandmother," Shaw said.

Shaw's mother and grandmother raised him together in Austin, Texas.

Fry said Shaw reminds him of two great running backs he has coached in the last decade at Iowa — the power running Stewart and finesse runner Nick Bell.

Sedrick Shaw rushes for some of his 93 yards against Penn State Oct. 21 in Iowa City. Shaw, a junior, needs 82 yards on Saturday to tie Tony Stewart as Iowa's all-time leading rusher.

"Sedrick is a combination of the two. It's all what's in Sedrick's mind," Fry said. "I personally think Sedrick is a more exciting runner than the two."

But all that means little to Sedrick, who is simply having the time of his life.

"Right now, I'm so young, I really don't think about it," Shaw said. "I guess when I get older, I probably will. Right now, I'm just so focused on trying to do what I'm trying to do."

Illini look to rebound against Hawkeyes

By Wayne Drehs
The Daily Iowan

A strong defense, weak offense and a lot of close losses describes only one Big Ten Conference team the past few seasons: the Illini.

Hawkeye foe this weekend, the No. 25 in the Associated Press after a 38-14 beating by Michigan in the season opener. They've gone on to lose to Oregon, Michigan State and Northwestern while defeating Arizona, East Carolina and Indiana.

The close losses are nothing new for Illinois. Last season, they lost more than a touchdown. A mere five more endzone arrivals would have brought the Fighting Illini back into contention. Last season, by more than a touchdown. A mere five more endzone arrivals would have brought the Fighting Illini back into contention.

"This year, like in recent years, Illinois has lost some real close games," Iowa coach Hayden Fry said. "Their 17-14 loss to Northwestern last week shows, however, that they are a very fine football team."

The team is anchored by a stifling defense, an Illini trademark since the days of linebacker Dick Butkus.

"They're defense is awfully talented," quarterback Matt Sherman said. "They're big, strong and quick, and they can even run down plays they miss from behind."

Anchoring this defensive unit is All-American linebacker Simeon Rice. The 6-5, 250-pound senior from Mt. Carmel High School in Chicago was named Big Ten defensive lineman of the year in 1994 after leading the conference in sacks, tackles for losses and caused fumbles.

"Simeon is exceptional," Fry said. "If I'd have had a ballot for the Heisman Trophy voting last year, I would have voted for Simeon. He's the best defensive end in college football."

The Illinois defensive talent doesn't stop with Rice though. His tag team partner, fellow linebacker Kevin Hardy, is fourth in the Big Ten in tackles. And according to coach Lou Tepper, Hardy's the more athletic of the two line backers.

Fry agrees he is special.

"Hardy has really come on like gangbusters," Fry said. "Last year he was great, but this year he's unbelievable. Him and Simeon will probably be two of the top five draft picks (in the next NFL draft)."

Unfortunately for the Illini, in the day of high-scoring super power offenses, defense doesn't win football games.

"Things have changed in football because very few outstanding defensive teams are winning," Fry said. "All of the big teams have just a good defense, but an explosive, high-scoring offense."

Although it has improved late, explosive and high-scoring are two things Illinois' offense is not.

The Illini are last in the Big Ten in rushing and total offense and second to last in passing and scoring offense.

The main problem with the offense is a lack of leadership. Quarterback Johnny Johnson appeared to be in control of things until his benching for the Oct. 7 game against Indiana.

Since then, Scott Weaver has stepped in to do an adequate job at quarterback, completing 55 of 97 passes for 32 touchdowns, but nine interceptions.

"I'm not sure why they made the changes," Fry said. "Johnson is a big playmaker and a great scrambler. Weaver isn't a bad runner, but Johnson brings an added dimension."

Behind the shuffling quarterbacks are running backs Ty Douthard and Robert Holcombe, who have both spent this season doing the improbable.

Douthard was a projected "all-star candidate" by Tepper, but has struggled in his junior campaign. Holcombe, on the other hand, has jumped on the scene, topping the 100-yard mark in rushing three times, including a career-high 146 yards against Michigan State.

"Robert has shown great improvement in his last two outings against Michigan State and Northwestern. He has really secured the ball well. We only expect him to keep getting better as the season goes on," Tepper said.

With their backs against the wall in hopes of a bowl appearance, the Illini have put up respectable offensive performances in their last two games, including a 365-yard output against the number four defensive team in the conference — Northwestern.

"They've really improved the last two weeks offensively," Fry said. "They're running the ball better and are more physical. They're going to have a lot of confidence this weekend and they need to win to stay in the bowl picture."

Iowa avoids losing streak

OK, so throwing stuff didn’t work. Painting obscenities across your chests despite the cold weather didn’t seem to spark the team enough to beat the Nittany Lions. Almost, but not quite.

The ABC cameras didn’t even appear to know where the student section was. I guess the trail of marshmallows wasn’t a good enough clue.

Obviously, something had to be done. The hog head may have been a little drastic, but hey, it’s national television. Drastic times call for drastic measures.

We learned our lessons. We took a few hits. We may be down, but we’re not out.

It’s time for something new, something revolutionary, on the cutting edge. I call it cheering.

Better yet, no one gets hurt, unless you call a broken ear drum an injury. And referees actually learn to appreciate the Iowa fans, although I’m still not sure that’s a good thing.

Besides, this weekend’s game promises to be exciting enough without throwing object onto the field.

The last two seasons, Illinois has had its way with the Hawkeyes, embarrassing them both at Kinnick Stadium and in Champaign. This year, the Hawkeyes want a little revenge.

But forget about past years, this Hawkeye team wants to win for itself. They want to show that they are nothing like the teams that hit mid-season losing skids the past two seasons. They want to show that they are winners.

For all intents and purposes, the Hawkeyes need to win two of their final four games in order to reach a bowl game.

Hayden Fry said at his press conference this week that for the Hawkeyes to reach a bowl game, “someone is going to have to reach down and touch us.”

While I’m not sure exactly how much of that was Hayden using his degree in psychology and how much of it was how he really feels, I do know that this team does not intend to spend its winter vacation in Iowa. The players are looking forward to a bowl game, a New Year’s Day one.

Fry said, in the past weeks, many of his starters had to sit out the whole week of practice, limiting what the team could work on.

Tuesday, linebacker Bobby Diaco said it seems like there are more people practicing this week than in the past couple — even after playing Penn State and Ohio State back to back.

If the Hawkeyes can stay healthy the next four weeks, they are going to be a tough team to beat.

Simeon Rice and Kevin Hardy may be the premiere linebacker duo in the country, but expect Iowa to take Rice out of the ball game.

Rice said the one person who stopped him last year was Penn State tight end Kyle Brady.

If Iowa’s Scott Slutzker can get out and frustrate Rice, and the rest of the line can give Sherman time to hit his speedy receivers, Iowa may be able to exploit Illinois’ sophomore cornerbacks.

But don’t expect too much scoring against an Illini defense that features five three-time letter winners.

It’s going to take a consistent performance by the Iowa defense to bring home a Hawkeye victory.

The defense was the cornerstone in the first four games of the season, but was simply outmanned by Penn State and Ohio State.

The line is still hurting, but fortunately, Illinois still believes that the best offense is a good defense. Illinois is dead last in the league in total offense. If the Hawkeyes’ wounded defense holds the Illini to under 250 yards total offense, pack your bags, because we’re going bowling, for bowl games that is.

Wildcats dethroned, Buckeyes keep rolling

Around the bend they come, their chant filling the air as they enter the stadium. The Northwestern Wildcats have emerged from the shadows of the past, their team transformed by the leadership of Gary Barnett and his crew. The Buckeyes stand in their way, a test for the Wildcats to prove they are one of the country's top teams.

It's another action packed weekend as the conference race heats up. Penn State at Northwestern: Meow, meow, meow, meow, meow... The Nittany Lions have proved that they are top of their game against a top 25 team. The Wolverines have given up only 12 yards in five games this season, and look to improve their record in November.

Penn State at Northwestern:
Meow, meow, meow, meow, meow, meow...

Northwestern will have to be on top of its game against a Penn State team that has won three straight. The Nittany Lions have proved that the 0-2 start in the conference was just a fluke.

Northwestern faces its toughest test since Michigan. The Wildcats host Penn State. The Nittany Lions have defeated their state siblings just once since 1987 and will look to avenge a 20-point loss to the Wildcats last year.

The赔率 is: Michigan 23-21

Michigan at Michigan State:
The highly coveted Governor of Michigan trophy is on the line as these two intrastate rivals go head to head.

This is an important game for Michigan if the Wolverines want to stay in the hunt for the Big Ten title. The Spartans have defeated their state rivals just once since 1987 and will look to improve their record in November.

The key to this game is how well Michigan State will get out of the gate early as Michigan has scored 112 points in its winning streak and looks to stay in the hunt for the Big Ten title.

The key to this game is how well Michigan State will get out of the gate early as Michigan has scored 112 points in its winning streak and looks to stay in the hunt for the Big Ten title.

The Wolverines' Tim Biakabutuka has rushed for more than 100 yards in five games this year and has 512 in the last three.

Michigan State may need a spark from kick returner Derrick Mason, who has 1,732 career kickoff return yards. Mason has three games this year with more than 100 yards. The Spartans are improving each time out, though they were blown out last week. But the Wolverines have too many weapons.

Michigan, 27-17

Ohio State at Minnesota:
The Buckeyes showed the nation last week what they could do against a top 25 team. Now just imagine what they are going to do to Minnesota. Chris Dunkins will learn what it's like to eat turf as Ohio State keys on the only legitimate weapon the Golden Gophers have.

Bobby Hoying could bring a lawn chair to sit in the pocket as Minnesota's defense has only seven sacks on the year. The Buckeyes' Troy Terry Glenn is a true Heisman candidate with more than 1,000 yards receiving and an average of 23.1 yards per catch. He also has 14 touchdowns, good for second in scoring in the Big Ten.

The Golden Gophers' only hope may be Glenn's counterpart Ryan Thewell. The sophomore wideout has 46 catches to lead the conference. Too bad the truth is the Golden Gophers don't have a chance.

Ohio State, 31-7

Wisconsin at Purdue:
Oh yeah, I almost forgot this game. I can't imagine why.

Wisconsin punished Michigan State last week, and Purdue took the week off to mend. Now they battle to in the Hall of Fame Induction game.

Two milestones might fall in this clash of the titans. The Badgers' Darrell Bevell and his brother Darrell, could surpass 7,000 career yards passing. This would make Bevell only the fifth quarterback in Big Ten history to pass for that many yards and complete 60 percent of his passes.

Purdue's Mike Alstott could become the Boilermakers' all-time leading rusher if he gains 238 yards Saturday.
