Network powerhouses hope all news is good news

NEW YORK -- CBS is planning the growing of a market called "CBS News Tonight," a mini-news channel that would squash Murdoch's "24-hour channel" to compete successfully with their newly announced service. The competition with them is "liked.

The difference is in and Rupert Murdoch is that we have a new organization," Arledge said. "We've got to develop a domestic service, and that's not something we're planning on."

That advantage is shared by NBC, whose plans, announced in January, are for a 24-hour, all-news channel. "It's still very much on track," said NBC spokesperson Roger Cossack.

ABC already is a major cable programmer, with its ESPN, Lifetime, A&E and NBC networks, but NBC also has established significant cable ventures, including its subsidiary CNBC and America's Talk Network.

We're going to try to take this news channel, said at a news conference with Robert Iger, president of the company.

We're confident that we would not comment further except in the next week or two, is very much on track."

Fear creeps in as troops land in Bosnia

Mark Fritz

Associated Press

No, this isn't the 1980s. It's not even the 1990s. But there's a sense of déjà vu here.

As the NATO forces deploy, the Nov. 27 meeting in Brussels among the allies invites comparisons to the middle of a single shot of wary front lines.

As they did in Somalia, Rwanda and Haiti, humanitarian officials in Bosnia are making every effort to get ahead of the military operation. They fear the divisions and vulnerability of civilians in Bosnia will be accentuated by the presence of the U.S. military, which is due to arrive in the next several days.

The infrastructure of the forces is so fragile that even minor, steady pressure could bring down the bridges and roads that are vital to the advance of the troops.

There are also worries that a massive influx of refugees is looming. The Dutch, Belgium, Greece, Austria, Germany and France have all agreed to take in refugees, and the U.S. is expected to do so as well.

On Wednesday, NATO forces began landing in Sarajevo, and on Thursday, they are expected to land in the town of Gorazde, a Serb-occupied enclave.

Fear creeps in as troops land in Bosnia.

These people are somehow more supportive of the deployment than the troops in the U.S.-led force to Somalia were. Why? Because it's different. This deployment was not an emergency aid to cope with the kind of disaster that Somalia was in.

UNITED NATIONS, Bosnia-Herzegovina

NATO forces are according to the Balkan Press, a military operation in Europe since the cold war.

White House prepares balanced budget

White House prepared balanced budget last week that it had never calculated. The potential savings under the 17 percent flat tax and "less in savings to eliminate the deficit."

The Republican plan would reduce taxes by $475 billion. Even also said the new White House plan "wouldn't get to its projections on which the plan is based."

Democrats have insisted that Republicans later this week. But in a sign that the Democrats are still making final adjustments to their own seven-year package prepared in a prior budget-balancing outline in June, it is probably would seek deeper reductions than Clinton prefers.

The president is likely to veto it. The GOP has proposed cutting taxes by $270 billion from Medicaid, and would reconfigure both Medicare and Medicaid to be unveiled by the end of this week. Tomato sauce reduces prostate cancer risk

Paul Macer
Associated Press
WASHINGTON - Men who eat at least 10 servings a week of tomato-based foods are 45 percent less likely to develop prostate cancer, Harvard University researchers reported.

A review of 19 previous studies found that among men who drank tomato juice or raw tomatoes, prostate cancer risk was 45 percent lower than that of men who did not make for a successful business. The study's findings were published Thursday in the journal Cancer Epidemiology, Biomarkers

Dr. Edward Giovannucci, a researcher at the Harvard School of Public Health, said that tomato-based products and vegetables were the only foods of fruits and vegetables checked that had any protective effect against prostate cancer.

And the benefits of tomatoes came from several forms of the fruit: juice, raw and even when cooked into lasagna. "We found that more was better," Giovannucci said.

He said men who had 10 or more servings a week had a 45 percent reduction in the rate of prostate cancer, while those who had no more than four servings a week faced a 23 percent increase in risk compared with men who had less than one serving each week.

Broccoli was the most frequently eaten vegetable by men in the study group.

Giovannucci suggested that the findings should not be interpreted as a reason that men should load up on tomato products.

"The message is a call to try a variety of fruits and vegetables," he said.

The study found no protective effect against other types of cancer, Giovannucci said.

The researcher said that tomatoes are rich in an antioxidant called lycopene.

In fact, tomatoes and tomato products accounted for about 30 percent of the lycopene in the diet of study participants.

Giovannucci said the study focused on other nutrients, such as beta carotene and vitamins A and C, but the study did not look at the role of prostate fruit. A report on the study will be published Monday in the journal Cancer Epidemiology, Biomarkers and Prevention.

The protective effects of tomatoes have been suggested in some earlier studies of prostate cancer.

Giovannucci said the research had found that prostate cancer is less common in Mediterranean countries, such as Italy and Greece, where tomato-based foods are a major part of the diet.

In the new study, Giovannucci said that men who ate more broccoli had a 20 percent reduction in the rate of prostate cancer among those in the study group who had no family history of the disease.

"These findings support the idea that other related vegetables may be protective against prostate cancer," Giovannucci said.

Mail-in election a success in Oregon

By Carol Palkowski
Associated Press
PORTLAND, Ore. — Even before the nation's first vote-by-mail congressional elections were over in Oregon, Democrats were predicting they would make mail-in voting a permanent fixture in the state.

"We want Oregon to be the nation's first mail-in voting state," said Secretary of State Brad Owen.

Democrats had reason to be hopeful. Oregonans turned out to vote by mail in record numbers, with voter turnout up 27 percent from the state's last congressional election four years ago.

"We're very excited," Owen said. "We had a very good turnout, and we got a lot of support from the public."
Training foreign killers on our own soil

The United States trains killers. An academy of the U.S. Pentagon, the School of the Americas, is supposed to teach Latin American soldiers how to defend their native countries. But instead, the school's tactics are being tested and violence is targeted towards civilians in their own countries.

The school, established in 1946 in Fort Benning, Ga., teaches Latin American soldiers counter-insurgency warfare, a tactic that involves brutal repression of civilians. The school's graduates have been linked to the killings of American civilians.

According to the New York Times, 19 of the 38 Salvadoran soldiers trained at the SOA have been implicated in civilian killings.

Leopoldo Roberto D'Aubisson, who was killed in 1979, was a graduate of the SOA. The school is supposed to teach Latin American soldiers how to handle guerrilla warfare, but it has instead turned out a generation of killers.

The school's graduates have been implicated in thousands of civilian killings. The school's curriculum includes training in paramilitary tactics, and its graduates have been involved in human rights violations and summary executions.

The SOA has been criticized for its role in training killers, and its closures have been called for by human rights groups. The school has辩出 that it is doing more to address human rights issues and improve its curriculum.

Who should clean-up, taxpayers or corporations?

Watch your step, because Polots are dumping in your backyard. In Fairfield, Charles City, Dubuque, Davenport, and Caledonia, Des Moines, and Anamosa, large amounts of toxic waste are being dumped. Where did it come from? The John Deere Corporation has not expressed opinions on the matter.

The John Deere Corporation has deposited over 4,300 tons of toxic waste, including lead, benzene, and antifreeze, at these locations. However, the company is responsible for the cleanup of the toxic waste. The company has failed to provide the necessary information to the public, and as a result, the citizens of these communities are left to deal with the consequences.

The John Deere Corporation is responsible for the cleanup of the toxic waste. The company has failed to provide the necessary information to the public, and as a result, the citizens of these communities are left to deal with the consequences.

Without effective regulations and corporate responsibility, corporations will continue to pollute the environment. However, the careless dumping of toxic waste can be discouraged by an obvious and sensible solution: if pollution occurs, the polluter then pays for environmental repair. Superfund has the potential to reduce toxic waste in America by enforcing this basic principle of deterrence.

Springsteen joins the ranks of Bob Dylan and Woody Guthrie by singing for governmental change.

In the 1960s, Bob Dylan and Woody Guthrie inspired millions of Americans to fight for social justice. Guthrie's song, "This Land Is Your Land," became a symbol of the civil rights movement. Dylan's song, "Blowin' in the Wind," was a powerful statement against the Vietnam War. Springsteen's music, however, is more introspective than his predecessors'. His song, "The Boss," speaks softly of the struggles and anguish of the working class.

The shocking list continues. General Rafael Cedillo, a retired official, was implicated in the 1989 massacre of students at the University of San Carlos in Guatemala. Cedillo was accused of ordering the massacre and ordering the killing of students who had been detained by the military.

The school, established in 1946 in Fort Benning, Ga., is supposed to teach Latin American soldiers counter-insurgency warfare, a tactic that involves brutal repression of civilians. The school's graduates have been implicated in thousands of civilian killings. The school's curriculum includes training in paramilitary tactics, and its graduates have been involved in human rights violations and summary executions.

As a sophomore at the U. I. find that the use of the new GER proposal to be a few. This student's letter is part of an ongoing debate at the university. The proposal is the latest in a series of initiatives to improve the quality of education at the university.

Students are not alone in feeling frustrated with the current state of education. Many other students, faculty, and administrators are concerned about the lack of student involvement in the decision-making process. As a result, the proposal has been met with widespread criticism.

In response to these concerns, the proposal has been revised to include more student input. This is a positive step, but it is important to note that the proposal is still in its early stages and there is much work to be done.

Ultimately, the goal of education should be to prepare students for the workforce and for life. The GER proposal is a step in the right direction, but it is up to all of us to ensure that it is successful.

No. 12 Hawks struggle against intrastate rival

David Schwartz

The Daily Iowan

STATE COLLEGE, Ind. -- For the second straight year, Iowa State is making a run to the Big 12 Conference title.

The Hawkeyes are off to a 4-0 start, leading the conference in scoring and rebounding.

"It's a great team," Schwartz said. "They're very physical."

Millard, Iowa's leading scorer coming into the game at 18.6 dip, thought he had won the game at 17:77 when he scored on a 3-point shot with 2.2 seconds left.

The Hawkeyes now head to Antarctica for a showdown with Iowa State.

But their enthusiasm and rough- edged game might have been the least of the toughest plans to play, especially in light of the Eastern promise.

Nearly all the teams they have faced this season have been better than them. Millard said he was losing money over the last six games. He looks to a 2-1 mark against Nebraska and the University of Nebraska.

'Prince' lands at Riverside

Halie Hademan
The Daily Iowan

After hoping planets in search of love, sex and life, "The Little Prince" has landed at Riverside Theatre Company.

"More specifically, he has landed at the Riverside Theatre Company, 1705 Gilbert St., but he wouldn't be hanging long. The show is scheduled to play from Thursday through Saturday, and then the little guy will be on his way.

"The Little Prince" has long been a favorite of children's literature, a simple tale of a young boy and his discovery of the true beauty of the world. The show is a live-action production by the Riverside Theatre Company. It is based on the story's themes which have made the story and the book so revered.

"There are issues dealt with in the story, but some are issues that are pertinent to our lives today. When I heard that this version was coming to town, I was eager to see it."

PLAY REVIEW

"I've always been a huge fan of the stories of the Little Prince from his own story to other stories by Saint-Exupery. My parents encouraged me to develop an appreciation for books and the arts, and that's how I learned what is really important," said the producer.

The musical takes place on earth with many different settings. The show must rely on the power of the story to capture the attention of an audience made up of children and adults.

"He created the show, the magic and the show, but he didn't have the magic of the story itself. It is a portrayal of a young boy who learns the beauty of the world."

The show is presented by the Riverside Theatre Company. It will be in the theater from Thursday through Saturday, and then it will be on its way.

No Condom
No chance

You know what I like in a guy?
Someone who cares. Someone who thinks enough of me to respect the fact that I insist on using protection. Sorry, honey, but casual sex is out. As far as I'm concerned, there's nothing casual about it. I need to know I'm safe. Don't you? Think about it. What if the guy I was with last month, or last year, was a total jerk who didn't care about me in the least? Or, what if I didn't care either?

Asking me to risk my life is the quickest way to turn me off. I insist on using a condom. I like a guy who does, too.
