Czech educators learn new methods

Matt Johnson

Thursday, August 25, 2011

The Czech Republic is one of the newest countries to see growth in educational innovation. In the 1990s, the country initiated a number of programs to improve teacher training and educational standards. These efforts have resulted in a significant increase in the number of teachers who are new to the profession and who have received additional training. The Czech government is now focusing on further improving the quality of education in the country, and is committed to providing students with access to high-quality education.

UI's International Writing Program draws participants from 28 nations

The University of Iowa's International Writing Program (IWP) is one of the most prestigious writing programs in the world, attracting writers from all over the globe. The program is designed to provide a unique and enriching experience for international writers, allowing them to connect with local writers and to learn about American literature and culture.

The IWP was founded in 1970 and has since become one of the most respected and influential programs of its kind. The program offers workshops, readings, and seminars, as well as opportunities for writers to connect with each other and to engage in meaningful conversations about their work. The IWP is open to writers from all countries and backgrounds, and is dedicated to providing a platform for the exchange of ideas and the sharing of perspectives.

Currently, the IWP is accepting applications from international writers for the 2012-2013 academic year. Writers interested in participating in the program are encouraged to apply as soon as possible, as the application deadline is rapidly approaching.

The International Writing Program is a unique and transformative experience that provides writers with the opportunity to connect with the world's best writers and to gain insight into the workings of the literary world. If you are interested in participating in the IWP, be sure to apply soon!

Possible fines can raise cost of drinking

Marlette Messner

The Daily Iowan

Promotion of alcohol under the legal age and public intoxication are not the most common crimes for minors on the UI campus, but there are other drinking-related offenses that can result in fines or even jail time.

"It's pretty foolish to take the risk," said Randy Laran, owner of Mike Bar and The Airliner in Iowa City. "It's not worth the trouble."

"I doubt the police give a (heck) if you're under 21," Mike Bar owner Randy Laran said. "They're more concerned about public safety than public intoxication."

The new club will, however, break The Airliner's cover-free tradition by charging a cover charge of $3 for minors and $5 for those over 21. The new club will also have a dance floor on the second floor. Applications can be picked up in 145 IMU in Room 145.

Area bars get face-lift

Dave Cypser

The Daily Iowan

Two mainstays in the Iowa City bar scene will be putting on new faces this fall: the "Lover's Lane" area of The Que Sports Bar and the 'Que Sports Sports Student Legal Services.

The Que Sports Bar, 111 S. Clinton St., is undergoing improvements that should be completed by this weekend, said bar manager Chris Gaul.

"We're changing the front facade of the bar, putting in big glass windows, which will open up the interior," he said.

Interior remodels will be ongoing throughout the next few months, Gaul said. Plans are to place large mirrors behind the bar to offer a larger variety of seating in an attempt to create a bigger atmosphere.

The new dance floor being built shows The Airliner, 22 S. Clinton St., with open space above it that will be used to create a "Lover's Lane" atmosphere around the bar.

"I don't believe in a cover if we don't provide anything like live music, dancing, but dance clubs always go to another bar," Laran said.

The new club will, however, break The Airliner's cover-free tradition by charging a cover charge of $3 for minors and $5 for those over 21.

The new club will also have a dance floor on the second floor. Applications can be picked up in 145 IMU in Room 145.

Can I see your maturity, please?

As demonstrated by the above example, there are many parts of society where adult supervision is necessary. Some people are not mature enough to make responsible decisions, and some others seem to lack basic common sense. Many adults are not ready to take full responsibility for their actions. Instead, they rely on others to make decisions for them. This is not a healthy way to live, and it can lead to serious problems. It is important to be accountable for one's actions and to take responsibility for the consequences.

Vacation to sleepy Iowa

If you haven't had a summer vacation in a while, consider a trip to Iowa. This midwestern state offers a peaceful and relaxing atmosphere. You can enjoy the natural beauty of the countryside, explore small towns, and experience the friendly and welcoming culture. There are many outdoor activities to enjoy, such as hiking, cycling, and fishing. The lakes and rivers offer a chance to cool off and unwind. The scenery is breathtaking, with rolling hills and lush green fields. You can also enjoy the local cuisine, which features farm-to-table ingredients. Overall, Iowa provides a perfect escape from the hustle and bustle of city life. So plan your trip now and experience the charm of this sleepy state.

No work and all class makes sense

They called it the Student Job Bank because it's a place where students can get part-time jobs that fit their schedules and interests. The bank offers a variety of positions, from working in the library to helping out with campus events. These positions are available for students of all ages and majors. The minimum wage is $7.25 per hour, and there are opportunities to earn extra money during the semester.

There should be more of these kinds of programs at schools. Students are often too busy to take advantage of opportunities like this. By working part-time, students can earn extra money, gain valuable work experience, and stay connected to the community.

No matter what your major, there are ways to get involved on campus. Whether you're interested in politics, the arts, or social issues, there are clubs and organizations to join. You can also volunteer for community service projects or participate in campus events.

What would you rename the Union?

The Union is a focal point for student life on campus. It's a place where students can hang out, study, and socialize. But some students feel like it doesn't offer enough opportunities for them.

Headless cockroaches are smarter than humans

"Family of Things You Can Put on the Counter and Know It’s Doing" and I knew it was a fact and no one had ever checked it before, so I decided to check it myself.

If you are interested in learning more about headless cockroaches, when their heads are removed, immediately start performing country-style dances.

Researchers have found that cockroaches, when their heads are removed, immediately start performing country-style dances.

In another interesting thought: Bees put on the only dress that nature gives them. It is called "body." If you were to put a dress on the hive, the bees would think it was a hives and start dancing around it in a circle.

UI teaches Wide Web skills

UI center's Alan Mingray has helped form two out of three of the campus' three study clubs over the past two years, and four other study clubs study at least once a week. The club's main goal is to educate students on the Internet, providing them with resources for classes, research, and other needs. The club offers a variety of resources, including class schedules, announcements, and more.

Mingray is the faculty advisor and also serves as a mentor to UI students. "We are a club that is open to anyone who is interested in learning about the Internet," he said.

The club meets weekly on Thursdays at 8 p.m. in the Main Library, Room 201. For more information, visit the club's website at http://uwiscشكل

Video presents options to pregnant women

Sarah Law
The Daily Iowan

Although no one in the world is required to watch the Iowa video on abortion, the Iowa Department of Health, in its first year of making videos available online, has already surpassed its goal.

The video, which is designed to inform a minor who is pregnant about the options available to her, is viewed more than 20,000 times a day.

The video is available on the Internet. The Iowa Department of Health requires all minors who are considering abortion to watch the video before making a decision.

The video provides information about the options available to a minor who is pregnant, including abortion, adoption, and keeping the child. The video also includes advice on how to navigate the decision-making process.

The video is funded by the state of Iowa and is designed to provide information to minors who are considering abortion.

Iowa is about to embark on its first-ever mini-census. The state is the only one in the nation to offer a mini-census, which will provide a snapshot of the state's population.

The mini-census will be conducted by the Iowa Department of Health and will be available to anyone who is interested in learning more about the state's population.

The mini-census will be conducted online and will include questions about the state's population, such as age, gender, and employment.

The results of the mini-census will be available on the Iowa Department of Health's website.

Iowa man defies authority for pain relief

Larry Bullard
Associated Press

WATERTOWN — Allen Helmers said he smoked marijuana to relieve the pain in his back on Wednesday.

"I knew better than to do it," he said. "But I do it for my health."

The 43-year-old semi-truck driver had his driver's license suspended for the past two years after police arrested him in January on suspicion of driving under the influence of marijuana.

"I thought I could get away with it," Helmers said. "But it's not that easy."

Helmers, who lives in rural New London, said he hasn't smoked for two years and doesn't plan to start again.

"I can't sit there and have the pain," he said. "I'm going to do something about it."

Helmers was one of three people who were cited for marijuana possession in the past month.

"It's not fair," Helmers said. "I'm not going to stop doing what I do because of someone else's rules."

Helmers is not alone in his struggle with chronic pain.

"I've been through a lot," Helmers said. "I've had to work through it."

"I can't sit there and have the pain," he said. "I'm going to do something about it."

Cheers, tears and ‘Hey, Macarena’

Latest dance craze hits convention bigwigs

Associated Press

CHICAGO — Fred and Ginger wash out.

The day after the presidential elections, Hillary Rodham Clinton and Al Gore will take over the Illinois Dome — the Macarena.

The vice president’s deadpan rendition of the sappy Latin dance climbed to new heights as he accepted his nomination for 1996 Thursday at the United Center in Chicago.

He, his wife, Tipper, and the entire Democratic National Convention, including influential delegates, danced to the tune of the “YMCA” hit, where he evoked a roar of laughter from convention delegates Wednesday night.

Later, he repeated the 10th-century party attended by Rodham Clinton, his wife, and Gore.

“I just stood there, and looked straight ahead,” Hillary Rodham Clinton, on teaching Gore the Macarena.

And there won’t be any problems teaching Rodham Clinton dancing either, Tipper Gore said.

Clinton: ‘We are on the right track’

Ron Fournier
Associated Press

CHICAGO — Thousands of cheering Democrats thundered “Four more years! Four more years!” as President Clinton offered himself as the engine of change and optimism for the next century. “We are on the right track,” he said at Thursday night’s convention, “and we will not shame or permit them to take it off the track.”

Bill Clinton accepts the nomination for re-election at the Democratic Thursday night’s convention in Chicago’s United Center and whose current campaign has produced high with Republicans over the past few months. He also spoke the words they lately have been wanting all week to hear: “If I win, I won’t run again.”

The campaign will have to speak the words they have been wanting all week to hear: “If I win, I won’t run again.”

Two days before the convention starts, Bob Ross, for their years of service to the country. He is upbeat, and his budget proposals are on their tax and budget plans.

He argued — as Bill Clinton did — that health care and education are the “great national challenges of our time.”

The speech came as a sign of the country’s determination to address the pressing issues of the day. Clinton’s budget proposal was presented as a framework for talks with Congress, and it was received with enthusiasm by the audience.

The audience responded with a standing ovation, and the president took the stage to deliver his keynote address.

“Four more years,” the president declared, “four more years of stability and growth, and the opportunity for all Americans to share in the American dream.”

The audience responded with a standing ovation, and the president took the stage to deliver his keynote address.

“Four more years,” the president declared, “four more years of stability and growth, and the opportunity for all Americans to share in the American dream.”

The crowd cheers as President Clinton accepts the nomination for re-election at the Democratic Thursday night’s convention and whose current campaign has produced high with Republicans over the past few months. He also spoke the words they have been wanting all week to hear: “If I win, I won’t run again.”

He argued — as Bill Clinton did — that health care and education are the “great national challenges of our time.”

The speech came as a sign of the country’s determination to address the pressing issues of the day. Clinton’s budget proposal was presented as a framework for talks with Congress, and it was received with enthusiasm by the audience.

Muslims gain confidence, recognition

Donna Ali-Nouri
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Thirban Hosein traveled around the country to teach shaded calligraphy to Muslims from across the U.S. So he could help them to communicate their voices heard, American-style.

"We're not talking about illegal things," said Hosein, who travels around the country teaching calligraphy to Muslims who want to participate in local and national politics. "We're talking about normal activities," he said.

Calligraphy is a feminine thing. It's an ethnic and religious group. It's in 27 years, a battalion of Marines write a prescription for a worse overzealous power through the ballot box."

Calling Islam the worst season on record was 1995, when the Clinton administration called a mosque in Washington, D.C., very isolated ... which breeds a community - in addition to Islamic centers to the larger community."

Hooper said it's going to take Muslims to participate in local and national politics to help them to feel more connected to their religion and to feel more connected to the culture of the country.

"I have never seen in my life a Muslim�... a Muslim and a Jew, a Muslim and a Christian, a Muslim and a Buddhist, all working together in harmony," he said.

"They're getting a little bit more organized and they're getting more and more people to believe that America that's the pathway to peace through the United Nations," he said.

In his speech at the Republican convention, House Speaker Newt Gingrich, the representative of Muslims, acknowledged the "stirring" of religion in America. Hillary Clinton called it in a February speech to the Republican National Convention in February - the first of its kind. "The Muslim leader who made that call was the first Muslim in Congress to be acknowledged by the Republican Party," he said.

The chairman of the Republican National Convention, Ollie North, said it's time to start a conversation on the future of freedom and democracy. "We have the tools to do that," he said.

"We're going to be very active," Hosein said.

Hawkeyes to make '96 debut
Field hockey team opens season this afternoon

Chris James
The Daily Iowan

The August sun has burned away the mild moisture of last year's NCAA tournament, and for the Iowa women's field hockey team, the 1995 season spells a new Breed.

Iowa opens the 1995 season today at 2 p.m. against Northeastern in the Iowa women's field hockey Center. The games will also be shown on radio (KXIC 700 AM) and on television (KWOT, TV-24). "Although it sounds to me like we're starting to spend more time with our families and friends, it's not been too different from the back home for some of us," Cunningham said. The announcement was not unexpected. Cunningham said the only team he wanted to play for was the Hawkeyes, even if he didn't win games. He recently signed on as a player for the U.S. Olympic team.

Beglin said. "We're better, but Iowa has a lot of good players. We have a lot of exciting options. This season, we'll have a lot of fun and experience, coupled with a lot of experience. The Hawkeyes will have ample opportunity to improve for this season's Big Ten season, which starts on Sept. 28 when Illinois comes to Carver-Hawkeye Arena.

Iowa's nonconference schedule will undoubtedly show what the Hawkeyes have to offer.

Iowa opens its season against Georgia Tech at the Illini BCA in Illinois.

The Hawkeyes' first road trip is to Duquesne on Saturday, and the team's next trip is to Florida on Sept. 20. Iowa will face Pennsylvania State, which finished fourth last year's NCAA Division I field hockey.

On Sept. 21, Iowa will face the Blue Devils at Drexel University.

The Hawkeyes have to answer to whether they can remain the crown for another year. In her plan will be to improve on the last year's season finish and improve on the last year's season finish.

"Brink is incredible," said Webb, a somebody who has written: "This year's team will be a little better than we were last year. We're not going to surprise anyone this season."

Yankee owner lashes out at pitcher Rogers

Associated Press

Seattle — The New York Yankees showed their temperament in a brawl with the Seattle Mariners. Owner George Steinbrenner flared at every pitch and barked at pitcher Randy Johnson.

"You go out there, you wake up one morning and it's Randy Johnson," Steinbrenner said. "I'm under the impression that you can't get a nine-year-old boy to hit that pitch."

Steinbrenner was trying to keep cool and didn't understand what was going on. But he let out some of the anger that festered all season.

"I don't know what he and his agent represent," Steinbrenner said. "I suspect he doesn't have much of a problem."

The Yankees' reaction Wednesday night, left for Cal Ripken Jr. during a four-game winning streak, was a 2-0 win in the 11th inning.

"He hit Ripken, and the very next pitch, he hit me," said Steinbrenner.

The former Yankees owner and Seattle principal owner and an emotional game and three pitches later, the Mariners' Alex Rodriguez knocked the ball out to center.

Rodriguez said he was hit by a pitch, and Steinbrenner told the umpires that he had to leave because of a "gut punch" and Ripken had to be removed. The umpires ruled that Rodriguez's five-game streak was broken.

The Reds, who won for only the third time in the last 14 games, trail the league.

"Every man's man," Steinbrenner said.

NEW YORK — Vincent Garavan’s ‘Crow: City of Angels’ helps to celebrate the 25th anniversary of ‘Queen Margot,’ and its lead role in the film’s title role is the film’s centerpiece.

Garavan, who plays the lead role in the film, is the son of the late ‘Queen Margot’ star Vincent Perez. The film’s release marks the first time the two actors have appeared together since the 1984 film ‘The Crow: City of Angels’ helped to celebrate the 25th anniversary of ‘Queen Margot.’

The Village People headline Cedar Rapids’ Taste of Iowa

Katherine Horowitz
The Daily Iowan

Friday, Iowa City — No matter what you’re looking for this Labor Day weekend, then booth at the Iowa State Fair is for you — The Village People.

As part of what Taste of Iowa public relations representative Rachel Dumond called a "distinct mix of excitement, taste and diversity," the fair’s main event will feature more than 125 food booths from around the state. The Village People, as Dumond put it, are "part of the main attraction.

"This year there’s been a chance to really showcase Iowa food," Dumond said. "When planning for this concert, we read a lot of reviews and stories like the Village People bring to reality, especially with the taste of international flavors that everyone loves.

"We’re doing a lot of things to make sure this is successful," Dumond continued. "We have some new material in development and are really turning our eyes out and how the next year will be.

All food vendors are great, and all of them offer a wide variety of food that’s both delicious and convenient for everyone.

"Taste of" events have been growing in number of different locations across the nation," Dumond said. "It’s really a movie that should be seen by everyone.

With Disaster" and "I’d Beat Andy’s Ass" are the set highlights of this year’s Taste of Iowa event.

"We’re looking forward to this year’s event and bring out great material," Dumond said.
