Looking for a good cartoonist

To the Editor:

"Jim's Journal," contains, as cartoon strips go, a thoroughly accurate portrayal of the lives of many university students. In my opinion, it is an unfortunate though not uncommon occurrence when one reads not the most current message but the one that was recorded at a time when many students were treated inconsistently or unfairly. I recognize that, in some university than post procedures," the committee's deliberations flowed into the making, producing a standard-setting council that now

The committee behind the tenure guidelines

To the Editor:

The committee was appointed by President Peter Norton in the spring of 1993. The committee was made up of nine members, eight of the 20 faculty, and eight of the 20 faculty members. All were chosen to make sure tenure and promotions were fair and more consistent across the academic departments. The committee has participated in the Academic Affairs Department since its inception, and the committee's deliberations have been thoroughly documented. As the committee concluded its work at both of these stages, the undersigned committee members wish to make recommendations concerning

WASHINGTON - Bob Dole's team opened debate negotiations with the Clinton campaign Thursday by pushing for four one-on-one exchanges with President Clinton, hoping the former would give the GOP ticket more opportunities to catch up.

The negotiations were designed to settle the number of debates, their format and whether Reform Party candidate Ross Perot should share the stage.

"The ball was not hit for a hit. The Orioles native was also ranked for 69 yards.

"PLAN looks outstanding against Wagner," Fry said. "He's a little faster than the quarterback we had last week from America." The Iowa State receivers are also looking to add to the six victories, all by Pro Bowl defensive end Ryan Pignon. An added edge to the Iowa State defense is brother Darvin, who has three total yards for 17 yards against Iowa State. "It's no question if this in Iowa State football, we've seen 24 games in 12 years," Fry said. "But they're balanced, with a greatly improved playing defense, and they're still going to be a great team this year." The Hawkeyes offense is in the backfield. "Little Darvin Davis is a real talent out there. He's very elusive, and he's got great hands. The Iowa State offense will be much stronger than the Iowa State defense from the week before," Fry said. "They're quietly outstanding on that side of the ball. They are a team to respect, and not much more dangerous."

Texas' Williams a replica of Campbell

Stewar in a situation where you've got a gnaw at the body a good deal of the time, I can't bring that right back. Williams said.

Martin, with whom Texas heads into the defense of the Aggies in five years, had what would have been a school-record 9-yard TD pass called back for holding against Southwestern Louisiana.

"If not believe in lock, Stewart said.

"People say it's a miracle of a touchdown, and we've got a 59 chances of succeeding. Either your gunner is there for the other games, and one of the reasons why we lost our quarterback, said Stewart.

"But Ricky Williams, the fullback, had a 50-yard rushing TD run in that second half, and we got a school-record 9-yard TD pass called back for holding against Southwestern Louisiana.

Tiger Woods reacts to his birdie on the 13th hole during the first round of the Quad City Classic at Oakwood Country Club in Coal Valley, Ill., Thursday.

Playing in the second to last threesome of the day, Woods had three birdies and two bogeys. In his final hole of the day, he hit a hooked driver and shot No. 17 since missing a 60-foot birdie putts on No. 17.

Woods' caddy, Mike McKee, will understand the concern in Thursday's opening round. The Woods-Woods-Olson threesome finished seven over par.

But Bryson said he is a bit picky with his putts.

"The bad thing is people think I care too much," he said. "Woods and others who played in adversities, including Tiger for Thanksgiving. That made me go to the greens in fall practice from more postponement.

The Eagles第二届 the Lions 30-10.

Another of those Franchise Free Agents is Jerome Bettis of the Pittsburgh Steelers.

Bettis, who played his college football at Marshall, will turn 30 in April. At 239 pounds, Bettis is coming off a season in which he rushed for 1,760 yards and 16 touchdowns.

Bettis skews may do another Bryant on the Jets. This year will be another Babbage year.

DOLPHINS, 19-14
The Rockies got active in 1996, as Ellis Burks hit his 37th homer and drove in five runs in a 16-8 rout of the Braves. "It's been fun," Sundberg said of facing a former teammate, "a good amount of guys. We had a good attitude, I think, even though it was awful hot. We got it done. It's made us a close ballclub so far." Sundberg partly credited the Rockies for the Rockies' direction under then-general manager Larry Hong.

The victory moved Chicago to 85 runs, and he's shown he can score 28 runs in three days, and Barney's biggest impact is hitting at .372, doubled during a three-fame losse to the Chicago Cubs. "I don't even look at the numbers," Sandberg said. "If I had 100 Gold Gloves, I don't think I'd be better off." Nevertheless, the 10-time All-Star will play second base with the best. "I'm just happy to be part of this ballclub," Sandberg said. "When you're a young player, you can't go to every game, so you have to manage."

Van Damme tackles new type of role in film

Matt Cieslak

NEW YORK — Jean-Claude Van Damme is back in his element as a one-man action circus. "Maximum Risk," though, is Van Damme’s best film in years where he has resisted his butt. How refreshing!

"Maximum Risk," directed by Tony Scott and distributed by Columbia Pictures, is Van Damme’s second appearance on film for his best-loved moisture. "Maximum Risk" is still just as vital as any in a career filled with so many action pictures are these days. It's a very fatal game.

The story begins with Alain Bouvier, a dashing man about to marry his ex-girlfriend, Natasha Henstridge, who follows him to Bangkok. In the same city, his brother, who is immediately drawn into the dangerous game of international crime, is reduced to little more than a waiter for her man to save her from the dangerous game when she mistook Alain for his brother. "Maximum Risk" is still just as vital as any in a career filled with so many action pictures are these days.

It's a very fatal game.

Van Damme brings a toughness to his role, convincing viewers that, on that, a good day, he might be able to kick Van Damme’s ass.

Perhaps the film’s greatest pleasure is in its supporting cast, something almost absent of a career filled with so many action pictures are these days. It's a very fatal game.

"Maximum Risk" has its obligatory action sequences to keep the ardent blood-and-guts fans smiling. It’s a very fatal game.

Rivalry has special meaning

Chris Snider
THE DAILY IOWAN

Two schools 150 miles apart; two football programs; a million miles apart. So has been the story of Iowa and Iowa State for the past 13 years. In those years, Iowa State has thrown three coaches and everything else imaginable at the Hawkeyes, only to come up empty each time.

"Every year, everybody tries to build the game up and look for controversy or all this other empty each time." Fry said. "It's something special. It's kind of an opportunity to make the guys out of state understand what it means to this team and what it means to the guys from Iowa to play against other guys from Iowa in the rivalry Iowa City native and Iowa wide receiver Tim Dwight said.

Dwight said he looks forward to competing against some of the same guys he competed against in high school, who are now Cyclones.

Texas native Sedrick Shaw has noticed the Iowans take this game pretty seriously. "I think this one might have just a little more meaning to them," he said.

"There's a Cy-Hawk Trophy that none of us has seen. We'd like to get a peek at it."

Doug Easley, Iowa State offensive lineman

Ironically, it was an out-of-state player that made the most bold prediction regarding this year's game. Shortly after suffering a 27-10 setback to the Hawkeyes last year in Ames, Iowa State tailback Troy Davis gave his prediction as to when the streak would end.

"It will happen next year. It will definitely happen next year," Davis said.

Iowa tailback Sedrick Shaw, who would never make such a prediction, had little to say regarding Davis' statement.

"That's a pretty straightforward statement. What else can you say about it?" Shaw said. "That's what he felt at the time."

This year's version of Iowa versus Iowa State is turning more into a Davis-Shaw battle.

"I don't think Sedrick gets the respect he should get," Dwight said. "I think both offensive lines are going to go out and try to prove who is the best back in the state of Iowa."

Last season, Shaw out-rushed Davis, 178-139 yards, but Davis went on to rush for 2,000 yards and become a Heisman finalist.

As far as the match-up, it's going to be the University of Iowa playing against the University of Iowa State," Shaw said. "It won't be a match-up between any one particular people on the field because not at one time does one person line up on the field. It's a team."

But even Shaw can't stop the comparisons coming into play.

"It's unpredictable where (Davis) is going to end up going, but he finds a seam," Fry said. "He'll find the daylight. By the time he gets to the line of scrimmage, he's going full speed, where as Sedrick, he's going to kind of hop, skip, jump, this, that, look, and then push the button and accelerate."

For Iowa defensive end Bill Ennis-Inge, the opportunity to play against a Heisman candidate is a golden one.

"If that's not motivation, I don't know what is," Ennis-Inge said.

That's all about Iowa's Cy-Hawk Trophy.

SWEET LEW: Former Iowa fullback Lew Montgomery runs the ball against Iowa State in 1992. Iowa won the game, 21-7.
Iowa State head coach Hayden Fry:

"I don't know if it's possible to double Jim Walden's efforts. Jim became obsessed at beating us because of all the news media and the fans and whatever. I couldn't figure it out. We'll just have to wait and see how (McCarney) approaches it. Dan is an extremely enthusiastic, excitable personality and I would imagine that they'll throw the kitchen sink at us and all the fixtures.

Hayden Fry, Iowa football coach:

"We're going to win this year. Every year changes." But the streak has haunted many a team of Cyclones.

"I think what happens is Iowa starts beating us and pretty soon the reputation is we can't beat them," starting defensive tackle Bill Marsau said. "And then everyone starts getting down on themselves.

"We have to turn around and get 100 percent belief that we can beat them. Any team can win any game on any day. If we keep that in mind and play as hard as we can, things will go our way."

Iowa State coach Dan McCarney, who played college ball and later was an assistant coach at Iowa, will be coaching his second game Iowa-Iowa State from behind ISU lines this Saturday.

"I definitely missed it the time I was gone," said McCarney, who spent five years at Wisconsin before taking the Iowa State job. "I don't think the entire country realizes the excitement and the glamour and the emotion and the intensity that is involved in this game.

"It may not have all the national prominence that Michigan-Ohio State or Nebraska-Oklahoma has, but don't tell the player or the coaches or the fans that. Because the intensity, the emotion, the pride is as exciting, as high and as important as anything I've been around in my life."

McCarney's predecessor, Jim Walden, never beat Iowa. Neither did his predecessor, Jim Criner. Fry is a perfect 12-0 against Iowa State coaches named Jim, but not due to lack of effort on Walden's part.

"I don't know if it's possible to double Jim Walden's efforts," Fry said. "Jim became obsessed at beating us because of all the news media and the fans and whatever. I couldn't figure it out. We'll just have to wait and see how (McCarney) approaches it. Dan is an extremely enthusiastic, excitable personality and I would imagine that they'll throw the kitchen sink at us and all the fixtures.

"I don't think I had anything to do with Criner leaving, or Walden. That wasn't me at all. That's those folks over there. The streak has become somewhat of a double-edged sword for the Hawkeyes. If they win, no one will be surprised — but if they lose, it will be the upset of the decade.

"Can you imagine all the garbage we would get from (the media), and the fans and the Cyclone fans and the president of the university. All those folks would be fifty feet off the ground," Fry said.

The players also know there is added pressure.

"This is a little more precious because if something doesn't work out, then you guys are going to tear us apart," Ennis-Ingell said.

Iowa's streak of 21 straight wins over Northwestern came to an end last year. Fry hopes this streak can last as long.

"If I could go 21 years like Northwestern, I'd be real happy because I'd be out some place putting bait on my hook," he said.

THE DAILY IOWAN

Sometimes the most important decisions a college football player makes don’t come on the field. Deciding how to balance time between football and academics is something each football player must do. Some players learn how to manage their time wisely, while others don’t.

Sophomore Matt Reischl is one of the players who has learned how to balance his time. Not only is Reischl a starting offensive lineman for the No. 21 Hawkeyes, but the 6-5, 285-pound native of Greendale, Wisc., also has maintained a 4.0 GPA as a finance major.

Reischl, who is the youngest member of the Iowa offensive line, has devoted a good share of his redshirt and freshman seasons to academics. Now he is able to cut back a little bit with his class load in order to concentrate harder on football. “The first couple of years I was here, I just about never went out or did anything, but study or get ready to get back out on the practice field,” Reischl said. “Basically I’ve made a conscious decision to devote a little more time to football. I’m the youngest guy on the line and I think other teams are going to try to pick on me and I’ve got to hold up my part of the unit.”

“Theres a lot of guys who’ve been here busting their butts all year to get where we are and have the chance that we do, and I don’t want to let them down.”

Entering his third academic year with 90 credit hours under his belt, Reischl can afford to slow down a bit with his class load.

The extra attention Reischl has given to football is being noticed by his peers, especially the guy playing beside him, co-captain Ross Verba.

“His first game I thought he really did well. He won the hustle award for the offensive line,” Verba said. “Sometimes he busts assignments, which is normal for any young guy. I’ve been here. But we’re really pleased with him.”

The mental toughness it takes to be a Big Ten football player also carries over to the classroom, but where does a player get the self discipline to study after a hard practice? “I think that home training is the key to that question,” senior defensive end Bill Ennis-Inge said. “How you were raised by your parents or whichever coach raised you as a kid, as well as the coaching staff and other players. When you come here you really realize the situation, why you are here.”

“To be a student first, then an athlete, because your football career is only going to be so long. The faster you as a student-athlete get that through your head, the better off you’re going to be as a student.”

BRAINS AND BRAUN: Lineman Matt Reischl puts an Arizona defender on his back as Tavian Banks rushes the ball in the background. Reischl has a 4.0 GPA in two years at Iowa.

Hawkeye ‘D’ steps it up

Hawkeyes forced five turnovers en route to Arizona victory

Team looks forward to facing Iowa State and tailback Troy Davis

Wayne Drehn
THE DAILY IOWAN

Iowa defensive end Bill Ennis-Inge looked at the scoreboard midway through the second quarter last Saturday against Arizona and found his team down, 7-0.

Something had to be done.

The senior captain proceeded to go around and slap his teammates on the helmet to fire them up. Three plays from scrimmage later, the Hawkeyes were up, 14-7, thanks in part to two turnovers forced by the defense.

“There are times when you have lapses and you know you have to bring the team together,” Ennis-Inge said. “We had to let everybody know that it was going to be all right and we were going to go out there and play great Hawkeye defense.

“That’s what we believe and that’s what we are taught. That’s where we have to be even tighter as a team and come together even more.”

By the games end, the Iowa defense forced four Arizona fumbles, and sacked the Wildcat quarterback duo of Keith Smith and Brady Batten five separate times. Iowa defensive back Tommy Knight also added an interception.

The Hawkeyes success was no surprise to first year defensive coordinator Bob Elliott.

“We expect that effort out of our players,” Elliott said. “If we get that kind of effort, then good things will happen. Whether or not we get that result, we have to keep plugging and hoping things turn out all right.”

Although things turned out just fine against Arizona, there were still some things that the Iowa defense could have improved on. After the Hawkeyes built a 21-7 lead, Arizona scored two field goals and a touchdown unanswered, to close within 21-20.

“We played great team defense against Arizona at times,” Ennis-Inge said. “We need to be more consistent though.”

Coach Elliott agrees with his defensive captain.

“You can always plan things better and there are definitely some things that we didn’t do well,” Elliott said. “On the whole and given the circumstances, I thought our guys played real well and helped us win the game.”

Things won’t get any easier for the Hawkeye defense this weekend as Heisman Trophy finalist Troy Davis scampers into Iowa City with his Cyclones.

Davis averaged 182 yards per carry last season, but was held to 139 yards against Iowa.

“Troy is a tough runner and stays real low to the ground,” linebacker Matt Hughes said.

“He reminds me of Emmitt Smith. I’ll probably remember popping him. I am really looking forward to that.”

The inconsistency in the Iowa defensive attack is due in part to the youth and inexperience in the starting lineup. The linebacker core of Hughes and Vernon Rollins are only sophomores, and the Arizona game was Hughes first start.

The youngsters performed well though, as Hughes notched twelve tackles, while Rollins tallied fourteen tackles and a sack for a 16 yard loss. Both players also had fumble recoveries.

“Troy (Davis) is a tough runner and stays real low to the ground. He reminds me of Emmitt Smith. I’ll probably remember popping him. I am really looking forward to that.”

Matt Hughes, Iowa linebacker

In addition to the play of the linebackers, Fry noted the play of another sophomore, Jared DeVries, as exceptional. DeVries only had six tackles, but three of them were for losses that totaled 20 yards.

“DeVries played an outstanding game and picked up right where he left off after the Sun Bowl game,” Fry added.

While Iowa’s numbers certainly looked good, Elliott admitted that the defense doesn’t center their goals around numbers or individual accolades.

“Our goals deal with how hard we play,” Elliott said. “How much we believe in one another and that type of thing. Our goals are set around intangibles that when put together, will put up good statistical numbers.”

The Iowa defense was predicted to be solid this season, but not exceptional. Continuing the play displayed on Saturday would be more than pleasing to the Iowa coaches and fans alike.

“Hopefully this is the kind of defense we can expect week in and week out,” Ennis-Inge said.

“But for this to happen, we know we have to take advantage of all the practice sessions, film sessions, and really take care of ourselves off the field as well as on the field for that to happen though.”

TWO SPORT STAR

Bashir knows football... and track

Hawkeye Bashir Yamini traded his track spikes for football cleats this fall

Chris Snider

is gold Nike swoosh earing would make even Deion Sanders proud, but it's not just a taste for accessories that Bashir Yamini and the Dallas Cowboys' two-sport star have in common.

After a successful freshman season with the Iowa track and field team, in which he earned indoor Big Ten Freshman of the Year honors, Yamini decided to live out a dream of his and give football a try.

"It has been a dream of mine all my life to play college football and it feels good (to finally be out there)," he said.

Yamini, a 6-4, 160-pound wide receiver from Dolton, Illinois, had an offer to play football at UNLV out of high school, but wanted to compete in the Big Ten.

I talked to (Iowa assistant track coach) Pat McGhee at the start track meet and I started leaning more towards Big Ten schools at that time," Yamini said.

The fact that prep teammate Eric Thigpen (now Iowa’s second-string free safety) was already at Iowa and Ruqayya Rahem, a friend of his, was coming to Iowa to run on the women’s track team, made Yamini seriously consider Iowa.

"We were pretty close in high school," Yamini said of Thigpen.

"When he signed, I pretty much was leaning towards Iowa." So when Iowa offered the Illinois state champion high jumper a track scholarship, he took it. Despite the fact that he was solely running track his freshman year, Yamini never gave up his dreams of playing football for the Hawkeyes.

"I came to watch them practice a few times when I first got here, with the intent and idea to come out and play football," Yamini said. "I kind of wanted to get in, get my foot in the door first and then work my way over to football."

"Physically, he can catch, he can run, he can jump. He’s kind of like a Keyshawn Johnson (of the NFL New York Jets) type player. He’s really smooth in what he does. He’s just so young and inexperienced."

Tim Dwight, Iowa wide receiver about Iowa freshman Bashir Yamini

Track may have been his ticket to Iowa, but football has always been Yamini’s favorite sport.

"I started football first," he said. "Football has always been first. As I got into high school, I started running track. Track came from there, but I always see myself as a football player."

Another person who sees him as a football player; and a pretty good one, is Iowa wide receiver Tim Dwight.

"Physically, he can catch, he can run, he can jump," Dwight said. "He’s kind of like a Keyshawn Johnson (of the NFL New York Jets) type player. He’s really smooth in what he does. He’s just so young and inexperienced."

Although he’s only been with the team since the day school football team’s limit of 85 scholarships, making Yamini more than just you average walk-on.

"He counts against us for any scholarship aid he gets from track, but he’s certainly getting some and for that reason alone, he counts against us."

"It’s pretty much a tough transition. You’ve got to work your way from the bottom to the top," Yamini said. "In doing that, it will build more character for me, to realize you do still have to work on it."

In a time when more and more athletes specialize, Yamini’s decision to play both sports may hurt his performance in one, or both, sports. Indoor track season starts up in mid-January, and practice starts even earlier in the year.

Counting bowl games, football season can last until New Year’s Day and spring football practice falls right in the heart of the track season.

"Logically from a football coaches standpoint, it would be really beneficial to be there throughout spring ball, but the track schedule may not allow that," Patterson said. "We’ll just have to cross that bridge when we come to it."

Yamini may be the one faced with the tough decision when that time comes. His dream was to play college football, but his best bet at stardom may come in track.

Dwight, who ran track at time last season but stopped to focus on spring ball, knows Yamini will not have an easy time balancing both sports in the spring.

"I think he’s not going to be able to put in the time in the off-season because they’re going to want him over there more," Dwight said. "I think it’s good for him that he’s over here. I hope he gets in, in a year or two. I think he can be helpful."

In the end, Yamini thinks his double with help his performance in both sports.

"I don’t think it will hurt me," he said. "I think it will make me better. For one, I think I’ll gain a little more weight and power. That will help me in sprinting and long jump."

"Track and football are like sister schools. They’re both linked. They help each other out."

Yamini playing football may also help the entire Iowa track program. He has already become somewhat of an ambassador between the two sports.

"Some of these guys like to come out for track to improve their speed," he said. "Every once in a while, I ask them if they’re going to come out for indoor, but they pretty much like to come out on their own to better their speed and their quickness."

GAME NOTES

When Iowa State football coach Dan McCarney returns to Iowa City this weekend, it may not be to the well-armed arms of his former mentor, Iowa Coach Hayden Fry.

McCarney, who played football at Iowa and later was an assistant under Fry, turned out to be a major factor in Arizona's success against Iowa last weekend. The Arizona coach shared ideas with other people.

The fact that McCarney would allow such things to happen may have made Fry question the loyalty of his former assistant.

"All I can say is I'm not going to comment," Fry said. "You know how strong I am in my beliefs in something. I'll come with Iowa and later was an defensive staff once went to McCamey.

Iowa State coaches helped

To me, there is no issue," McCarney said. "It's commonplace. Every staff in America shares ideas with other people. Every year that I was at the University of Iowa, we shared ideas, we talked to other teams.

"There's no issue here. We do it all the time. There's no issue against it. It's not unethical." While McCarney said Iowa's defensive staff once went to Kansas to seek help in preparing for Iowa State, Fry said he would never do the same to McCamey.

"If I don't say anything, I would because I wouldn't want Iowa to lose and I wouldn't want Dan to lose," Fry said.

Cyclone defensive line coach Sam Papali is Arizona's connection to ISU. Papali was an assistant to Tommie from 1987-94 at Arizona and from 1983-86 at Hawaii.

College football teams are allowed to exchange tapes of any game they may be playing in. Because Iowa exchanges with Iowa State, Arizona could watch tapes that ISU obtained from Iowa in the past as long as the tapes didn't leave campus.

But the controversy doesn't end there. The question of why
Des helped out Arizona

ues helped out Arizona

UNHAPPY HAYDEN: Iowa football coach Hayden Fry was at a loss for words regarding the fact that his former assistant coach, Iowa State coach Dan McCarney, allowed Arizona coaches to study Iowa game tapes on the Iowa State campus.

Iowa and Arizona never swapped tapes has led to Fry-bashing by the Tucson media.

Iowa and Arizona never swapped tapes has led to Fry-bashing by the Tucson media.

Greg Hanson of the Arizona Daily Star said in his column on Monday, "Hayden Fry's refusal to give Arizona coaches any game tapes of the 95 Hawkeyes was an unforgivable breach of coaching protocol."

Hanson later referred to Fry as "the Iowa dictator."

Fry admits he refused to give Arizona tapes, but insisted it was only after Arizona did the same nearly two months earlier.

Cyclones look to end Iowa’s streak

Iowa State brings talented offense into Kinnick Stadium

Young defense looks to slow down Iowa attack

Chris Snider
THE DAILY IOWAN

Despite 13 straight losses at the hands of the Iowa, the Iowa State Cyclones are not about to concede

"We’ve got a huge challenge ahead," Iowa State Coach Dan McCarney said. "They’re talented, they’re experienced, they’re tough, they’re confident. They’re coming off a great win over a real outstanding Arizona team. We know it’s a major, major challenge for this program to go over and play the Hawkeyes."

For McCarney, this game marks the first time he returns to Kinnick Stadium as a head coach. McCarney played at Iowa and later was an assistant coach for the Hawkeyes.

"It will be a great feeling. But this game will not be about Hayden Fry and Dan McCarney or Troy Davis and Sedrick Shaw," he said, referring to each team’s outstanding running back.

"It’s about two great institutions in the same state and I’m very proud to be a part of this rivalry. It’s great to be back and a part of this thing. The people in the state take it very seriously."

Despite a disappointing overtime loss to Wyoming last week, the Cyclones will undoubtedly be ready for the Hawkeyes. Iowa State brings perhaps their most explosive offense in those 13 years into Kinnick Stadium this weekend.

"They’re so much more balanced," Iowa Coach Hayden Fry said.

"They’ve got a greatly improved passing attack. They’ve still got that Heisman trophy guy in the backfield and quarterback Todd Doxzson also. I just thought he looked outstanding against Wyoming."

The Iowa State offense starts with Troy Davis. Davis rushed for 146 yards on 35 carries against Wyoming, while racking up 223 all-purpose yards.

"He’s so short and solid and mobile. You can’t arm tackle him. He’s got great vision. His change of direction is phenomenal," Fry said.

"This year, they’ve got more weapons that we’ve got to be prepared for, but he is the biggest weapon that they have, although based on one game, Doxzson looked awful good. I was extremely impressed with Doxzson."

Doxzon threw for 225 yards last week, connecting on 17-of-22 passes. He threw one touchdown down to go with his one interception. Seven of his passes went to split end Ed Williams, who totaled 82 yards receiving. Protecting Davis and Doxzson is an offensive line that averages 292 pounds and has 13 years of experience.

"I’m very impressed with their offensive line," Fry said. "They’re big guys. They were good last year and they’re better this year. Of course with Troy rushing for 2,000 yards, they’ve got to be good."

"They’ve got a huge offensive line that we consider to be one of the very best offensive lines we’ll face all year," Bill Ennis-Large added. "So, (the offense) has got no weaknesses as far as I can see."

Iowa State brings a fairly young defense into the game. The Cyclones list just one senior starter on the defensive side of the ball, to go with three freshmen, two sophomores and five juniors.

"Their defense is young right now, but they’re awfully talented," Iowa quarterback Matt Sherman said.

"They have speed now that they haven’t had a couple years ago. This is a big ballgame for us. We’re looking at it just like Ohio State-Penn State, simply because that’s the type of game it is. We’ll have our work cut out for us."

Although he would have liked to start the season with a win, McCarney was pleased with his team’s effort against Wyoming.

"We scored 36 points. We’re very happy with that," he said. "The way we started the game, how fast we started I thought was good. We held Wyoming under 100 yards rushing. We forced three turnovers and only had one. Overall, our special teams were very good."

"We had 18 kids hit the field for the first time and I think all those kids did a nice job making that adjustment and getting past the opening game jitters every young man has when he steps on the field for the first time."

Authors looking for Iowa City ‘Madness’

Mike Triplett
THE DAILY IOWAN

They dialed up the Paternos and talked to Coach Joe’s wife Sue for 40 minutes during their visit to Penn State. That was in between visits to the Rathskeller bar, of course.

Tailing on the Bayou on Saturday night before an LSU football game was only slightly better than Saturday afternoon on the Bayou and Friday night on the Bayou.

They even pitched a tent in the pouring rain in front of the Cameroon Indoor Stadium at Duke, fighting off cops to catch a glimpse of Coach K.

And this weekend, a trip to Iowa City will hopefully provide a few more highlights from the college football adventures of Bob Waldstein, Phil Silverman and Bill Fowles.

Waldstein, who co-authored the book, “Saturday Afternoon Madness” with Silverman, is currently in Iowa City with Fowles, his partner for a planned second book, “Saturday Afternoon Madness II: Glutrons for Punishment.”

Both books focus on a season-long adventure to 16 of the top college football campuses and the fanfare leading up to Saturday’s games.

“We’re trying to uncover what makes the Iowa football experience special,” Waldstein explained. “For me, the perfect book would be to have 12 chapters and have each chapter be an argument for why that place is the single most unique place to watch college football.

But, as Waldstein explained, there must be more to the college football experience than just drinking.

“After Penn State is when we realized, we can’t drink every night,” Waldstein said. “We drank every single night at Penn State, literally, we were drunk the whole time. And we’re not real big drinkers.”

Penn State was the first weekend stay of the original road trip. But Waldstein and Silverman had trouble topping that experience throughout the rest of the journey.

While there, they decided to give the first family of State College a call, since the Paternos happen to be listed in the telephone directory.

“I’ve called it a bunch of times actually,” Waldstein admitted.

Iowa will be the third Big Ten campus for Waldstein, who also plans to hit Wisconsin, Ohio State and Northwestern on this trip with Fowles.

On the first trip, Big Ten schools got mixed reviews. Waldstein and Silverman went from State College to Ann Arbor, Mich., where things all seemed to fall apart.

“We had a great time at the Rathskeller, made a ton of friends and just had an awesome time at Penn State,” Waldstein said. “Then we get to Michigan and the limo starts to break down. We get no cooperation at Michigan, nothing works out. And we left Michigan thinking, ‘this place sucks.’”

Waldstein has since warmed to Ann Arbor. On a recent trip, he allowed students to decorate the hood of his beat up Lincoln with the Wolverines’ logo.

But when asked what some of his favorite excerpts from the first trip were, Waldstein said to just read the chapter on LSU. The book lists Saturday night on the Bayou as one of the 10 college football events to witness before you die and they say it’s college football’s greatest tailgate.

Of course, not all the journey’s highlights dealt strictly with football. Waldstein coerced Silverman into a 250-mile sidetrack to his alma mater, Duke.

“We couldn’t just go and watch basketball all afternoon,” Waldstein said. “We had to go early in the morning in front of the Krzyzewski building and set up a tent, because I wanted to get the full glory of Duke basketball.

It was raining and pouring the whole time and the cops came and told us we had to take the tent down. Phil told them it was an anti-apartheid protest. And they believed us and just kind of walked away.”

Waldstein said Krzyzewski eventually came out and signed a basketball. Coach K didn’t seem to mind the tent, but he was very upset that the duo’s used limo (the original car of choice) was parked in two spots.

Iowa continues intrastate dominance

Iowa 42, Iowa State 13

The chances of Iowa losing to Iowa State in football are about as good as the UI canceling classes. It rarely happens.

For the past thirteen years, Iowa State has tried everything under the sun to beat the Hawkeyes, but came up with nary a victory.

This season, the Cyclones bring one of the most talented teams they have had in the past decade to Kinnick. The reason Arizona was able to do right or wrong Iowa's strengths, weaknesses and tendency's better than half Iowa last week to have such success against Iowa's defense doesn't have the speed and talent that Arizona has, and won't be able to shut down Iowa's potent offensive attack.

And no matter how much Iowa State knows about Iowa, you can bet Iowa coach Hayden Fry and his staff know as much or more about the Cyclones.

If Fry knows one thing, it's how to beat the clones. He's done it 14 times in 17 meetings.

All eyes will be on Sedrick Shaw and Heisman candidate Troy Davis when the talk subsides and the actual game begins. Davis rushed for over 2,000 yards last year, but there are plenty of people in Iowa City and the state who think Shaw is the better back.

Only time will tell for sure, but we should get a good indication this weekend.

The better battle could come between Iowa quarterback Matt Sherman and Iowa State signal caller Todd Doxzon. With both defenses keying on the other team's tailback, Sherman and Doxzon could have easy pickin's of open receivers.

One thing is for sure, Iowa wide receiver Tim Dwight will have a big game against the Cyclones. Dwight caught only four passes for 15 yards last weekend, and had another pass go right through his hands.

Dwight is too good of a player and too much of a competitor to have two straight sub-par performances. And you can guarantee the Iowa City native will be geared up to lay into a few Cyclones.

Any time you have beaten a team as many times in a row as Iowa has beaten Iowa State, you run the risk of a let down.

Had Iowa not looked less than impressive last week against Arizona, that may have been a problem, but the Hawkeyes are still hungry to show the world (and a fairly disappointed student section) that they are the most explosive team we all saw in the Sun Bowl and expected to see this season.

Believe it or not, every Iowa State fan I have talked to in the past year has told me this is the year Iowa State will win. It looks like they've been serving extra helpings of false hope in the ISU cafeteria.

Chris James

Ball State at Minnesota.

Sentences never spoken before in the history of the English language. Minnesota dismantled Northeast Louisiana, 30-3, last weekend behind freshman running back Thomas Hammer’s 154 yards rushing. Scary, but it’s true.

The Cardinals will make sure that phrase is never uttered again. Ball State was fourth in the nation in total defense last season, giving up only 250 yards per game. But the Gophers will air it out behind junior QB Cory Sauter, who has a career completion percentage over 60 percent. Minnesota, 21-10.

Miami (Ohio) at Indiana.

The Hoosiers looked tough in their 40-6 stomping of Toledo last week and guess what? They get to return to a place where they are 0-3 lifetime. Granted, the winner of this game should be who gets their medical degree first, but Duke will be pumped up just like Wake Forest was. Northwestern will have to improve on defense, where they gave up only 110 yards per game last season.

Redskin outside linebacker Dee Osborne (126 tackles in ’95) will look to tomahawk Smith and the rest of the Indiana offense. Too bad it’s the Hoosiers that will be on the warpath. Indiana, 30-14.

Northwestern at Duke.

The Wildcats were smoked on Tobacco road last weekend and guess what? They get to return to a place where they are 5-1 lifetime. If they personally hold on to the ball after turning it over 5 times against Iowa, the Wildcats will be in good shape. Arizona, 10-3.

Purdue at Notre Dame.

The Fighting Irish are lucky to escape Vanderbilt with a win when Purdue hasn’t recovered from the 52-14 pasting Michigan State laid on them. Boilermaker quarterback Billy Dicken will have to take pressure of a ground attack that only had averages 2.6 yards per carry.

Purdue’s uniforms look like Vanderbilt’s. Yikes.

Notre Dame, 38-3.

Wisconsin at UNLV.

Badger coach Barry Alvarez better not bet on a win as the Badgers attempt to improve on their mediocre 6-5 all time record vs. WAC teams. Wisconsin looked lackluster in their 24-3 victory over Eastern Michigan last week. The only bright spot for Wisconsin was Carl McCullough’s 107 yard rushing performance.

If the Rebels Tony Burton (880 yards in ’95) runs wild, it could be craps for the Badgers in the desert.

Wisconsin, 19-17.

Illinois at Arizona.

The Illini just can’t get a break. After they personally reinstated confidence in USC’s football program last week with a 55-3 loss, they now get a Wildcat team that played their butts off, only to lose by one. Illinois’s defense is going to have to play well, but if Arizona holds on to the ball after turning it over 5 times against Iowa, the Wildcats will be in good shape. Arizona, 10-3.

Northern Illinois at Penn State.

Penn State will get a wake up call if they play like they did last week in a 24-7 win over Louisville. Starting quarterback Wally Richardson threw two more interceptions and Curtis Enis rushed for only 104 yards. Things will have to click better when 1,500 yard runner Charles Talley comes to town.

Penn State, 32-17.

Michigan at Colorado.

The miracle win by the Buffaloes in ’94 will be in the back of the Wolverines mind as Michigan makes its first trip to Boulder since 1974. Michigan’s had two weeks off to prepare for this game, but playing Illinois doesn’t count as having a game under your belt.

Colorado blitzed Colorado State for 48 points last week and that’s where there the real matchup lies, Michigan’s defense vs. Colorado’s offense.

Michigan’s defense is for real, boasting two all-American linebackers and a secondary that makes receivers update their life insurance policies. It will keep the game close. But Buffalo QB Roy Detmer knows how to win.

Colorado, 27-23.
