The second minds of some UI students are turning to the idea of a week off to rest and relax before the holiday season. The Student Union Governing Board has approved a proposal to add an extra week to the end of the fall semester, in which pre-cultural week activities will be programmed with student activities in mind. Actor, knight joins Queen's Order of Merit

(MORE) -- A busy actor recently added a new honor to his list: Sir John Gielgud has been knighted for his contribution to the arts.

Gielgud was appointed a Companion of the Order of Merit (COM) by the Queen on the occasion of her Golden Coronation.

The only other actor to have been appointed to the Order of Merit was the late Laurence Olivier. Most honours are given in the names of the Queen's relatives or her close friends when they are elevated to the peerage by the government, but the Order of Merit is a unique gift to the monarch.

It is understood 24 people at any one time.

The queen chose the 80-year-old Oscar winner to fill the vacancy created by the death of Frank Whittle, a British jet engine inventor.

"I am very surprised and very much honored," Gielgud said Monday.

Gielgud, who was knighted in 1913, has lived in London since 1968. He has a high standing in the world of theatre and film, and is one of Britain's most distinguished stage and film actors.

His work has included roles in such classic films as "Hamlet," "The Three Musketeers," and "Gandhi," and he has received numerous awards and nominations for his performances.

France's new National Library to be named Mitterrand

France - France's con- troversial and expensive new National Library will be named after the man who commissioned it, President Francois Mitterrand.

The state-run library will open next week, and President Jacques Chirac will name it on Monday.

Mitterrand stepped down after 14 years in office in 1995. But the 79-year-old visited the site last week to see the building's completion.

The 133,000-square-foot library, which he described as "a great honor," will be a replacement for the library's stock of 7 million books.

Reward announced for information on rapist

The family of a UI student who reported to police that she was raped in the early morning hours of Sept. 21, has offered a $50,000 reward for information leading to arrest and conviction of the assailant.

The events occurred in the residence hall on University of Iowa Evenings campus, near the corner of 14th Street and East Washington Street.

The victim, a 21-year-old UI student, did not wish to provide her name or any information about the rape in the newspaper.

The family asked that interested individuals contact them at (319) 326-7606.

The family said they believed the assailant would be an individual who frequents the downtown area.

The family is willing to discuss the case with any law enforcement agency.

Solution to gang problems lies with parents

As a gang problem in the Iowa City-Coralville area continues, newspaper reports indicate that the average age for gang members to become involved in these groups has dropped to the eighth-grade level. This is a grave problem, especially when you consider that the majority of young people are the most vulnerable, they are exposed to a youthful form of violence. In the mid- to late-1980s, there was a number of juvenile gang incidents in various rural counties across the United States. As law enforcement officials increased their efforts to break up these gangs, the leaders of these groups took flight into the rural areas to continue their operations. It is important to note that these rural areas are prime recruitment stops on the gangland missions.

Fights in the high schools that may or may not be gang related have increased significantly. There are strong indications that some people think gang activity is on the rise among area young people. They are probably correct. Are gangs a problem? The answer you get depends on who you ask. Law enforcement officials say the situation is becoming critical. They call it a "ticking time bomb." Parents say the schools are filled with gang activity. Some say there are no kids without gang ties. They are probably correct.

Graffiti influx is another indicator of the "growing problem," "Graffiti activity is on the rise among area young people," "Graffiti are strong indicators that some people think gang activity is on the rise among area young people," "Graffiti influx is a prime indicator of the gangland mission."

The basic idea is to break the code. If you know you have won, you will not call the police when they threaten you. If you know you have won, you will not join the gang. If you know you have won, you will not use drugs. If you know you have won, you will not carry a gun. If you know you have won, you will not have sex with a child. If you know you have won, you will not use violence.

Rules

A book geared toward men and women, beware. The book has received so much hype, the "Rules" girls are the most most popular group in the city. They are the most... Adulterous girls are having babies with gang members. They are probably correct.

Field Hockey coach defends her comments

To the Editor:

I am writing in regards of a response to a letter by Dr. Larson recently published in your newspaper regarding comments made by me following the field hockey game between the University of Iowa and Pennsylvania State University in response to the letter. I have the following comments.

It is important to note that I am not referring to the specific incident that took place on Tuesday, but I will discuss the general issue. The incident occurred during a game against Pennsylvania State University. The situation was serious and required a response.

In general, I believe that our team performance was strong and we should be proud of our achievements. However, I acknowledge that there were some areas for improvement. Our team needs to work on improving our defense, particularly in our corner of the field. We also need to continue to work on our communication and teamwork.

There is no doubt that our team possesses the talent and ability to compete at a high level. Our players are motivated and dedicated. We will continue to work hard and strive to improve in all areas of the game.

Thank you for your interest and your continued support of our team. We look forward to the upcoming season and hope to compete at a high level.

Sincerely,

Without lawyers, the jocks' on you

by Karrie Higgins

Hockey jocks have come to bear. Along with all the other jocks, O.S. jocks are, for the lack of a better word, no brains. Before we explore that negligible talent, however, let's get to the basic: law.

If "The Code," a popular novel about sex, is an accurate portrayal of the law, then we are in trouble. The novel tells the story of a man who, after being arrested for rape, hires a lawyer who tells him, "If you don't want to go to jail for what you've done, you damn well had better go back and talk to the police." The lawyer's advice is based on the premise that sex is not a crime in and of itself, but rather that consent is required. Thus, if the victim declined to engage in sexual activity, then the defendant would be guilty of rape.

To the Editor:

If "The Code," as popular as it may be, is an accurate portrayal of the law, then we are in trouble. The novel tells the story of a man who, after being arrested for rape, hires a lawyer who tells him, "If you don't want to go to jail for what you've done, you damn well had better go back and talk to the police." The lawyer's advice is based on the premise that sex is not a crime in and of itself, but rather that consent is required. Thus, if the victim declined to engage in sexual activity, then the defendant would be guilty of rape. This is a profoundly disturbing message, as it implies that sexual activity is a criminal act unless consent is given. It is a message that promotes violence and coercion, and it is one that is not in line with the principles of justice.

Because our society has a history of violence and power imbalances, it is important that we have a legal system that is designed to protect the rights of all individuals. The law should be a system of justice, not a system of punishment. It should be a system that is designed to protect the rights of all individuals, not to punish those who have committed crimes.

In conclusion, "The Code" is a dangerous and disturbing novel that promotes violence and coercion. It is not a portrayal of the law that we should support. Instead, we should work to create a legal system that is designed to protect the rights of all individuals, not to punish those who have committed crimes.

Yours sincerely,

[Name]

P.S. It is worth noting that "The Code" is not the only novel that portrays the law in a negative light. Many other novels, such as "The Godfather" and "The Sopranos," also present the law in a negative light. These novels are not alone in promoting a negative view of the law.

Without lawyers, the jocks' on you.
New technology may see driver’s licenses replace car keys

WASHINGTON — Instead of putting a key into the car’s ignition, you would just use your license. That’s what Monday asked the public for help in identifying the man who called to warn police that a bomb was about to go off.

The FBI offered a reward of up to $10,000 for information leading to the arrest and conviction of the man who called to warn police that a bomb was about to go off.

“We’ve made a lot of progress in this investigation,” FBI Director Louis Freeh said last week, but he still continues to seek the public’s assistance,” he said.

Meanwhile, NBC reported that the White House on Monday asked the public for help in finding the perpetrator of a bomb attack in the nation’s capital.

The FBI enlists public’s help in finding perpetrator

FBI Director Louis Freeh said Monday that there were other cases that had been solved by information coming from the public.

“We have found that the public is the key to solving these cases,” Freeh said.

On Monday, the FBI arrested a suspect in the bombing, over a congressional map that features racial districting efforts aimed at maximizing efforts in a series of decisions since 1993, ruling drawing districts to enhance the voting clout of racial minorities.

The court has frowned upon such efforts in a series of decisions since 1993, ruling drawing districts to enhance the voting clout of racial minorities.

Corporations use ‘soft money’ to play political hardball

Jim Drucker

WASHINGTON — When illegal political contributions are found in the mail, the Justice Department is likely to arrest the culprit who mailed them. But when huge sums of money pour into state and national political campaigns without a trace, the law seems powerless to stop the flow.

In a November 12 story based on a Senate report released Monday by the Government Accounting Office, the Justice Department was criticized for not acting to stop the illegal money flow. The report said the department had failed to investigate potential criminal violations of the Bipartisan Campaign Reform Act of 1998.

In response, the Justice Department said it had “never been the policy” to investigate such cases, and that it was “not our responsibility to do so.”

The report, released by the department’s Inspector General, found that the Justice Department had not taken any action to investigate the potential criminal violations.

The Justice Department said it had received complaints from Congress and the public about the flow of illegal money into political campaigns, but it had not taken any action to investigate the complaints.

The report also found that the Justice Department had not taken any action to develop a strategy for investigating potential criminal violations.

The report recommended that the Justice Department develop a strategy for investigating potential criminal violations of the Bipartisan Campaign Reform Act of 1998.

The Justice Department said it would review the report and develop a strategy for investigating potential criminal violations.

The report said the Justice Department should consider setting up a task force to investigate potential criminal violations of the Bipartisan Campaign Reform Act of 1998.

The report said the Justice Department should also consider increasing its staffing to investigate potential criminal violations of the Bipartisan Campaign Reform Act of 1998.

The report noted that the Justice Department has not been proactive in investigating potential criminal violations of the Bipartisan Campaign Reform Act of 1998.

The report said the Justice Department should consider increased funding for its investigations of potential criminal violations of the Bipartisan Campaign Reform Act of 1998.

The report said the Justice Department should consider increased cooperation with other law enforcement agencies to investigate potential criminal violations of the Bipartisan Campaign Reform Act of 1998.

The report said the Justice Department should also consider increased public awareness campaigns to inform the public about the potential criminal violations of the Bipartisan Campaign Reform Act of 1998.
It doesn't make much sense for students to overcharge their credit cards in order to take out personal loans or relieve some of the stress of never having a job. It's because I graduated last time, I didn't have any money at all, and I had to pay the bills. I think it's a hassle to get loans for gifts, and some students wouldn't use that. They should show us what (the teacher's) questions for a course evaluation. It's because I graduated last time, I didn't have any money at all, and I had to pay the bills.
